PREFACE

*Nor will I tire thy patience with a train
Of preface.*

DRYDEN. Georgics, Book 2.

THE first edition of this Book of Quotations—which had been the result of twenty years of continuous research—was issued in 1907. It was kindly received by the Press and by the public, and secured a world-wide sale. Since that date several further editions have appeared, with certain additions and minor improvements, these, however, being restricted by the necessity for utilizing the original plates (with adjustments), in order to avoid the delay and the heavy cost of an entire re-setting of the type. In the present edition the book has been completely revised and entirely re-set, and some 10,000 additional quotations and proverbs have been introduced. Thanks to the typographical methods now adopted, greater economy of space has been attained, and by this means the very substantial enlargement of the contents has been effected without any inconvenient addition to the bulk of the volume.

The index has been entirely re-cast and considerably enlarged. It has been improved by the introduction of Subject headings in addition to the full verbal index. To facilitate reference each page of the text of the book has been divided into two portions (a and b).

It will be noted that in the text the dates of the more important works quoted are given. This information, in conjunction with the index, will assist students who desire to elucidate the origin of quotations or sayings.

The method of arrangement in this collection—under authors' names rather than under subject classification—will be approved, I believe, by all literary people. At the same time it must be admitted that there are obvious conveniences in a subject classification, and this desideratum is secured, in the present volume, by the very ample Subject Groups which will be found in the index.

From time to time many correspondents in Great Britain and in the United States have favoured me with valuable suggestions, additions, and emendations. I shall be most grateful for such assistance, in the form of additional references, notes, corrections, or improvements generally, for use in future editions.

ABBOTT, Wenonah Stevens (b. 1865)
Behind is life and its longing,
Its trial, its trouble, its sorrow :
Beyond is the Infinite Morning
Of a day without a to-morrow.
A Soul's Soliloquy.

ADAMS, Chas. Follett (d. 1918)
But ven he vash asleep in ped,
So quiet as a mouse,
I prays der Lord, "Dake anyding,
But leaf dot Yawcob Strauss."
Yawcob Strauss.

ADAMS, John, President U.S.A.
(1735-1826)
The declaration that our people are hostile to a government made by themselves, and for themselves, and conducted by themselves, is an insult.
Address (1798). Westmoreland Co., Virginia.

ADAMS, Sarah Flower (1805-1848)
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee ;
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me.

ADCOCK, Arthur St. John (b. 1864)
If beauty lived for ever, it would die ;
And seen for ever would be seen no more.
Cup-bearer.

ADDISON, Joseph (1672-1719)
The great, th' important day, big with the fate
Of Cato and of Rome.
Cato (1713). Act i. 1.

Thy steady temper, Portius,
Can look on guilt, rebellion, fraud, and Cæsar,
In the calm lights of mild philosophy. Ib.
Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cause
Of honour, virtue, liberty and Rome. Ib.
Love is not to be reasoned down, or lost,
In high ambition and a thirst of greatness ;
Tis second life, it grows into the soul. Ib.

B.Q.

1b

'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius, we'll deserve
it. Act i. 2.

Your cold hypocrisy's a stale device,
A worn out trick ; would'st thou be thought in earnest ?
Clothe thy feigned zeal in rage, in fire, in fury ! Act i. 3.

'Tis not my talent to conceal my thoughts,
Or carry smiles and sunshine in my face,
When discontent sits heavy at my heart.
Act i. 4.

And if, the following day, he chance to find
A new repast, or an untasted spring,
Blesses his stars, and thinks it luxury. Ib.

The pale unripened beauties of the north.
Ib.
My voice is still for war. Act ii. 1.

A day, an hour of virtuous liberty,
Is worth a whole eternity in bondage. Ib.

When Liberty is gone,
Life grows insipid, and has lost its relish.
Act ii. 3.

Chains or conquest, liberty or death.
Act ii. 4.

Young men soon give, and soon forget affronts :
Old age is slow in both. Act ii. 5.

When love's well timed, 'tis not a fault to love,
The strong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wise,
Sink in the soft captivity together.
Act iii. 1.

Then do not strike him dead with a denial,
But hold him up in life, and cheer his soul
With the faint glimmering of a doubtful hope.
Act iii. 2.

When love once pleads admission to our hearts,
In spite of all the virtue we can boast,
The woman that deliberates is lost.
Act iv. 1.

Curse on his virtues ! they've undone his country ;
Such popular humanity is treason.
Act iv. 4.

Falsehood and fraud shoot up on every soil,
The product of all climes. Ib.

When vice prevails, and impious men bear sway,
The post of honour is a private station. Ib.

Once more farewell!
If e'er we meet hereafter, we shall meet
In happier climes, and on a safer shore. Ib.

It must be so,—Plato, thou reasonest well!—
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,

This longing after immortality? Act v. 1.

Eternity, thou pleasing, dreadful thought. Ib.

Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wrecks of matter, and the crash of worlds. Ib.

He knows not how to wink at human frailty,
Or pardon weakness that he never felt.

Act v. 4.

Whilst I yet live, let me not live in vain. Ib.

The best may err. Ib.

From hence, let fierce contending nations know

What dire effects from civil discord flow. Ib.

Here swarthy Charles appears, and there
His brother with dejected air.

To Sir Godfrey Kneller.

That is well said, John, an honest man,
that is not quite sober, has nothing to fear.

The Drummer (1715). Act i. 1.

I should think myself a very bad woman
if I had done what I do for a farthing less.

Ib.

We are growing serious, and, let me tell you, that's the very next step to being dull.*

Act iv. 6.

There is nothing more requisite in business than despatch. Act v. 1.

Critics in rust. Dialogue.—Ancient Medals.

To have a relish for ancient coins, it is necessary to have a contempt for the modern.

Ib.

They are all of them men of concealed fire, that doth not break out with noise and heat in the ordinary circumstances of life, but shows itself sufficiently in all great enterprises that require it.

The Present State of the War (1707).

He more had pleased us had he pleased us less.

English Poets.

(Referring to Cowley.)

For wheresoe'er I turn my ravished eyes,
Gay gilded scenes and shining prospects rise;

Poetic fields encompass me around,
And still I seem to tread on classic ground.

Letter from Italy (1704).

How has kind heaven adorned the happy land,
And scattered blessings with a wasteful hand!
Ib.

A painted meadow, or a purling stream. Ib.

Unbounded courage and compassion joined,
Tempering each other in the victor's mind,
Alternately proclaim him good and great,
And make the hero and the man complete.

The Campaign (1704).

Rides in the whirlwind, and directs the storm. Ib.

Such easy greatness, such a graceful port,
So turned and finished for the camp or court! Ib.

And those who paint them truest, praise them most.* Ib.

Music, the greatest good that mortals know,
And all of heaven we have below.

Song for St. Cecilia's Day. St. 3.

Nothing is capable of being well set to music that is not nonsense.

The Spectator (1711–1714). Vol. 1, No. 18.
March 21, 1711.

A perfect Tragedy is the noblest production of human nature. No. 39.

The seeds of punning are in the minds of all men, and though they may be subdued by reason, reflection, and good sense, they will be very apt to shoot up in the greatest genius. No. 61.

In all thy humours, whether grave or mellow,
Thou'rt such a touchy, testy, pleasant
fellow,

Hast so much wit and mirth and spleen
about thee,

There is no living with thee or without thee
No. 68. Tr. of Marital, Epig., Bk. 12, 47.
See "Difficilis, facilis."

There is not so variable a thing in Nature as a lady's head-dress. Vol. 2, No. 98 (1711).

Every one that has been long dead has a due proportion of praise allotted him, in which, whilst he lived, his friends were too profuse and his enemies too sparing.

No. 101.

Sunday clears away the rust of the whole week. No. 112.

Sir Roger told them, with the air of a man who would not give his judgment rashly, that much might be said on both sides.

No. 122.

The knight is a much stronger Tory in the country than in town. No. 126.

Softly speak and sweetly smile.
Vol. 3, No. 229 (Tr. from Boileau).

There is nothing in Nature so irksome as general discourses. Vol. 4, No. 267 (1712).

* Borrowed from Congreve, q.v.

* Cf. Pope, "He best can paint them who can feel them most."

3a

I have often thought, says Sir Roger, it happens very well that Christmas should fall out in the middle of winter. No. 269.

These widows, sir, are the most perverse creatures in the world. Vol. 5, No. 335.

Melancholy is a kind of demon that haunts our island, and often conveys herself to us in an easterly wind. No. 387.

For oh! Eternity's too short
To utter all thy praise.

*Vol. 6, No. 453. Hymn,
"When all thy mercies."*

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heavens, a shining frame,
Their great Original proclaim. Ode. No. 465.

Soon as the evening shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And nightly to the listening earth
Repeats the story of her birth. Ib.

And spread the truth from pole to pole. Ib.

For ever singing as they shine,
"The Hand that made us is divine." Ib.

A woman seldom asks advice before she has bought her wedding clothes. Vol. 7, No. 475.

He dances like an angel . . . He is always laughing, for he has an infinite deal of wit. Ib.

Our disputants put me in mind of the scuttle-fish, that when he is unable to extricate himself, blackens the water about him till he becomes invisible.

The Spectator. Vol. 7, No. 476.

I value my garden more for being full of blackbirds than of cherries, and very frankly give them fruit for their songs. No. 477.

There is nothing truly valuable which can be purchased without pains and labour.

The Tatler (1709-11). No. 97.

I remember when our whole island was shaken with an earthquake some years ago, there was an impudent mountebank who sold pills, which, as he told the country people, were very good against an earthquake. No. 240.

AKENSIDE, Mark (1721-1770)

Where Truth deigns to come,
Her sister Liberty will not be far.

*Pleasures of the Imagination (1744).
Book 1, 23.*

Such and so various are the tastes of men. Book 3, 567.

Milton's golden lyre.
Ode on a Sermon against Glory.

The man forget not, though in rags he lies,
And know the mortal through a crown's disguise.

Epistle to Curio. 197.

3b

Seeks painted trifles and fantastic toys,
And eagerly pursues imaginary joys. The Virtuoso. 10.

Youth calls for Pleasure, Pleasure calls for Love. Love: An Elegy.

ALBERY, James (1838-1889)

He slept beneath the moon,
He basked beneath the sun;
He lived a life of going-to-do,
And died with nothing done.
Epitaph. Said to have been written for himself.

ALDRICH, James (1810-1856)

Her suffering ended with the day;
Yet lived she at its close,
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.* A Death-bed.

But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
She passed through Glory's morning gate,
And walked in Paradise. Ib.

ALDRICH, Thos. Bailey (1836-1907)

Somewhere in desolate, wind-swept space,
In shadow-land, in no man's land,
Two hurrying forms met face to face,
And bade each other stand.
"And who are you?" said one agape,
Shuddering in the gloaming light:
"I know not," said the other shape,
"I only died last night." Identity.

ALDRIDGE, Henry (or ALDRICH), Dean of Christchurch (1647-1710)

If on my theme I rightly think,
There are five reasons why men drink—
Good wine, a friend, because I'm dry,
Or lest I should be by and by,
Or any other reason why.†

ALEXANDER, Sir William, Earl of Stirling (see Stirling)

ALISON, Richard (fl. c. 1606)

There is a garden in her face,
Where roses and white lilies grow.
An Hour's Recreation in Music.

There cherries grow that none can buy,
Till cherry-ripe themselves do cry. Ib.

ALLINGHAM, William (1824-1889)

Now autumn's fire burns slowly along the woods,
And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt.
Autumnal Sonnet.

* See Hood.

† Translated from a Latin epigram said to be by Père Sirmond (Sixteenth Century):—
Si bene commemini, causæ sunt quinque bibendi
Hospitis adventus; præsens sitis atque futura;
Et vini bonitas, aut qualibet altera causa.
Given in Isaac J. Reeve's Wild Garland, v. 2.

His blissful soul was in Heaven, though a breathing man was he :
He was out of time's dominion, so far as the living may be. Poems.

ALLSTON, Washington. (1779-1843)

Yet, still, from either beach,
The voice of blood shall reach,
More audible than speech,
"We are one!"

America to Great Britain.ANSTEY, Christopher (1724-1805)

If ever I ate a good supper at night,
I dreamed of the Devil, and waked in a fright. The New Bath Guide (1766).

Letter 4.—A Consultation of the Physicians.

Granta, sweet Granta, where, studious of ease, Seven years did I sleep, and then lost my degrees. Epilogue.

ARBLAY, Madame d' (see Burney, F.)ARBUTHNOT, John, M.D. (1667-1735)

Law is a bottomless Pit.

Title of Pamphlet (1712).ARMSTRONG, John, M.D. (1710-1779)

Th' athletic fool, to whom what Heaven denied

Of soul, is well compensated in limbs.

Art of Preserving Health (1744).Bk. 3, l. 206.

For want of timely care
Millions have died of medicable wounds.
l. 519.

Virtuous and wise he was, but not severe;
He still remembered that he once was young.
Bk. 4, l. 226.

Much had he read,
Much more had seen; he studied from the life,
And in th' original perused mankind.
l. 231.

Distrust yourself, and sleep before you fight.
'Tis not too late to-morrow to be brave.
l. 456.

Music exalts each joy, allays each grief,
Expels diseases, softens every pain,
Subdues the rage of poison and of plague.
l. 510.

ARNE, Thos. Augustine (1710-1778)

Britain's best bulwarks are her wooden walls.
Britain's Best Bulwarks.

ARNOLD, Sir Edwin (1832-1904)

We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest, and rest can never find;
Lo! as the wind is, so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.
The Deva's Song to Prince Siddârtha.

Pity and need

Make all flesh kin. There is no caste in blood,
Which runneth of one hue; nor caste in tears,
Which trickle salt with all.

The Light of Asia (1879). Bk. 6.

Shall any gazer see with mortal eyes,
Or any searcher know by mortal mind?
Veil after veil will lift—but there must be Veil upon veil behind. Bk. 8.

Nor ever once ashamed,So we be named

Press-men; Slaves of the Lamp; Servants of Light.

The Tenth Muse. St. 18.

One can be a soldier without dying, and a lover without sighing.

Adzuma (1893). Act ii. 5.ARNOLD, Matthew (1822-1888)

The barren optimistic sophistries
Of comfortable moles.

To a Republican Friend.

France, famed in all great arts, in none supreme. Ib., Continued.

Time, so complained of,
Who to no one man
Shows partiality,
Brings round to all men
Some undimmed hours.

Consolation.

Others abide our question. Thou art free.
We ask and ask; thou smilest and art still,
Out-topping knowledge. Shakespeare.

The seeds of godlike power are in us still;
Gods are we, bards, saints, heroes, if we will.
Written in Emerson's Essays.

But so many books thou redest,
But so many schemes thou breedest,
But so many wishes feedest,
That thy poor head almost turns.

The Second Best.

Yet they, believe me, who await
No gifts from chance, have conquered fate.
Resignation.

Curled minion, dancer, coiner of sweet words.
Sohrab and Rustum (1853).

Truth sits upon the lips of dying men. Ib.

Their ineffectual feuds and feeble hates—
Shadows of hates, but they distress them still.
Balder Dead.

To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost,
Which blamed the living man.

Growing Old.

Let the long contention cease!
Geese are swans, and swans are geese.
The Last Word.

Who saw life steadily, and saw it whole.
To a Friend (referring to Sophocles).

5a

Now the great winds shoreward blow,
 Now the salt tides seaward flow;
 Now the white wild horses play,
 Champ and chafe and toss in the spray.

The Forsaken Merman.

Eyes too expressive to be blue,
 Too lovely to be grey.

Faded Leaves. 4. On the Rhine.

Wandering between two worlds—one dead,
 The other powerless to be born.

Stanzas from the Grande Chartreuse. St. 15.

The kings of modern thought are dumb.
St. 20.

Years hence, perhaps, may dawn an age
 More fortunate, alas! than we,
 Which without hardness will be sage,
 And gay without frivolity. St. 27.

Children of men! the Unseen Power, whose eye

For ever doth accompany mankind,
 Hath looked on no religion scornfully,
 That men did ever find. Progress.

Still bent to make some port he knows not where,
 Still standing for some false impossible shore.

A Summer Night.

The same heart beats in every human breast.
The Buried Life.

Not deep the poet sees, but wide.
Resignation.

Nor bring, to see me cease to live,
 Some doctor full of phrase and fame,
 To shake his sapient head, and give
 The ill he cannot cure a name. A Wish.

Languor is not in your heart,
 Weakness is not in your word,
 Weariness not on your brow.

Rugby Chapel.

What shelter to grow ripe is ours?

What leisure to grow wise?

In Memory of the Author of "Obermann."

Too fast we live, too much are tried,
 Too harassed, to attain
 Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide
 And luminous view to gain. Ib.

For tyrants make man good beyond himself:
 Hate to their rule, which else would die away,
 Their daily-practised chafings keep alive.

Merope.

All this I bear, for, what I seek, I know:
 Peace, peace is what I seek, and public calm,

Endless extinction of unhappy hates. Ib.

Old age is more suspicious than the free
 And valiant heart of youth, or manhood's firm,

Unclouded reason. Ib.

How many noble thoughts,
 How many precious feelings of man's heart,
 How many loves, how many gratuities,
 Do twenty years wear out, and see expire!
Ib.

5b

When a wretch
 For private gain or hatred takes a life,
 We call it murder, crush him, brand his name; —

But when, for some great public cause, an arm
 Is, without love or hate, austere raised Against a power exempt from common checks,

Dangerous to all, to be but thus annulled—
 Ranks any man with murder such an act?
Ib.

With women the heart argues, not the mind.
Ib.

Give not thy heart to despair.
 No lamentation can loose
 Prisoners of death from the grave. Ib.

The man who to untimely death is doomed,
 Vainly you hedge him from the assault of harm:

He bears the seed of ruin in himself. Ib.

For this is the true strength of guilty kings,
 When they corrupt the souls of those they rule. Ib.

That even in thy victory thou show,
 Mortal, the moderation of a man. Ib.

Be neither saint nor sophist led, but be a man. Empedocles on Etna (1852).

But we are all the same—the fools of our own woes! Ib.

We do not what we ought,
 What we ought not, we do,
 And lean upon the thought
 That chance will bring us through. Ib.

The brave, impetuous heart yields everywhere
 To the subtle, contriving head. Ib.

The weary Titan [England].
Heine's Grave.

And truly he who here,
 Hath run his bright career,
 And served men nobly, and acceptance found,

And borne to light and right his witness
 high,

What could he better wish than then to die,

And wait the issue, sleeping underground?
Westminster Abbey. July 25, 1881.

For this and that way swings
 The flux of mortal things,
 Though moving inly to one far-set goal.
Ib.

After light's term, a term of cecity. Ib.

Folly revived, re-furbished sophistries,
 And pullulating rites externe and vain. Ib.

Thus sleeping in thine Abbey's friendly
 shade,

And the rough waves of life for ever laid!
 I would not break thy rest, nor change thy doom.

Even as my father, thou,

Even as that loved, that well-recorded friend—

Hast thy commission done; ye both may now
Wait for the leaven to work, the let to end.

Ib.

Proud of port, though something squat.
Poor Matthias.

Stern law of every mortal lot!
Which man, proud man, finds hard to bear,
And builds himself I know not what
Of second life, I know not where.

Geist's Grave.

Culture is "To know the best that has been said and thought in the world."

Literature and Dogma (1873). Preface.

Culture is the passion for sweetness and light, and (what is more) the passion for making them prevail.*

When we are asked further, what is conduct? let us answer, Three-fourths of life.

Ch. 1, Religion Given.

Conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern. Ib.

The not ourselves, which is in us and all around us.† Ib.

The not ourselves which makes for righteousness. Ib.

The enduring power, not ourselves, which makes for righteousness. Ib.

Inwardness, mildness, and self-renouncement do make for man's happiness.

Ch. 3, Religion New-Given.

The eternal not ourselves which makes for happiness. Ch. 8, Faith in Christ.

The phantasmagorical world of novels and of opium.

Ch. 11, The True Greatness of the Old Testament.

In his poetry, as well as in his life, Shelley was indeed "a beautiful and ineffectual angel, beating in the void his luminous wings in vain."

Essay on Shelley.

Sweet reasonableness.†
St. Paul and Protestantism (1870). Preface.

ARNOLD, Thomas, D.D. (1795-1842)

First, religious and moral principles: secondly, gentlemanly conduct: thirdly, intellectual ability.

Address to his Scholars.

Preserve proportion in your reading. Keep your view of men and things extensive. Ib.

* "Instead of dirt and poison, we have rather chosen to fill our hives with honey and wax; thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light."—Dean Swift: Battle of the Books (c. 1697; published 1704).

† "An unfathomable somewhat, which is Not we."
—Carlyle: French Revolution, Ch. 2 (1837).

‡ Repeated many times in Literature and Dogma, and other works.

ASCHAM, Roger (1515-1568)

Some fresh new othe that is not stale, but will rin round in the mouth.

The Scholemaster (pub. 1570).

To laugh, to lie, to flatter, to face,
Foure waies in Court to win men's grace. Ib.

It is costly wisdom that is bought by experience. Ib.

By experience we find out a short way by a long wandering. Learning teacheth more in one year than experience in twenty. Ib.

AUSTIN, Jane (1775-1817)

"I am afraid," replied Elinor, "that the pleasantness of an employment does not always evince its propriety."

Sense and Sensibility (1811). Ch. 13.

To sit in the shade on a fine day and look upon verdure is the most perfect refreshment. Mansfield Park (1814). Ch. 9.

Where an opinion is general, it is usually correct.* Ch. 11.

It is happy for you that you possess the talent of flattering with delicacy. May I ask whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study?

Pride and Prejudice (1813). Ch. 14.

Nobody is on my side, nobody takes part with me: I am cruelly used, nobody feels for my poor nerves. (Mrs. Bennet.)

Ch. 20.

Lizzy, I bear you no ill-will for being justified in your advice to me last May, which, considering the event, shows some greatness of mind. (Mr. Bennet.) Ch. 48.

AUSTIN, Alfred (1835-1913)

Till the half-drunk lean over the half-dressed.

The Season (1861).

I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

Hymn to Death.

The time will come when men
Will be as free and equal as the waves,
That seem to jostle, but that never jar.

Every life, even the most selfish and the most frivolous, is a tragedy at last, because it ends with death. Savonarola (1881). Preface.

If Nature built by rule and square,
Than man what wiser would she be?
What wins us is her careless care,
And sweet unpunctuality.

Nature and the Book.

Here lies who, born a man, a grocer died.†
The Golden Age.

* See the Proverb: "What every one says must be true."

† Translation of a French epitaph: Né homme—mort épicer.

And Clara dies that Claribel may dance. Ib.

Lo, where huge London, huger day by day,
O'er six fair counties spreads its hideous sway! Ib.

You want a seat? Then boldly sate your itch;
Be very radical, and very rich. Ib.

Now in the summit of love's topmost peak
Kiss we and part; no farther can we go.
Sonnet. Love's Wisdom.

AVELINE, Mrs. E. L. (d. c. 1850)
Call us not weeds—we are flowers of the sea.
Tales and Fables in Verse.
The Flowers of the Ocean.

A swan swam in a silver lake,
And gracefully swam the swan.
A Mother's Fables. The Vain Swan.

AYTON, Sir Robert (1570–1638)
Thy favours are but like the wind,
That kisseth everything it meets.
I do confess.

I loved thee once, I'll love no more:
Thine be the grief as is the blame:
Thou art not what thou wast before—
What reason I should be the same? Ib.

AYTOUN, Wm. Edmonstoune (1813–1865)
There may be danger in the deed,
But there is honour too.
Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers.
The Island of the Scots, 3.

They bore within their breasts the grief
That fame can never heal—
The deep, unutterable woe
Which none save exiles feel. Ib., 12.

Woman's love is writ in water!
Woman's faith is traced on sand!
Charles Edward at Versailles.

Nowhere beats the heart so kindly
As beneath the tartan plaid. Ib.

Metaphysics I detested. The science appeared to me an elaborate, diabolical invention for mystifying what was clear, and confounding what was intelligible.
Norman Sinclair.

The earth is all the home I have,
The heavens my wide roof-tree.
The Wandering Jew.

BACON, Francis (Lord Verulam and Viscount St. Albans) (1561–1626)
Then grew the learning of the schoolmen to be utterly despised as barbarous.
Proficiency and Advancement of Learning
(1605). Book I.

A credulous man is a deceiver. Ib.
Time which is the author of authors. Ib.

And to speak truly, "Antiquitas sæculi, juventus mundi." These times are the ancient times, when the world is ancient.*
Ib.

If a man will begin with certainties, he shall end in doubts; but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end in certainties. Ib.

[Knowledge,] a rich storehouse, for the glory of the Creator, and the relief of man's estate. Ib.

There is no power on earth which setteth up a throne, or chair of state, in the spirits and souls of men, and in their cogitations, imaginings, opinions, and beliefs, but knowledge and learning. Ib.

Libraries, which are as the shrines where all the relics of the ancient saints, full of true virtue, and that without delusion or imposture, are preserved and reposed.
Book 2.

Of the nature of the sun, which passeth through pollutions, and itself remains as pure as before. Ib.

Antiquities are history defaced, or some remnants of history which have casually escaped the shipwreck of time. Ib.

Cæsar, in modesty mixed with greatness,
did for his pleasure apply the name of a Commentary to the best history of the world. Ib.

And now last, this most happy and glorious event, that this island of Britain, divided from all the world, should be united in itself. Ib.

It is the true office of history to represent the events themselves, together with the counsels, and to leave the observations and conclusions thereupon to the liberty and faculty of every man's judgment. Ib.

It [poesy] was ever thought to have some participation of divineness, because it doth raise and erect the mind by submitting the shows of things to the desires of the mind; whereas reason doth buckle and bow the mind unto the nature of things.
Ib.

The knowledge of man is as the waters, some descending from above, and some springing up from beneath; the one informed by the light of nature, the other inspired by divine revelation. Ib.

There was never miracle wrought by God to convert an atheist, because the light of nature might have led him to confess a God.† Ib.

Democritus said, "That the truth of nature lieth hid in certain deep mines and caves." Ib.

* See Hobbes, Thos. (The Leviathan).

† Also in Bacon's Essays, under "Atheism." See
p. roa.

They are ill discoverers that think there is no land, when they can see nothing but sea. Ib.

It being the nature of the mind of man, to the extreme prejudice of knowledge, to delight in the spacious liberty of generalities. Ib.

Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced: the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

Proficiency and Advancement of Learning.
Book 2.

Words are but the current tokens or marks of popular notions of things. Ib.

The great sophism of all sophisms being equivocation or ambiguity of words and phrase. Ib.

Words, as a Tartar's bow, do shoot back upon the understanding of the wisest, and mightily entangle and pervert the judgment. Ib.

Words are the tokens current and accepted for conceits, as moneys are for values. Ib.

So hath he [man] sought to come forth of the second general curse, which was the confusion of tongues, by the art of grammar. Ib.

A dance is a measured pace, as a verse is a measured speech. Ib.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think. Ib.

As Plato said elegantly, "That Virtue, if she could be seen, would move great love and affection." Ib.

As it hath been wisely noted, the most corrected, copies are commonly the least correct. Ib.

It is one method to practise swimming with bladders, and another to practise dancing with heavy shoes. Ib.

We are much beholden to Machiavel and others, that write what men do, and not what they ought to do. Ib.

Men must pursue things which are just in present, and leave the future to the Divine Providence. Ib.

For as the ancient politicians in popular estates were wont to compare the people to the sea, and the orators to the winds; because as the sea would of itself be calm and quiet, if the winds did not move and trouble it, so the people would be peaceable and tractable, if the seditious orators did not set them in working and agitation. Ib.

Did not one of the fathers* in great indignation call poesy, vinum dæmonum? Ib.

All good moral philosophy, as was said, is but a handmaid to religion. Ib.

By aspiring to a similitude of God in goodness, or love, neither man nor angel ever transgressed, or shall transgress. Ib.

States, as great engines, move slowly, and are not so soon put out of frame. Ib.

Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection. Ib.

Many are wise in their own ways, that are weak for government or counsel. Ib.

It is as hard and severe a thing to be a true politician as to be truly moral. Ib.

No man's fortune can be an end worthy of his being. Ib.

Liberty of speech inviteth and provoketh liberty to be used again, and so bringeth much to a man's advantage. Ib.

Nothing is more politic than to make the wheels of our mind concentric and voluble with the wheels of fortune. Ib.

Surely the continual habit of dissimulation is but a weak and sluggish cunning, and not greatly politic. Ib.

Fortunes . . . come tumbling into some men's laps. Ib.

That other principle of Lysander, "that children are to be deceived with comfits, and men with oaths." Ib.

It is in life, as it is in ways, the shortest way is commonly the foulest, and surely the fairer way is not much about. Ib.

Their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high. Ib.

There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived but as streams. Ib.

This writing seemeth to me . . . not much better than that noise or sound which musicians make while they are in tuning their instruments, which is nothing pleasant to hear, but yet is a cause why the music is sweeter afterwards. Ib.

The inseparable propriety of time,* which is ever more and more to disclose truth. Ib.

That ancient and patient request, "Verbera, sed audi." ("Strike, but hear"). Ib.

That which is imprinted upon the spirit of man by an inward instinct, according to the law of conscience, which is a sparkle of the purity of his first estate. Ib.

Those which have not sufficiently learned out of Solomon, that "the causeless curse shall not come." Ib.

Generally, music feedeth the disposition of spirit which it findeth.

Sylva Sylvarum (1626). Century 2, 114.

* St. Augustine. See Latin, "Poesis est," etc.

* "Inseparable propriety," i.e., invariable property.

A dry March and a dry May portend a wholesome summer, if there be a showering April between. 9. 807.

Their law of keeping out strangers is a law of pusillanimity and fear.

New Atlantis.

God's first creature, which was light. Ib.

The reverence of a man's self is, next religion, the chiefest bridle of all vices. Ib.

The mind is the man.

Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.*

A man is but what he knoweth. Ib.

Is truth ever barren? Ib.

They learn nothing there [at the universities of Europe] but to believe; first, to believe that others know that which they know not; and after, that themselves know that which they know not. Ib.

The sovereignty of man lieth hid in knowledge; wherein many things are reserved that kings with their treasure cannot buy, nor with their force command. Ib.

It is no less true in this human kingdom of knowledge, than in God's kingdom of heaven, that no man shall enter into it, "except he become first as a little child."

A religion that is jealous of the variety of learning, discourse, opinions, and sects, as misdoubting it may shake the foundations, or that cherisheth devotion upon simplicity and ignorance, as ascribing ordinary effects to the immediate working of God, is adverse to knowledge. Ch. 25.

Universities incline wits to sophistry and affectation. Ch. 26.

Envy, which is proud weakness, and deserveth to be despised.

Filum Labyrinthi.†

In government change is suspected, though to the better. Ib.

What is truth? said jesting Pilate; and would not stay for an answer.‡

Essays (First series and edition, 1597). 1. Of Truth.

A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure. Ib.

It is not the lie that passeth through the mind, but the lie that sinketh in, and settleth in it, that doth the hurt. Ib.

* Fragmentary works originally designed for parts of the Instauratio (1620) but abandoned or superseded; published posthumously.

† An English version (1734) of the Cogitata et Visa (1653).

‡ "Pilate asked, Quid est veritas? And then some other matter took him in the head, and so up he rose and went his way before he had his answer. He deserved never to find what truth was."—Bishop Andrews: Sermon, Of the Resurrection, 1613.

No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage ground of truth.* Ib.

Men fear death, as children fear to go in the dark. 2. Of Death.

It is as natural to die, as to be born. Ib.

Above all, believe it, the sweetest canticle is "Nunc dimittis," when a man hath obtained worthy ends and expectations. Death hath this also: that it openeth the gate to good fame, and extinguisheth envy. Ib.

All colours will agree in the dark.

3. Of Unity in Religion.

Revenge is a kind of wild justice.

4. Revenge.

A man that studieth revenge keeps his own wounds green. Ib.

Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament; adversity is the blessing of the New, which carrieth the greater benediction. 5. Of Adversity.

Virtue is like precious odours, most fragrant when they are incensed and crushed; for prosperity doth best discover vice, but adversity doth best discover virtue. Ib.

It is good that a man's face gives his tongue leave to speak.

6. Of Simulation and Dissimulation.

Children sweeten labours: but they make misfortunes more bitter.

7. Of Parents and Children.

He that hath a wife and children, hath given hostages to fortune.

8. Of Marriage and Single Life.

There are some other, that account wife and children but as bills of charges. Ib.

Wives are young men's mistresses; companions for middle-age; and old men's nurses. Ib.

He was reputed one of the wise men that made answer to the question, when a man should marry? "A young man not yet; an elder man not at all." Ib.

The speaking in perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love. 10. Of Love.

The arch-flatterer, with whom all the petty flatterers have intelligence, is a man's self. Ib.

Men in great place are thrice servants.

Essays (Edition of 1612).

11. Of Great Place.

It is a strange desire, to seek power, and to lose liberty. Ib.

By pains men come to greater pains; . . . and by indignities men come to dignities. Ib.

Happy, as it were, by report. Ib.

* Paraphrase of Lucretius. See Latin, "Sed nil dulcius est."

Set it down to thyself, as well to create good precedents, as to follow them. Ib.

Ask counsel of both times: of the ancient time what is best; and of the latter time what is fittest. Ib.

Severity breedeth fear, but roughness breedeth hate. Even reproofs from authority ought to be grave, and not taunting. Ib.

As in nature things move violently to their place, and calmly in their place; so virtue in ambition is violent, in authority settled and calm. Ib.

He said it that knew it best.

12. Of Boldness.

There is in human nature, generally, more of the fool than of the wise. Ib.

In civil business, what first?—Boldness. What second and third?—Boldness. And yet boldness is a child of ignorance and baseness. Ib.

Boldness is an ill-keeper of promise. Ib.

In charity there is no excess.

13. Of Goodness, and Goodness of Nature.

If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers, it shows he is a citizen of the world. Ib.

It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle or building, not in decay.

14. Of Nobility.

New nobility is but the act of power, but ancient nobility is the act of time. Ib.

Nobility of birth commonly abateth industry. Ib.

The four pillars of government, . . . religion, justice, counsel, and treasure.

15. Of Seditions and Troubles.

The surest way to prevent seditions, if the times do bear it, is to take away the matter of them. Ib.

Whatsoever is somewhere gotten is somewhere lost. Ib.

Money is like muck, not good except it be spread. Ib.

The remedy is worse than the disease. Ib.

God never wrought miracle to convince atheism, because his ordinary works convince it. 16. Of Atheism. (See page 7b.)

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism; but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion. Ib.

Atheism is rather in the lip than in the heart of man. Ib.

There is a superstition in avoiding superstition. 17. Of Superstition.

Let diaries therefore be brought in use.

18. Of Travel.

It is a miserable state of mind to have few things to desire, and many things to fear. 19. Of Empire.

Princes are like to heavenly bodies, which cause good or evil times; and which have much veneration, but no rest. Ib.

Books will speak plain, when counsellors blanch. 20. Of Counsel.

There is no secrecy comparable to celerity.

21. Of Delays.

There are some that can pack the cards, and yet cannot play well; so there are some that are good in canvasses and factions, that are otherwise weak men. 22. Of Cunning.

I knew one that when he wrote a letter, he would put that which was most material in the postscript, as if it had been a by-matter. Ib.

Nothing doth more hurt in a state, than that cunning men pass for wise. Ib.

Be so true to thyself, as thou be not false to others. 23. Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.

It is the nature of extreme self-lovers, as they will set a house on fire, and it were but to roast their eggs. Ib.

It is the wisdom of the crocodiles, that shed tears when they would devour. Ib.

He that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils; for time is the greatest innovator. 24. Of Innovation.

It were good, therefore, that men in their innovations would follow the example of time itself, which indeed innovateth greatly, but quietly and by degrees scarce to be perceived. Ib.

I knew a wise man that had it for a by-word, when he saw men hasten to a conclusion, "Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner."

25. Of Despatch.

To choose time, is to save time. Ib.

The French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are.

26. Of Seeming Wise.

It had been hard for him that spake it to have put more truth and untruth together, in a few words, than in that speech: "Who-soever is delighted in solitude is either a wild beast, or a god." 27. Of Friendship.

A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures. Ib.

No receipt openeth the heart but a true friend. Ib.

It redoubleth joys and cutteth griefs in halves. Ib.

When all is done, the help of good counsel is that which setteth business straight. Ib.

Cure the disease, and kill the patient. Ib.

Riches are for spending. 28. Of Expense.

A man ought warily to begin charges, which once begun will continue. Ib.

Neither is money the sinews of war, as it is trivially said. Ib.

No people overcharged with tribute is fit for empire. Ib.

Thus much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will. Ib.

Age will not be defied.

30. Of Regiment of Health.

Suspensions, amongst thoughts, are like bats amongst birds, they ever fly by twilight.

31. Of Suspicion.

There is nothing makes a man suspect much, more than to know little. Ib.

Intermingle . . . jest with earnest.

32. Of Discourse.

He that hath a satirical vein, as he maketh others afraid of his wit, so he had need be afraid of others' memory. Ib.

Discretion of speech is more than eloquence. Ib.

Be not penny-wise; riches have wings, and sometimes they fly away of themselves, sometimes they must be set flying to bring in more.* 34. Of Riches.

[Dreams and predictions] ought to serve but for winter talk by the fireside.

35. Of Prophecies.

He that plots to be the only figure amongst ciphers, is the decay of a whole age.

36. Of Ambition.

Nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, seldom extinguished.

38. Of Nature in Men.

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds. Ib.

They come home to men's business and bosoms.

Essays (Edition of 1625). Preface.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time.

42. Of Youth and Age.

Men of age object too much, consult too long, adventure too little, repent too soon. Ib.

Beauty is as summer fruits, which are easy to corrupt, and cannot last.

43. Of Beauty.

Houses are built to live in, and not to look on.

45. Of Building.

God Almighty first planted a garden: and indeed it is the purest of human pleasures.

46. Of Gardens.

It is generally better to deal by speech, than by letter. 47. Of Negotiating.

There is little friendship in the world, and least of all between equals.

48. Of Followers and Friends.

Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability. 50. Of Studies.

To spend too much time in studies is sloth. Ib.

Read not to contradict and confute; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse: but to weigh and consider. Ib.

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested. Ib.

Reading maketh a full man; conference a ready man: and writing an exact man. Ib.

Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend. Ib.

Light gains make heavy purses.

52. Of Ceremonies and Respects.

Small matters win great commendation. Ib.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds. Ib.

He that is too much in anything, so that he giveth another occasion of satiety, maketh himself cheap. Ib.

Fame is like a river, that beareth up things light and swoln, and drowns things weighty and solid. Ib.

The arch-flatterer, which is a man's self.

Ib. [See No. 10 (1597 ed.).]

It was prettily devised of Æsop; The fly sat upon the axle-tree of the chariot-wheel, and said, What a dust do I raise!

54. Of Vain-Glory.

The place of justice is a hallowed place.

56. Of Judicature.

The true religion is built upon the rock; the rest are tossed upon the waves of time.

58. Of Vicissitude of Things.

He is the fountain of honour. Of a King.

They serve to be recited upon occasion of themselves. They serve if you take out the kernel of them, and make them your own.

A Collection of Apophthegms.

Preface.

Like strawberry wives, that laid two or three great strawberries at the mouth of their pot, and all the rest were little ones.

A Proposal for Amending the Laws of England.

* The authenticity of this Essay is doubted.

It is scarcely possible for authors to be admired and at the same time to excel.

Instauratio Magna. De Augmentis Scientiarum.*

Præfatio. De Statu Scientiarum.

Glory and honour serve as goads and spurs to virtue.

Part 1. Lib. 6, cap. 3, Soph. 10.

Deformed persons are wont to avenge themselves on nature.

Part 1. Lib. 6, cap. 3. Exempla Antithetorum. 2. Forma.

Virtue, being a transcendent gem, is better set without much gold and ornament. Ib.

Old men fear all things, except the gods. 3. Juventus.

A healthy body is the guest-chamber of the soul; a sick, its prison.

4. Valetudo.

Wealth is a good servant, a very bad mistress.

6. Divitiæ.

The voice of the people has about it something divine; for how otherwise can so many heads agree together as one?

9. Laus, Existimatio.

Do not wonder if the common people speak more truly than those of higher rank; for they speak with more safety. Ib.

We think according to nature; we speak according to rules; but we act according to custom.

10. Natura.

One man's folly is another man's fortune.

11. Fortuna.

It is better to have no belief in the gods than a dishonouring belief. 13. Superstitio.

Great hypocrites are the real atheists. Ib.

Envy has no holidays. 16. Invidia.

It is due to justice that man shall be a God to man, and not a wolf.

20. Justitia.

Nothing is terrible except fear itself.

21. Fortitudo.

Constancy is the foundation of virtues.

23. Constantia.

To be wise by rule and by experience are utterly opposite principles; so that he who is used to the one is unfit for the other.

26. Litteræ.

Prudence is of no service unless it be prompt.

27. Promptitudo.

He who errs quickly is quick in correcting the error. Ib.

* De Augmentis Scientiarum, an enlarged version, in Latin, of The Advancement of Learning (1605). Quotations already given from this book are not here repeated, though, for the most part, the passages extracted re-appear, in Latin, in De Augmentis Scientiarum.

To worship the people is to be worshipped. 30. Popularitas.

Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd. Ib.

Silence is the virtue of fools. 31. Loquacitas.

Dissimulation invites dissimulation. 32. Dissimulatio.

What action is to the orator, that is boldness to the public man; first, second, third. 33. Audacia.

The worst solitude is to have no true friendships. 37. Amicitia.

Private revenge is wild justice. 39. Vindicta.

If the danger seems slight, then truly it is not slight.

43. Principiis Obstare.

Suspicion absolves faith. 45. Suspicio.

Superabundance of suspicion is a kind of political madness. Ib.

When he departs from the letter of the law, the judge transforms himself into a law-maker.

*46. Verba legis.

It is a hard thing to torture the laws so that they torture men.

Part 1, Lib. 8, cap. 3. Aphor. 13.

If only men would be mad in the same fashion and conformably, they might manage to agree fairly well together.

Part 2. Lib. 1. Aphor. 27.

Man prefers to believe what he prefers to be true. Aphor. 49.

The middle times of the world,† so far as a rich or fruitful crop of sciences, were unfortunate. Aphor. 78.

That great mother of the sciences [natural philosophy]. Aphor. 80.

Nevertheless it is not to be denied that the alchemists invented not a few things, and presented men with useful inventions. Aphor. 95.

Natural philosophy, next to the word of God, is the surest medicine for superstition. Aphor. 89.

The sun finds its way into palaces and sewers alike, yet is not polluted. Aphor. 110.

Nature is not governed except by obeying her. Aphor. 129.

It is rightly laid down: "To know truly is to know by causes."

BAILEY, Philip James (1816–1902)

Who can mistake great thoughts?
Great Thoughts.

Night brings out stars as sorrows show us truths.
Truth and Sorrows.

The world is just as hollow as an eggshell.
Festus (1839).

We live in deeds, not years: in thoughts, not breaths:

In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives

Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best. Ib.

Where imperfection ceaseth, heaven begins.
Ib.

Poets are all who love, who feel great truths,
And tell them; and the truth of truths is love. Ib.

Envy's a coal comes hissing hot from Hell. Ib.

The worst men give oft the best advice. Ib.

Who never doubted, never half believed;
Where doubt, there truth is,—'tis her shadow. Ib.

* Stated by Bacon to be "the sole and only way in which the foundations of true and active philosophy can be established."

† The first portion is from Ovid; v. Latin, "Omnia mutantur."

‡ Sometimes translated, "All sceptres are crooked atop." The context states that they are like the sheep-hook of Pan, and signify that government, if prudent, must be roundabout and indirect in its methods.

It is our opening day. Orra. Act iii. 1.

He was not all a father's heart could wish;
But oh, he was my son!—my only son,
My child! Ib., iii. 2.

He is too much my pride to wake my envy.
Basil. Act i. 2.

What custom hath endeared
We part with sadly, though we prize it not. Ib.

The brave man is not he who feels no fear,
For that were stupid and irrational;
But he, whose noble soul its fear subdues,
And bravely dares the danger nature shrinks from. Ib., iii. 1.

How like a hateful ape,
Detected, grinning, 'midst his pilfered hoard,
A cunning man appears, whose secret frauds
Are opened to the day! Act v. 3.

BALFOUR, Arthur James, Earl Balfour (b. 1848)

Kant, as we all know, compared moral law to the starry heavens, and found them both sublime. On the naturalistic hypothesis we should rather compare it to the protective blotches on a beetle's back, and find them both ingenious.

Foundations of Belief.

It is unfortunate, considering that enthusiasm moves the world, that so few enthusiasts can be trusted to speak the truth.

Letter (To Mrs. Drew).

BALLANTINE, James (1808–1877)

For a' sae sage he looks, what can the laddie ken?

He's thinkin' upon naething, like mony mighty men;

A wee thing maks us think, a sma' thing maks us stare;

There are mair folks than him biggin' castles in the air.

BEHN, Aphra (née Amis) (1640-1689)

Vows! dost think the gods regard the vows of lovers? They are things made in necessity, and ought not to be kept, nor punished when broken.

The Dutch Lover (1673), v. 1.

A brave world, sir, full of religion, knavery, and change! We shall shortly see better days.

The Roundheads (1682), i. 1.

If thou didst but know how little wit governs this mighty universe, thou wouldst not wonder men should set up at him [Fleetwood].

Ib., i. 2.

He that will live in this world must be endured with the three rare qualities of dissimulation, equivocation, and mental reservation.
Ib.

I owe a duty where I cannot love.

She's as inconstant as the seas and winds,
Which ne'er are calm but to betray adventurers. The Forced Marriage (1670), i. 1.

All soft and sweet the maid appears,
With looks that know no art,
And though she yields with trembling fears,
She yields with all her heart.

The Emperor of the Moon (1687), iii. 3.

Love, like Reputation, once fled, never returns more.

History of the Nun (c. 1688).

He had a natural aversion to danger, and thought it below a man of wit or common sense to be guilty of that brutal thing called Courage, or Fighting. His philosophy told him, "It was safe sleeping in a whole skin."

BELLOC, Hilaire (b. 1870)

It is the best of all trades to make songs, and the second best to sing them.

On Song.

From the towns all Inns have been driven:
from the villages most. . . . Change your hearts, or you will lose your Inns and you will deserve to have lost them. But when you have lost your Inns, drown your empty selves, for you will have lost the last of England.

The Crisis in the Theatre (March, 1908).

Preface to "Cupid and Commonsense."

As you say, business is business. There are people in this town who say that bankruptcy is good business (Willie Beach of Pursley).

Cupid and Commonsense (1908). Act i.

There are some people who are only at their best when they are to be pitied. . . . But he's no longer miserable and so he's objectionable. There are a lot of people like that.

Ib., Act iv.

Half Bursley has a grudge against Ralph—because he's as straight as a die, and always knows what he wants and is always clever enough to get it. . . . People don't like it—naturally.

Ib.

She [the Church] must avoid scandal—particularly local scandal. London scandal is less deleterious (Bishop of Colchester).

The Honeymoon (1911). Act ii.

In an argument I always begin rather well, but in the end I'm apt to be beaten. So I just stop—especially when I know I'm right.

Ib.

Well, my deliberate opinion is—it's a jolly strange world (John Culver).

The Title (1918). Act i.

A cause may be inconvenient, but it's magnificent. It's like champagne or high shoes, and one must be prepared to suffer for it. Ib.

The first duty of a Government is to live. It has no right to be a Government at all unless it is convinced that if it fell the country would go to everlasting smash. Ib.

Examine the Honours List and you will know exactly how a Government feels in its

Being a husband is a whole-time job. That is why so many husbands fail. They cannot give their entire attention to it. Ib.

Journalists say a thing that they know isn't true, in the hope that if they keep on saying it long enough it will be true. Ib.

Don't begin to talk like that. I don't mind reading novels, but I won't have raw lumps of them thrown at me. Ib., Act ii.

Literature is always a good card to play for Honours. It makes people think that Cabinet ministers are educated. Ib., Act iii.

No enlightened and patriotic person wants the Government to fall. All enlightened and patriotic persons want the Government to be afraid of falling. There you have the whole of war politics in a nutshell. Ib.

His opinion of himself, having once risen, remained at "set fair."

The Card (1911). Ch. 1.

"Ye can call it influenza if ye like," said Mrs. Machin. "There was no influenza in my young days. We called a cold a cold."

Ch. 8.

"And yet," demanded Councillor Barlow, . . . "what great cause is he identified with?"—"He is identified," said the speaker, "with the great cause of cheering us all up."

* An adaptation of Martial's "Non amo te, Sabide" (g.v.). Dr. Fell was Dean of Christchurch, and is said to have withheld a sentence of expulsion on Tom Brown, from Oxford, on account of his "impromptu translation," or adaptation, of Martial's epigram. A similar version had been written by Robert Rabutin, Count de Bussy (1618-1693):—

Je ne vous aime pas, Hylas;
 Je n'en saurois dire la cause;
 Je sais seulement une chose,
 C'est que je ne vous aime pas.

 With true love trembling at the brim,
 He suffers me to follow him.

Canto 9.

Earth breaks up, time drops away,
 In flows heaven with its new day.

Canto 10.

Though Rome's gross yoke
 Drops off, no more to be endured,
 Her teaching is not so obscured
 By errors and perversities
 That no truth shines athwart the lies.

Canto 11.

Till, from its summit,
 Judgment drops her damning plummet,
 Pronouncing such a fatal space
 Departed from the founder's base.

Ib.

Love shut our eyes, and all seemed right.
 True, the world's eyes are open now:

A plate of turtle green and glutinous.

Ib.

Anything like the sound of a rat
 Makes my heart go pit-a-pat!

Ib.

In did come the strangest figure.

Canto 5.

Such sweet
 Soft notes as yet musician's cunning
 Never gave the enraptured air.

Canto 12.

If we've promised them aught, let us keep our promise.

Canto 15.

More fault of those who had the hammering
 Of prosody into me, and syntax,
 And did it, not with hobnails but tinctacks!

The Flight of the Duchess (1845). Canto 15.

You're my friend—
 What a thing friendship is, world without end!

Canto 17.

This is our master, famous, calm and dead,
 Borne on our shoulders.

A Grammarian's Funeral (1855). l. 27.

He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!
Man has Forever." l. 83.

God help all poor souls lost in the dark.
The Heretic's Tragedy (1855). St. 10.

The eagle am I, with my fame in the world,
The wren is he, with his maiden face.
A Light Woman (1855).

A man can have but one life, and one death,
One heaven, one hell. In a Balcony.

Truth is the strong thing. Let man's life be true! Ib.

All women love great men
If young or old; it is in all the tales. Ib.

Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve. Ib.

Stark-naked thought is in request enough.
Transcendentalism (1855).

His very serviceable suit of black
Was courtly once, and conscientious still.
How it Strikes a Contemporary (1855).

He took such cognisance of men and things. Ib.

We had among us, not so much a spy,
As a recording chief-inquisitor,
The town's true master, if the town but knew!
We merely kept a governor for form. Ib.

Ten, struck the church clock, straight to bed went he. Ib.

Ah thought which saddens while it soothes!
Pictor Ignotus (1845).

He's Judas to a tittle that man is,
Just such a face! Fra Lippo Lippi (1855).

Flower o' the rose,
If I've been merry, what matter who knows?
Ib.

Lord, they'd have taught me Latin in pure waste! Ib.

He learns the look of things, and none the less
For admonition from the hunger-pinch. Ib.

If you get simple beauty, and nought else,
You get about the best thing God invents. Ib.

You should not take a fellow eight years old
And make him swear to never kiss the girls. Ib.

This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means
good:

To find its meaning is my meat and drink. Ib.

So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!
Andrea del Sarto (1855).

Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's heaven for? Ib.

Good, strong, thick, stupefying incense-smoke.
The Bishop orders his Tomb (1845).

B.Q.

Truth that peeps
Over the glass's edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop, and holds its noise,
And leaves the soul free a little.
Bishop Blougram's Apology (1855).

You, for example, clever to a fault,
The rough and ready man, who write apace,
Read somewhat seldomer, think perhaps even less. Ib.

Be a Napoleon, and yet disbelieve!
Why the man's mad, friend, take his light away. Ib.

The aim, if reached or not, makes great the life;
Try to be Shakespeare, leave the rest to fate!
Ib.

Geology, ethnology, what not?—
(Greek endings, each the little passing bell
That signifies some faith's about to die.) Ib.
And set you square with Genesis again. Ib.

Worldly in this world,
I take and like its way of life. Ib.

Men are not angels, neither are they brutes:
Something we may see, all we cannot see. Ib.

He said true things, but called them by wrong names. Ib.

Dante, who loved well because he hated,
Hated wickedness that hinders loving.
One Word More (1855).

Does he paint? he fain would write a poem,—
Does he write? he fain would paint a picture. Ib.

Other heights in other lives, God willing:
All the gifts from all the heights, your own,
love! Ib.

Curving on a sky imbrued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight;
Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato.
Rouder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded. Ib.

Blank to Zoroaster on his terrace,
Blind to Galileo on his turret,
Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats—him, even!
Ib.

God be thanked, the meanest of His creatures Boasts two soul-sides,—one to face the world with,
One to show a woman when he loves her!
Ib.

The god in babe's disguise.
James Lee's Wife (1864). 6. Reading a Book.

And my faith is torn to a thousand scraps,
And my heart feels ice while my words breathe flame. The Worst of it (1864).

I knew you once: but in Paradise,
If we meet, I will pass nor turn my face.
Ib.

C

Reads verse, and thinks she understands.
Dis aliter visum (1864).

What's the earth
 With all its art, verse, music, worth—
 Compared with love, found, gained, and kept ?
Ib.

Sure of the Fortieth spare Arm-chair
 When gout and glory seat me there. Ib.

With loves and doves, at all events
 With money in the Three per Cents. Ib.

How sad and bad and mad it was—
 But then, how it was sweet !
Confessions (1864).

If such as came for wool, sir, went home shorn,
 Where is the wrong I did them ?

Mr. Sludge, "The Medium" (1864).

There's a real love of a lie,
 Liars find ready made for lies they make. Ib.

Solomon of saloons,
 And philosophic diner-out. Ib.

This trade of mine—I don't know, can't be sure
 But there was something in it, tricks and all !
 Really, I want to light up my own mind. Ib.

History
 With the supernatural element,—you know. Ib.

Because, however sad the truth may seem,
 Sludge is of all-importance to himself. Ib.

Was it likelier, now,
 That this our one out of all worlds beside,
 The what-d'you-call-'em millions, should be just Precisely chosen to make Adam for,
 And the rest o' the tale ? Yet the tale's true, you know. Ib.

I'm eyes, ears, mouth of me, one gaze and
 gape,
 Nothing eludes me, everything's a hint,
 Handle, and help. Ib.

We find great things are made of little things,
 And little things go lessening, till at last Comes God behind them. Ib.

This plain, plump fact. Ib.

Your poet who sings how Greeks
 That never were, in Troy which never was,
 Did this or the other impossible great thing. Ib.

Boston's a hole, the herring-pond is wide,
 V-notes are something, liberty still more.
 Beside, is he the only fool in the world ? Ib.

It's wiser being good than bad ;
 It's safer being meek than fierce ;
 It's fitter being sane than mad.

Apparent Failure.

Letting the rank tongue blossom into speech.
Caliban upon Setebos.

'Thinketh, He dwelleth i' the cold o' the moon.
 'Thinketh He made it, with the sun to match,
 But not the stars ; the stars came otherwise. Ib.

 sun. Ib.

Let twenty pass, and stone the twenty-first. Ib.

A bitter heart that bides its time and bites. Ib.

Stung by the splendour of a sudden thought.
A Death in the Desert. l. 59.

Such ever was love's way ; to rise, it stoops. l. 134.

I seemed left alive
 Like a sea-jelly weak on Patmos strand.
 To tell dry sea-beach gazers how I fared
 When there was mid-sea, and the mighty things. l. 153.

For life, with all it yields of joy and woe,
 And hope and fear,—believe the aged friend,—
 Is just a chance o' the prize of learning love. l. 245.

Burrow awhile and build, broad on the roots of things. Abt Vogler. St. 2.

There shall never be one lost good ! What was, shall live as before. St. 9.

On the earth the broken arcs ; in the heaven,
 a perfect round. Ib.

But God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear ;
 The rest may reason and welcome : 'tis we musicians know. St. 11.

I was ever a fighter, so—one fight more,
 The best and the last !
 I would hate that death bandaged my eyes
 and forbore,
 And bade me creep past. Prospice.

O thou soul of my soul ! I shall clasp thee
 again,
 And with God be the rest. Ib.

For thence,—a paradox
 Which comforts while it mocks,—
 Shall life succeed in that it seems to fail :
 What I aspired to be
 And was not, comforts me.

Rabbi Ben Ezra. 7.

All that is, at all,
 Lasts ever, past recall :
 Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure. Ib. 27.

He fixed thee, 'mid this dance
 Of plastic circumstance. Ib. 28.

Let age approve of youth, and death complete the same ! Ib. 32.

Why where's the need of Temple, when the walls
 O' the world are as that ?

Epilogue. Dramatis Personæ.

Youth means love ;
Vows can't change nature ; priests are only men.

The Ring and the Book (1868-9). 1, 1056.

O lyric Love, half angel and half bird,
And all a wonder and a wild desire !
1, 1391.

The story always old, and always new.
2, 214.

But facts are facts and flinch not. 2, 1049.

Go practise if you please
With men and women : leave a child alone
For Christ's particular love's sake ! 3, 88.

The proper process of unsinning sin
Is to begin well doing. 4, 285.

Oh, make us happy and you make us good.
4, 302.

Mothers, wives, and maids,
These be the tools wherewith priests manage
men. 4, 503.

Everyone, soon or late, comes round by Rome.
5, 296.

Saints, to do us good,
Must be in heaven. 6, 176.

'Twas a thief said the last kind word to Christ :
Christ took the kindness and forgave the theft.
6, 869.

Such man, being but mere man ('twas all she knew),
Must be made sure by beauty's silken bond,
The weakness that subdues the strong, and bows
Wisdom alike and folly. 9, 440.

Faultless to a fault. 9, 1177.

What does the world, told truth, but lie the more ? 10, 673.

Life is probation, and the earth no goal
But starting-point of man. 10, 1436.

There's a new tribunal now,
Higher than God's—the educated man's !
10, 1976.

Inscribe all human effort with one word,
Artistry's haunting curse, the Incomplete !
11, 1560.

You never know what life means till you die :
Even throughout life, 'tis death that makes life live,
Give it whatever the significance. 11, 2375.

Planets of the pale populace of heaven.

The learned eye is still the loving one.
Red Cotton Nightcap Country (1873). Bk. 1.

For this did Paganini comb the fierce
Electric sparks, or to tenuity
Pull forth the inmost wailing of the wire—
No cat-gut could swoon out so much of soul.
1b.

Infantine Art divinely artless. Book 2.

Why with old truth needs new truth disagree ?
1b.

Then his face grew one luminosity. Book 4.

Ignorance is not innocence, but sin.
The Inn Album (1875). Canto 5.

Womanliness means only motherhood ;
All love begins and ends there. Canto 7.

Now your rater and debater
Is balked by a mere spectator
Who simply stares and listens.
Of Pacchiarotto (1876). 7.

Man's work is to labour and leaven—
As best he may—earth here with heaven ;
'Tis work for work's sake that he's needing.
1b. 21.

Then was called a council straight,
Brief and bitter the debate.
Hervé Riel (March, 1871). St. 4.

Praise is deeper than the lips. St. 9.

Work I may dispense
With talk about, since work in evidence,
Perhaps in history ; who knows or cares ?
A Forgiveness (1876).

The thing I pity most
In men is—action prompted by surprise
Of anger. 1b.

Who knows most, doubts not ; entertaining hope
Means recognizing fear.

Two Poets of Croisic (1878). 1. 158.

Needs there groan a world in anguish just to teach us sympathy ? La Salsiaz (1878).

This world has been harsh and strange ;
Something is wrong : there needeth a change.
Holy-Cross Day (1855).

Not a thought to be seen
On his steady brow and quiet mouth.
The Statue and the Bust.

The glory dropped from their youth and love,
And both perceived they had dreamed a dream. 1b.

And the sin I impute to each frustrate ghost
Is—the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin. 1b.

ust for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat.

The Lost Leader (1845).

He that had loved him so, followed him,
honoured him,
Lived in his mild and magnificent eye, learned his great language, caught his clear accents,
Made him our pattern to live and to die.

Lest you should think he never could recapture
The first fine careless rapture !

Ib.

Here and here did England help me : how can I help England ?—say,

Whoso turns as I, this evening, turn to God
to praise and pray,

While Jove's planet rises yonder, silent over Africa.

Home Thoughts from the Sea (1845).

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain

And did he stop and speak to you,

And did you speak to him again ?

How strange it seems, and new !

A good parson once said that where mystery begins religion ends. Cannot I say, as truly at least, of human laws, that where mystery begins, justice ends?

A Vindication of Natural Society.

The lucrative business of mystery. Ib.

Power gradually extirpates from the mind every humane and gentle virtue. Ib.

I have no great opinion of a definition, the celebrated remedy for the cure of this disorder [uncertainty and confusion].

On the Sublime and Beautiful.

Part 1. Introduction.

He perhaps reads of a shipwreck on the coast of Bohemia. Ib.

As the arts advance towards their perfection, the science of criticism advances with equal pace. Ib.

Darkness is more productive of sublime ideas than light. Part 2, sec. 14.

Beauty in distress is much the most affecting beauty. Part 3, sec. 9.

Custom reconciles us to everything.

Party divisions, whether on the whole operating for good or evil, are things inseparable from free government.

Observations on a Publication, "The Present State of the Nation."

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue. Ib.

Well stored with pious frauds, and, like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher than the edification of the hearers. Ib.

A commonplace against war; the easiest of all topics. Ib.

The same sun which gilds all nature, and exhilarates the whole creation, does not shine upon disappointed ambition. Ib.

It is a general popular error to suppose the loudest complainers for the public to be the most anxious for its welfare. Ib.

To complain of the age we live in, to murmur at the present possessors of power, to lament the past, to conceive extravagant hopes of the future, are the common dispositions of the greatest part of mankind.

Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

When bad men combine, the good must associate. Ib.

Of this stamp is the cant of "Not men but measures"; a sort of charm by which many people get loose from every honourable engagement. Ib.

I remember an old scholastic aphorism, which says, "that the man who lives wholly detached from others must be either an angel or a devil." When I see in any of these detached gentlemen of our times the angelic purity, power, and beneficence, I shall admit them to be angels. Ib.

He trespasses against his duty who sleeps upon his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy. Ib.

The plain high-road of finance.

Speech on American Taxation.

There is no knowledge which is not valuable. Ib.

Falsehood has a perennial spring. Ib.

A name that keeps the name of this country respectable in every other. Ib.

Let those who have betrayed him [Lord Chatham] by their adulation, insult him with their malevolence. But what I do not presume to censure, I may have leave to lament. Ib.

It did so happen, that persons had a single office divided between them, who had never spoke to each other in their lives, until they found themselves, they knew not how, pigging together, heads and points, in the same truckle-bed. Ib.

For even then, Sir, even before this splendid orb was entirely set, and whilst the western horizon was in a blaze with his descending glory, on the opposite quarter of the heavens, arose another luminary, and, for his hour, became lord of the ascendant. Ib.

Great men are the guide-posts and landmarks in the State. Ib.

Passion for fame; a passion which is the instinct of all great souls. Ib.

An illness, not, as was then given out, a political, but to my knowledge a very real illness. Ib.

To tax and to please, no more than to love and to be wise, is not given to men. Ib.

I have in general no very exalted opinion of the virtue of paper government.

Speech on Conciliation with America.

(March 22, 1775.)

Refined policy ever has been the parent of confusion; and ever will be so, as long as the world endures. Ib.

The concessions of the weak are the concessions of fear. Ib.

Through a wise and salutary neglect [of the colonies], a generous nature has been suffered to take her own way to perfection; when I reflect upon these effects, when I see how profitable they have been to us, I feel all the pride of power sink, and all presumption in the wisdom of human contrivances melt and die away within me. My rigour relents. I pardon something to the spirit of liberty. Ib.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found. Ib.

All Protestantism, even the most cold and passive, is a sort of dissent. But the religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principle of resistance; it is the dissidence of dissent, and the Protestantism of the Protestant religion. Ib.

Obedience is what makes government, and not the names by which it is called. Ib.

The mysterious virtue of wax and parchment. Ib.

The march of the human mind is slow. Ib.

All government, indeed every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue, and every prudent act, is founded on compromise and barter. Ib.

Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil. Ib.

Magnanimity in politics is not seldom the truest wisdom; and a great empire and little minds go ill together. Ib.

I know many have been taught to think that moderation, in a case like this, is a sort of treason. Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

Between craft and credulity, the voice of reason is stifled. Ib.

If any ask me what a free government is, I answer, that, for any practical purpose, it is what the people think so. Ib.

Liberty, too, must be limited in order to be possessed. Ib.

Nothing in progression can rest on its original plan. We might as well think of rocking a grown man in the cradle of an infant. Ib.

Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot long exist. Ib.

England and Ireland may flourish together. The world is large enough for us both. Let it be our care not to make ourselves too little for it.

Letter to Samuel Span, Esq., of Bristol.

It is the interest of the commercial world that wealth should be found everywhere. Ib.

Corrupt influence, which is in itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder; which loads us, more than millions of debt; which takes away vigour from our arms, wisdom from our councils, and every shadow of authority and credit from the most venerable parts of our constitution.

Speech on the Economical Reform.

(House of Commons, Feb. 11, 1780.)

They defend their errors as if they were defending their inheritance. Ib.

Gaming is a principle inherent in human nature. It belongs to us all. Ib.

Individuals pass like shadows; but the commonwealth is fixed and stable. Ib.

As wealth is power, so all power will infallibly draw wealth to itself by some means or other. Ib.

Kings are naturally lovers of low company. Ib.

[Lord Suffolk] at last paid his tribute to the common treasury to which we all must be taxed. Ib.

The people are the masters. Ib.

Not a weathercock on the top of the edifice, exalted for my levity and versatility, and of no use but to indicate the shiftings of every fashionable gale.

Speech at Bristol (1780).

Whilst freedom is true to itself, everything becomes subject to it. Ib.

Bad laws are the worst sort of tyranny. Ib.

In doing good, we are generally cold, and languid, and sluggish; and of all things afraid of being too much in the right. But the works of malice and injustice are quite in another style. They are finished with a bold, masterly hand. Ib.

41a

This Siren song of ambition.

Ib.

The worthy gentleman [Mr. Coombe], who has been snatched from us at the moment of the election, and in the middle of the contest while his desires were as warm, and his hopes as eager as ours, has feelingly told us, what shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.*

Speech at Bristol on Declining the Poll.

He has put to hazard his ease, his security, his interest, his power, even his darling popularity, for the benefit of a people whom he has never seen.

Speech on Mr. Fox's East-India Bill.
(House of Commons, Dec. 1, 1783.)

Flattery corrupts both the receiver and giver; and adulation is not of more service to the people than to kings.

Reflections on the Revolution in France (1790).

Politics and the pulpit are terms that have little agreement. No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity.

Ib.

Surely the church is a place where one day's truce ought to be allowed to the dissensions and animosities of mankind.

Ib.

It is not pleasant as compliment; it is not wholesome as instruction.

Ib.

People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors.

Ib.

Government is a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants. Men have a right that these wants should be provided for by this wisdom.

Ib.

But the age of chivalry is gone. That of sophisters, economists, and calculators, has succeeded; and the glory of Europe is extinguished for ever.

Ib.

It is gone, that sensibility of principle, that chastity of honour, which felt a stain like a wound.

Ib.

Vice itself lost half its evil, by losing all its grossness.

Ib.

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle.

Ib.

Learning will be cast into the mire, and trodden down under the hoofs of a swinish multitude.†

Ib.

Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number; or that, after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour.

Ib.

Man is by his constitution a religious animal.

Ib.

A perfect democracy is therefore the most shameless thing in the world.

Ib.

The men of England—the men, I mean, of light and leading in England.*

Ib.

They were possessed with a spirit of proselytism in the most fanatical degree.

Ib.

Nobility is a graceful ornament to the civil order. It is the Corinthian capital of polished society.

Ib.

Superstition is the religion of feeble minds.

Ib.

Eloquence may exist without a proportionable degree of wisdom.

Ib.

Difficulty is a severe instructor.

Ib.

He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves, and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper.

Ib.

Our patience will achieve more than our force.

Ib.

Good order is the foundation of all good things.

Ib.

The only infallible criterion of wisdom to vulgar judgments—success.

Letter to a Member of the National Assembly (1791).

Cromwell was a man in whom ambition had not wholly suppressed, but only suspended, the sentiments of religion.

Ib.

They who always labour can have no true judgment.

Ib.

These are amongst the effects of unremitted labour, when men exhaust their attention, burn out their candles, and are left in the dark.

Ib.

Every revolution contains in it something of evil.

An Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs.

The only liberty I mean, is a liberty connected with order; that not only exists along with order and virtue, but which cannot exist at all without them.

Speech at his arrival at Bristol.

A Letter to a Noble Lord (1796).

These gentle historians, on the contrary, dip their pens in nothing but the milk of human kindness. Ib.

The king, and his faithful subjects, the Lords and Commons of this realm—the triple cord, which no man can break. Ib.

If we command our wealth, we shall be rich and free; if our wealth commands us, we are poor indeed.

Letters on a Regicidal Peace.

Nothing is so rash as fear; and the counsels of pusillanimity very rarely put off, whilst they are always sure to aggravate, the evils from which they would fly.

No. 1 (1796).

Example is the school of mankind, and they will learn at no other. Ib.

Never, no never, did Nature say one thing, and Wisdom say another. No. 3 (1797).

Well is it known that ambition can creep as well as soar. Ib.

People crushed by law have no hopes but from power. If laws are their enemies, they will be enemies to laws; and those who have much to hope and nothing to lose will always be dangerous, more or less.

Letter to the Hon. G. J. Fox. (Oct. 8, 1777.)

We view the establishment of the English colonies on principles of liberty as that which is to render this kingdom venerable to future ages.

Address to the British Colonists in North America (1777).

The coquetry of public opinion, which has her caprices, and must have her way.

In all forms of government the people is the true legislator. Ib.

There are two, and only two, foundations of law, . . . equity and utility. Ib.

Veneration of antiquity is congenial to the human mind. Ch. 3, part 2.

Nothing is so fatal to religion as indifference, which is, at least, half infidelity.

Letter. To Wm. Smith. (Jan. 29, 1795.)

Somebody has said that a king may make a nobleman, but he cannot make a gentleman. Ib.

The grand instructor, Time.

Letter. To Sir H. Langrish. (May 26, 1795.)

A very great part of the mischiefs that vex the world arises from words.

Letter. To Richard Burke. (c. 1795.)

All titles terminate in prescription. Ib.

Dissent, not satisfied with toleration, is not conscience, but ambition.

Speech on the Acts of Uniformity.

(House of Commons, Feb., 1772.)

If it is not right to hurt, it is neither right nor wise to menace.

Speech on a Bill for the relief of Protestant Dissenters.

(House of Commons, 1773.)

Toleration is good for all, or it is good for none. Ib.

They make it a principle of their irreligion outwardly to conform to any religion. Ib.

Old religious factions are volcanoes burnt out.

Speech on the Petition of the Unitarians.

(House of Commons, May 11, 1792.)

Dangers by being despised grow great. Ib.

Early and provident fear is the mother of safety. Ib.

The greater the power the more dangerous the abuse.

Speech on the motion on the Middlesex Election.

(House of Commons, Feb. 7, 1771.)

Prescription is the most solid of all titles.

Reform of Representation in the House of Commons.

(Speech: May 7, 1782.)

The individual is foolish; the multitude, for the moment is foolish; when they act without deliberation; but the species is wise, and, when time is given to it, as a species it always acts right. Ib.

The greatest inquest of the nation [the British House of Commons].

Impeachment of Warren Hastings.

There is but one law for all, namely, that law which governs all law, the law of our Creator, the law of humanity, justice, equity—the law of nature and of nations. (May 28, 1794.)

Men that are greatly guilty are never wise. (May 30, 1794.)

No, not a good imitation of Johnson. It has all his pomp, without his force; it has all the nodosities of the oak without its strength; it has all the contortions of the sibyl, without the inspiration.

Remark on some one saying that Croft's "Life of Dr. Young" was a good imitation of Johnson. (Prior's "Life of Burke," p. 468.)

Elegy on 1788.

With knowledge so vast, and with judgment
so strong,
No man with the half of 'em e'er went far wrong ;
With passions so potent, and fancies so bright,
No man with the half of 'em e'er went quite right. Sketch : inscribed to C. J. Fox.

Good Lord, what is man ? for as simple he

* The "Selkirk Grace," though generally attributed to Burns, is a version of an older anonymous rhyme. In the MSS. of Dr. Plume, of Maldon, Essex, in a handwriting of about 1650, it appears thus:

Some have meat but cannot eat;
 Some could eat but have no meat;
 We have meat and can all eat;
 Blest, therefore, be God for our meat.

* The earliest known version of "Auld Lang Syne" (attributed to Francis Sempill or to Sir Robert Ayton, but without authority) is in James Watson's Choice Collection of Scots Poems (1711), Part 3 :
Should old acquaintance be forgot, and never thought upon ?

The flames of love extinguished, and freely past and gone ?

A ballad, "The True Scotsman's Lament for the Loss of the Rights of their Ancient Kingdom," dated March 6, 1707 (Roxburghe Collection), has the refrain :
"Why will ye not again reflect on old long sine ?"
"An Excellent New Song" which begins : "O Caledon ! O Caledon ! how wretched is thy fate !" dated March, 1707 (Roxburghe Collection) is stated to be "To the Tune of Old Long Syne."

St. 177.

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society, where none intrudes,
By the deep sea, and music in its roar;
I love not man the less, but Nature more,
From these our interviews, in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

Oh, God! it is a fearful thing
To see the human soul take wing
In any shape, in any mood—
I've seen it rushing forth in blood,
I've seen it on the breaking ocean
Strive with a swollen, convulsive motion. St. 8.

He faded, and so calm and meek,
So softly worn, so sweetly weak,
So tearless, yet so tender—kind,
And grieved for those he left behind;
With all the while a cheek whose bloom
Was a mockery of the tomb,
Whose tints as gently sunk away
As a departing rainbow's ray—
An eye of most transparent light,
That almost made the dungeon bright,

Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,
When tipped with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe;
Like other charmers, wooing the caress,
More dazzlingly when daring in full dress.
Yet thy true lovers more admire by far
Thy naked beauties—give me a cigar! Ib.

But yet what minutes! Moments like to these Rend men's lives into immortalities.
Canto 3, st. 4.

My slumbers, if I slumber, are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought.

But grief should be the instructor of the wise :
Sorrow is knowledge. Ib.

The tree of knowledge is not that of life. Ib.

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains ;

They crowned him long ago

On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow. Ib.

But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns, we,
Half dust, half deity, alike unfit
To sink or soar. Act i. 2.

Act ii. 1.

Self-defence is a virtue,

Sole bulwark of all right. Ib.

And femininely meaneth furiously,
Because all passions in excess are female.
Act iii. 1.

I am the very slave of circumstance
And impulse—borne away with every breath !
Act iv. 1.

So much for monuments that have forgotten
Their very record ! Act v. 1.

Because all earth, except his native land,
To him is one wide prison, and each breath
Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison,
Consuming but not killing.

The Two Foscari (1821). Act i. 1.

So we are slaves,

The greatest as the meanest—nothing rests
Upon our will. Act ii. 1.

And when we think we lead we most are led.
Ib.

He who loves not his country, can love nothing. Act iii. 1.

He who bows not to him has bowed to me.
Cain (1821). Act i. 1.

My counsel is a kind one ; for 'tis even Given chiefly at my own expense : 'tis true,
'Twill not be followed, so there's little lost.
Act ii., 2.

But for your petty, picking, downright thievery,
We scorn it as we do board-wages.

Werner (1823). Act ii. 1.

Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
With groundless jealousy repine,
With silly whims and fancies frantic
Merely to make our love romantic ?

Hours of Idleness (1807). To a Lady.

Though women are angels, yet wedlock's the Talk that does not end in any kind of action is better suppressed altogether.

Inaugural Address at Edinburgh. (1866).

It is the first of all problems for a man to find out what kind of work he is to do in this universe. Ib.

Work is the grand cure of all the maladies and miseries that ever beset mankind. Ib.

I never heard tell of any clever man that came of entirely stupid people. Ib.

Maidservants, I hear people complaining, are getting instructed in the "ologies." Ib.

The glory of a workman, still more of a master-workman, that he does his work well, ought to be his most precious possession; like the "honour of a soldier," dearer to him than life. Shooting Niagara, 7. (1867).

The great law of culture is: Let each become all that he was created capable of being.

J. P. F. Richter. (1827).

A well-written life is almost as rare as a well-spent one. Ib.

It is dangerous to begin with denial, and fatal to end with it.

His religion, at best, is an anxious wish; like that of Rabelais, "a great Perhaps."* Ib.

The words of Milton are true in all things, and were never truer than in this: "He who would write heroic poems must make his whole life a heroic poem."† Ib.

Would that every Johnson in the world had his veridical Boswell, or leash of Boswells. Voltaire.

He does not, like Bolingbroke, patronise Providence. Ib.

Schelling, we have been informed, gives account of Fichte to the following effect: "The Philosophy of Fichte was like lightning; it appeared only for a moment, but it kindled a fire which will burn for ever." Novalis.

It is the instinct of understanding to contradict reason. Ib.

(Jacobi the elder, as quoted by Carlyle.)

The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past, and flow onwards to the remotest Future.

Signs of the Times (1829).

It is the Age of Machinery, in every outward and inward sense of that word. Ib.

A machine for converting the heathen. (Applied to the Bible Society.) Ib.

In these days, more emphatically than ever, "to live, signifies to unite with a party or to make one." Ib.

One of their [Continental] philosophers has lately discovered that "as the liver secretes bile, so does the brain secrete thought," which astonishing discovery Dr. Cabanis . . . has pushed into his minutest developments. . . . Thought, he is inclined to hold, is still secreted by the brain; but then, poetry and religion (and it is really worth knowing) are "a product of the smaller intestines." Ib.

To both parties it [Government] is emphatically a machine: to the discontented a "taxing machine," to the contented a "machine for securing property." Ib.

* "The grand Perhaps."—Browning; Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Act i. 1.

"Dash! and through with it!"—That's the better watchword.

Act i. 2.

Men's words are ever bolder than their deeds.

Act i. 3.

Heaven never meant him for that passive thing

That can be struck and hammered out to suit
Another's taste and fancy. He'll not dance
To every tune of every minister.

It goes against his nature—he can't do it.

Act i. 4.

My son! the road the human being travels,
That, on which BLESSING comes and goes,
doth follow

The river's course, the valley's playful windings,

Curves round the cornfield and the hill of vines,

Honouring the holy bounds of property!

And thus secure, though late, leads to its end.

Act ii. 1.

For fable is Love's world, his home, his birthplace;

Delightedly dwells he 'mong fays and talismans,

And spirits; and delightedly believes

Divinities, being himself divine.

The intelligible forms of ancient poets,

The fair humanities of old religion,

The power, the beauty, and the majesty,

That had their haunts in dale, or piny mountain,

Or forest by slow stream, or pebbly spring,
Or chasms, and wat'ry depths; all these have vanished,

They live no longer in the faith of reason;
But still the heart doth need a language, still

Doth the old instinct bring back the old names.

Act ii. 4.

My way must be straight on. True with the tongue,

False with the heart—I may not, cannot be.

Act iii. 3.

Power on an ancient consecrated throne,

Strong in possession, founded in old custom;

Power by a thousand tough and stringy roots

Fixed to the people's pious nursery-faith.

Act iv. 4.

Time consecrates;

And what is grey with age becomes religion.

How sweet their memory still!

But they have left an aching void,

The world can never fill.

Olney Hymns (1779). No. 1.

And Satan trembles when he sees

The weakest saint upon his knees. No. 29

God moves in a mysterious way

His wonders to perform;

He plants His footsteps in the sea,

And rides upon the storm. No. 68.

Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take,

The clouds ye so much dread

Are big with mercy, and shall break

In blessings on your head.* Ib.

Behind a frowning providence

He hides a smiling face. Ib.

The bud may have a bitter taste,

But sweet will be the flower. Ib.

Blind unbelief is sure to err,

And scan his work in vain. Ib.

Musical as the chime of tinkling rills,

Weak to perform, though mighty to pretend.

The Progress of Error (c. 1782). l. 14.

" Sir ! I believe it on that ground alone ;
I could not, had I seen it with my own."
l. 231.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct,
The language plain, and incidents well linked ;
Tell not as new what everybody knows,
And, new or old, still hasten to a close.
l. 235.

Pernicious weed ! whose scent the fair annoys,
Unfriendly to society's chief joys,
Thy worst effect is banishing for hours
The sex whose presence civilises ours.

The solemn fop, significant and budge;
A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge.
l. 299.

His wit invites you by his looks to come,
But when you knock it never is at home.
l. 303.

Some men employ their health, an ugly trick,
In making known how oft they have been sick.
l. 311.

Thus always teasing others, always teased,
His only pleasure is—to be displeased.
l. 345.

Our wasted oil unprofitably burns,
Like hidden lamps in old sepulchral urns.
l. 357.

And finds a changing clime a happy source
Of wise reflection and well-timed discourse.
l. 387.

As from a seven years' transportation, home.
l. 399.

And though the fox he follows may be tamed,
A mere fox-follower never is reclaimed.
l. 409.

Whose only fit companion is his horse.
l. 412.

Oh, to the club, the scene of savage joys,
The school of coarse good-fellowship and noise.
l. 421.

Fashion, leader of a chattering train, Whom man, for his own hurt, permits to reign.
l. 457.

No—marble and recording brass decay,
And, like the graver's memory, pass away.
l. 551.

It moves me more perhaps than folly ought.
l. 625.

And useless as a candle in a skull.
l. 785.

A poet does not work by square or line.
l. 794.

Though such continual zigzags in a book,*
Such drunken reelings, have an awkward look.
l. 866.

To find the medium asks some share of wit,
And therefore 'tis a mark fools never hit.
l. 884.

Hackneyed in business, wearied at that oar,
Which thousands, once fast chained to, quit
no more.
Retirement. l. 1.

And having lived a trifler, die a man.

l. 219.

The disencumbered Atlas of the state.
l. 394.

The good we never miss we rarely prize.
l. 406.

Some pleasures live a month and some a year,
But short the date of all we gather here.
l. 459.

Nature indeed looks prettily in rhyme.
l. 567.

He likes the country, but in truth must own,
Most likes it when he studies it in town.
l. 573.

Peers are not always generous as well-bred.
l. 597.

Absence of occupation is not rest,
A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.
l. 623.

A life of ease a difficult pursuit.
l. 634.

An idler is a watch that wants both hands;
As useless if it goes as when it stands.
l. 681.

Chase
A panting syllable through time and space.
l. 691.

Till authors hear at length one general cry,
Tickle and entertain us, or we die!
l. 707.

Beggars invention and makes fancy tame.
l. 709.

I praise the Frenchman; * his remark was shrewd,—

"How sweet, how passing sweet is solitude!
But grant me still a friend in my retreat, Whom I may whisper—Solitude is sweet."
l. 739.

O'erjoyed was he to find,
That though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.
History of John Gilpin (c. 1782). St. 8.

But imitative strokes can do no more
Than please the eye. l. 426.

The earth was made so various, that the mind
Of desultory man, studious of change,
And pleased with novelty, might be indulged. l. 506.

In cities vice is hidden with most ease,
Or seen with least reproach. l. 689.

Where has commerce such a mart,
So rich, so thronged, so drained, and so

Mountains interposed,
Make enemies of nations, who had else
Like kindred drops been mingled into one. l. 17.

I would not have a slave to till my ground,
To carry me, to fan me while I sleep,
And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
That sinews bought and sold have ever earned. l. 29.

Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs
Receive our air, that moment they are free;
They touch our country, and their shackles fall. l. 40.

England, with all thy faults, I love thee still,
My country! † l. 206.

Though thy clime
Be fickle, and thy year, most part deformed
With dripping rains, or withered by a frost,

99b

I would not yet exchange thy sullen skies,
And fields without a flower, for warmer

With all her vines. l. 209.

In the name of soldiership and sense. l. 225.

Presume to lay their hand upon the ark
Of her magnificent and awful cause. l. 231.

Praise enough
To fill the ambition of a private man,
That Chatham's language was his mother-tongue. l. 235.

The nose of nice nobility. l. 259.

We justly boast
At least superior jockeyship, and claim
The honours of the turf as all our own. l. 275.

There is a pleasure in poetic pains,
Which only poets know. l. 285.

Reading what they never wrote,
Just fifteen minutes, huddle up their work,
And with a well-bred whisper close the scene. l. 411.

Heard at conventicle, where worthy men,
Misled by custom, strain celestial themes
Through the pressed nostril. l. 437.

Whoe'er was edified, themselves were not. l. 444.

Oh spare your idol! think him human still;
Charms he may have, but he has frailties too;
Dote not too much, nor spoil what ye admire. l. 496.

How oft, when Paul has served us with a text,
Has Epictetus, Plato, Tully, preached! l. 539.

Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour. l. 606.

She that asks
Her dear five hundred friends. l. 652.

A graduated dunce. l. 749.

And he was competent whose purse was so. l. 752.

A man of letters, and of manners too. l. 792.

Crack the satiric thong. The Garden. l. 26.

Domestic happiness, thou only bliss
Of Paradise that has survived the Fall! l. 41.

Where pleasure is adored,
That reeling goddess with the zoneless waist
And wandering eyes, still leaning on the arm
Of Novelty, her fickle frail support. l. 51.

Dream after dream ensues,
And still they dream that they shall still succeed,
And still are disappointed. l. 127.

Some write a narrative of wars, and feats
Of heroes little known, and call the rant
A history. l. 139.

† This is from a classical source. Montaigne (Essays, 1580, Bk. 2, ch. 12, ad fin.) has the following as from a "pagan writer": "Oh! what a vile and abject thing," says he, "is man unless he can erect himself above humanity." Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd. For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous. . . . He may lift himself if God lend him His hand of special grace;
he may lift himself . . . by means wholly celestial.
It is for our Christian religion, and not for his Stoic virtue, to pretend to this divine and miraculous metamorphosis."

Drunk'ness, the darling favourite of hell.
l. 51.

That vain, ill-natured thing, an Englishman.
l. 133.

That heterogeneous thing, an Englishman.
l. 280.

Wealth, howsoever got, in England makes
Lords of mechanics, gentlemen of rakes ;
Antiquity and birth are needless here ;
'Tis impudence and money makes a peer.
l. 360.

Great families of yesterday we show,
And lords, whose parents were the Lord knows who.
l. 374.

No panegyric needs their praise record ;
An Englishman ne'er wants his own good word.
Part 2, l. 152.

Restraint from ill is freedom to the wise ;
But Englishmen do all restraint despise.
l. 206.

For Englishmen are ne'er contented long.
l. 244.

And of all plagues with which mankind are
curst,
Ecclesiastic tyranny's the worst.
l. 299.

When kings the sword of justice first lay down,
They are no kings, though they possess the crown ;
Titles are shadows, crowns are empty things :
The good of subjects is the end of kings.
l. 313.

For justice is the end of government. l. 368.
But English gratitude is always such
To hate the hand which doth oblige too much.
l. 409.

Wise men affirm it is the English way
Never to grumble till they come to pay.
Ib., Britannia, l. 84.

The best of men cannot suspend their fate ;
The good die early, and the bad die late.
Character of the late Dr. S. Annesley.

We loved the doctrine for the teacher's sake.
Ib.

Nature has left this tincture in the blood,
That all men would be tyrants if they could.
The Kentish Petition (1701). Addenda.

The art of war, which I take to be the highest perfection of human knowledge.
The History of Projects (1697). Introduction.

Self-destruction is the effect of cowardice in the highest extreme.
Of Projectors.

Women, in my observation, have little or no difference in them, but as they are or are not distinguished by education.

Of Academies.

I do not prescribe fire and faggot, but as Scipio said of Carthage, Delenda est Carthago.
The Shortest Way with the Dissenters (1702).

Moses was a merciful, meek man, and yet with what fury did he run through the camp, and cut the throats of three-and-thirty thousand of his dear Israelites that were fallen into idolatry.
Ib.

Alas the Church of England ! What with Popery on one hand, and schismatics on the other, how has she been crucified between two thieves !
Ib.

These [the lawyers] are the mountebanks of State,
Who by the sleight of tongues can crimes create.

A Hymn to the Pillory (1703).

For crime is all the shame of punishment.
Ib.

Tell them the men that placed him here
Are friends unto the times ;
But at a loss to find his guilt,
They can't commit his crimes.

The best of men
That e'er wore earth about him, was a sufferer ;
A soft, meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit,
The first true gentleman that ever breathed.

Happy when both to the same centre move,
When Kings give liberty, and subjects love.
l. 333.

Thus Kings, by grasping more than they could hold,

First made their subjects by oppression bold;
And popular sway, by forcing Kings to give
More than was fit for subjects to receive,
Ran to the same extremes; and one excess
Made both, by striving to be greater, less.
l. 343.

Such was his force of eloquence, to make
The hearers more concerned than he that spake;

Each seemed to act the part he came to see,
And none was more a looker-on than he.

Books, we are told, propose to instruct or to amuse. Indeed! . . . The true antithesis to knowledge, in this case, is not pleasure but power. All that is literature seeks to communicate power: all that is not literature, to communicate knowledge.

And fancy paints the muffled drum,
And plaintive fife,
And the loud volley o'er the grave,
That sounds sad requiems to the brave.
Farewell and Return.

Then trust me there's nothing like drinking
So pleasant on this side the grave;
It keeps the unhappy from thinking,
And makes e'en the valiant more brave.
Nothing like Grog.

Then farewell, my trim-built wherry!
Oars, and coat, and badge, farewell!
Poor Tom.

If, my hearty, you'd not like a lubber
appear,
You must very well know how to hand, reef,

* This is perhaps derived from May Fair, a satire published in 1827.

† "There beauty half her glory veils,
In cabs, those gondolas on wheels."
Mr. H. Schütz Wilson, claimed to have originated the saying as applied to a hansom in a novel The Three Paths (1859). H. de Balzac in Physiologie du Mariage (1829), wrote of French cabs (fiacres) as "ces gondoles parisiennes."

† "The world in its anecdote" is a phrase used by Samuel Rogers and is referred to in the preface to Isaac D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature. Benjamin Disraeli also mentioned the phrase in his life of his father, Isaac D'Israeli.

He who would search for pearls, must dive below. Prologue—All for Love.

Poets, like disputants, when reasons fail,
Have one sure refuge left—and that's to rail.
Epilogue—All for Love.

True fops help nature's work, and go to school
To file and finish God Almighty's fool.
Epilogue—Man of Mode.

When Fortune favours, none but fools will dally. Epilogue—The Duke of Guise.

For heaven be thanked we live in such an age,
When no man dies for love, but on the stage.
Epilogue—Mithridates.

Bold knaves thrive, without one grain of sense,
But good men starve for want of impudence.
Epilogue—Constantine the Great.

Whate'er the story be, the moral's true.

Life is a series of surprises. Ib.
 Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm. Ib.
 Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing. Art.
 Language is fossil poetry. The Poet.
 The wise through excess of wisdom is made a fool. Experience.
 Nature hates calculators. Ib.
 All writing comes by the grace of God, and all doing and having. Ib.
 The years teach much which the days never know. Ib.
 The individual is always mistaken. Ib.
 Those who listened to Lord Chatham felt that there was something finer in the man than anything which he said. Character.
 The city is recruited from the country. Manners.
 Society . . . being in its nature a convention, it loves what is conventional, or what belongs to coming together. Ib.
 We do not quite forgive a giver. Gifts.
 The difference between landscape and landscape is small, but there is great difference between the beholders. Nature.
 Of the two great parties which, at this hour, almost share the nation between them, I should say that one has the best cause, and the other contains the best men. Politics.
 Of all debts men are least willing to pay the taxes. What a satire this on Government! Ib.
 Is not every man sometimes a radical in politics? Men are conservative when they are least vigorous, or when they are most luxurious. They are conservatives after dinner. New England Reformers.
 Men in all ways are better than they seem. Ib.
 The reward of a thing well done is to have done it. Ib.
 Life is not so short but that there is always room for courtesy. Social Aims.

Endless parting

With all we can call ours, with all our sweetness,

With youth, strength, pleasure, people, time,
nay reason!

For in the silent grave, no conversation,
No joyful tread of friends, no voice of lovers!
No careful father's counsels, nothing's heard,
For nothing is, but all oblivion,
Dust and an endless darkness.

The French have a similar rhyme about St. Médard's day (June 8) and about the day of SS. Gervais and Protais (June 19). A Swiss version states that if it rains on St. Médard's day there will be rain for six weeks following, unless St. Barnabas (June 11) has set matters right. In Ben Jonson's Every Man out of His Humour (1599) Sordido, whose chief felicity is in "reading of almanacks," says: "O here, St.
Swithin's, the 15th day, variable weather, for the most

The noiseless foot of Time steals swiftly by,
And, ere we dream of manhood, age is nigh!
Sat. 9, 182.

* See Addition: "The post of honour is a private station" (p. 2a).

† Referring to Andronicus I. Comnenus. See Hyde's (Clarendon's) History of the Revolution, where a similar expression is used, and is stated to be a quotation of "what was said of Cinna." In the Letters of Junius (1770) the same idea occurs, but the wording is varied. See "Junius."

* Samuel Johnson altered the second line to: "All at her work the village maiden sings"; and in the third line he substituted "while" for "as." A parallel saying current in the French vineyards is "Bouche qui mord à la chanson ne mord pas à la grappe" ("Mouth which is busy with song is not busy with the grapes"), quoted by Edmond About in Les Mariages de Paris, with the remark that the singing of the "vendageuses" profits the owner of the vineyard.

One only master grasps the whole domain,
And half a tillage stints thy smiling plain.

Ib.

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay;
Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
A breath can make them, as a breath has made;

But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied.
A time there was, ere England's griefs began,
When every rood of ground maintained its man;

For him light labour spread her wholesome store,
Just gave what life required, but gave no more;

His best companions, innocence and health;
And his best riches, ignorance of wealth. Ib.

How blest is he who crowns in shades like these
A youth of labour with an age of ease. Ib.

Sinks to the grave with unperceived decay,
While resignation gently slopes the way;
And all his prospects brightening to the last,
His heaven commences ere the world be past. Ib.

And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind. Ib.

A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had changed nor wished to change his place;

Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power,
By doctrines fashioned to the varying hour;
Far other aims his heart had learned to prize,
More bent to raise the wretched than to rise. Ib.

He chid their wanderings, but relieved their pain. Ib.

Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
Shouldered his crutch, and showed how fields were won. Ib.

And quite forgot their vices in their woe;
Careless their merits or their faults to scan,
His pity gave ere charity began. Ib.

And even his failings leaned to virtue's side. Ib.

And, as a bird each fond endearment tries,
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,

He tried each art, reprov'd each dull delay,
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way. Ib.

At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
His looks adorned the venerable place;
Truth from his lips prevailed with double sway,

And fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray. Ib.

And plucked his gown to share the good man's smile. Ib.

As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,

Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,

Eternal sunshine settles on its head. Ib.

A man severe he was, and stern to view;
I knew him well, and every truant knew.
Well had the boding tremblers learned to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
Conveyed the dismal tidings when he frowned;
Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault. Ib.

In arguing, too, the parson owned his skill,
For ev'n though vanquished, he could argue still;

While words of learned length, and thundering sound,

Amazed the gazing rustics ranged around;
And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,

That one small head could carry all he knew. Ib.

Where village statesmen talked with looks profound,

And news much older than their ale went round. Ib.

A book may be amusing with numerous errors, or it may be very dull without a single absurdity.

Handsome is as handsome does. Ib.

One virtue he had in perfection, which was prudence—often the only one that is left us at seventy-two. Ch. 2.

I was never much displeased with those harmless delusions that tend to make us more happy. Ch. 3.

Let us draw upon content for the deficiencies of fortune. Ib.

* See Gibbon.

† See Proverbs: "A door must be either open or shut."

‡ See ante, "Where'er I roam," etc.—The Traveller.

151a

The nakedness of the indigent world may be clothed from the trimmings of the vain.*

Ch. 4.

There is no character so contemptible as a man that is a fortune-hunter.

Ch. 5.

The jests of the rich are ever successful.

Ch. 7.

I find you want me to furnish you with argument and intellects too. No, sir, there I protest you are too hard for me.

Ib.

With other fashionable topics, such as pictures, taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glasses.

Ch. 9.

To say the truth, I was tired of being always wise.

Ch. 10.

Mr. Burchell . . . at the conclusion of every sentence would cry out "Fudge!"—an expression which displeased us all.

Ch. 11.

The greatest object in the universe, says a certain philosopher, is a good man struggling with adversity; yet there is a still greater, which is the good man that comes to relieve it.

Ch. 30.

I can't say whether we had more wit amongst us now than usual, but I am certain we had more laughing, which answered the end as well.

Ch. 32.

Books teach us very little of the world.

Letter. To Henry Goldsmith. Feb., 1759.

Could a man live by it, it were not unpleasant employment to be a poet.

Ib.

I do not love a man who is zealous for nothing.

Expunged passage in "The Vicar of Wakefield" (quoted by Johnson).

At this every lady drew up her mouth as if going to pronounce the letter P.

Letter. To Robt. Bryanton. Sept. 26, 1753.

GOODRICH, Samuel Griswold
("Peter Parley") (1793-1860)

'Tis as true as the fairy tales told in the books.

Birthright of the Humming Birds.

GORDON, Adam Lindsay† (1833-1870)

Though rashness can hope for but one result,
We are heedless, when fate draws nigh us;
And the maxim holds good, Quem perdere vult Deus, dementat prius.

Ye Wearie Wayfarer. Fytte 2.

No game was ever yet worth a rap

For a rational man to play,
Into which no accident, no mishap,
Could possibly find its way.

Ib., Fytte 4.

* Also found in She Stoops to Conquer, Act I. 1. See p. 150a.

† He sometimes signed himself "Lionel Gordon."

151b

Oh sunderings short of body and breath!
Oh battle and murder and sudden death!

Against which the Liturgy preaches;
By the will of a just, yet a merciful Power,
Less bitter, perchance, in the mystic hour,
When the wings of the shadowy angel lower,
Than man in his blindness teaches.

Ib., Fytte 5.

Yet if once we efface the joys of the chase
From the land, and outroot the Stud,
Good-bye to the Anglo-Saxon race,
Farewell to the Norman blood!

Ib., Fytte 7.

Question not, but hoe and labour

Till yon goal be won,
Helping every feeble neighbour,
Seeking help from none;
Life is mostly froth and bubble,
Two things stand like stone—
KINDNESS in another's trouble,
COURAGE in your own.

Ib., Fytte 8.

Yet some must swim when others sink;
And some must sink when others swim;
Make merry, comrades, eat and drink—
The lights are growing dim.

Sunlight on the Sea.

Ah me! we believe in evil,
Where once we believed in good;
The world, the flesh, and the devil
Are easily understood.

Wormwood and Nightshade.

The restless throbbings and burnings
That hope unsatisfied brings;
The weary longings and yearnings
For the mystical better things.

Ib.

Yet if man, of all the Creator planned,
His noblest work is reckoned,
Of the works of His hand, by sea or by land,
The horse may at least rank second.

Hippodromania. Part 1, st. 3.

A little season of love and laughter,
Of light and life, and pleasure and pain,
And a horror of outer darkness after,
And the dust returneth to dust again.
Then the lesser life shall be as the greater,
And the lover of life shall join the hater,
And the one thing cometh, sooner or later,
And no one knoweth the loss or gain.

The Swimmer. St. 10.

She was iron-sinewed and satin-skinned,
Ribbed like a drum and limbed like a deer,
Fierce as the fire and fleet as the wind;
There was nothing she couldn't climb or clear.

The Romance of Britomarte. St. 6.

'Gainst the logic of the devil
Human logic strives in vain.

Ashtaroth. The Wayside House.

GOSSE, Edmund William (1849)

And Love, that watched us ever from afar, Came fluttering to our side, and oried, "O ye

Who think to fly, ye cannot fly from me;
Lo! I am with you always where you are."
On Viol and Flute (1873). 15. Reconciliation.

152a

Weak am I, full of faults, and on the brink
Of Death, perchance with awe my pulse shall move;
I am not fit to die, and yet I think
I have not sinned against the God of Love.

Apologia.

They win who never near the goal;
They run who halt on wounded feet;
Art hath its martyrs like the soul,
Its victors in defeat.

Memorial Verses. Blake.

My faith in beauty shall not fail
Because I fail to understand.

Epilogue.

So to my days' extremity.
May I, in perdition infinite
Attend the beauty that must be,
And, though it slay me, welcome it.

Ib.

GOULD, Hannah Flagg (1789-1865)

He went to the windows of those who slept,
And over each pane, like a fairy, crept;
Wherever he breathed, wherever he stepped,
By the light of the morn, were seen
Most beautiful things; there were flowers and trees;
There were beves of birds, and swarms of bees;
There were cities, with temples and towers;
and these
All pictured in silver sheen!

The Frost.

GOWER, John (1325?-1408)

The heven is fer, the worlde is nigh.

Confessio Amantis. Prol. 261.

For every worldès thinge is vain,
And ever goth the whele aboute.

Ib., 560.

Now here, now there, now to, now fro,
Now up, now down, the world goth so.
And ever hath done and ever shal.

Ib., 569.

He hath the sore which no man heleth,
The whiche is clepèd lacke of herte.

Bk. 4, 334.

But she that is the source and welle
Of wele or wo. (Venus.)

Ib., 147.

Men may recover loss of good,
But so wise man yet never stood
Which may recover time y-lore [lost].*

Bk. 4, 1382.

A fresshe, a free, a frendly man.

Bk. 5.

152b

The freilè flessh, whose nature is
Ay ready for to sporne and fall,
The firstè foman is of all.
It werreth night, it werreth day,
So that a man hath never rest
Forthy (therefore) is thilkè (that same) knight

By harmony the world was made.

The British Enchanters (1706). i. 1.

Who to a woman trusts his peace of mind,
Trusts a frail bark, with a tempestuous wind.

ii. 1.

Of all the plagues with which the world is
curst,

Of every ill, a woman is the worst.

Ib.

153^a

Marriage the happiest bond of love might be,
If hands were only joined where hearts agree.
v. 1.

Our present joys are sweeter for past pain;
To Love and Heaven by suffering we attain.
v. 2.

No vengeance like a woman's. Ib.

Beauty to no complexion is confined,
Of all colours, and by none defined.

The Progress of Beauty. l. 77.

When once thy foot enters the church, be bare.
 God is more there than thou. Ib.

Kneeling ne'er spoiled silk stocking : quit thy state.

All equal are within the church's gate. Ib.

Resort to sermons, but to prayers most :
 Praying's the end of preaching. O be drest !
 Stay not for th' other pin. Ib.

Bring not thy plough, thy plots, thy pleasures hither. Ib.

Judge not the preacher ; for he is thy Judge :
 If thou mislike him, thou conceiv'st him not.
 God calleth preaching folly. Do not grudge
 To pick out treasures from an earthen pot.
 The worst speaks something good : if all want
 sense,

God takes a text, and preaches patience. Ib.

Play the man.
 Look not on pleasures as they come, but go. Ib.

If thou do ill, the joy fades, not the pains ;
 If well, the pain doth flee, the joy remains.

O day most calm, most bright,
 The fruit of this, the next world's bud ;
 Th' endorsement of supreme delight,
 Writ by a friend, and with his blood.
Sunday.

The other days and thou
 Make up one man ; whose face thou art
 Knocking at heaven with thy brow :
 The worky-days are the back-part ;
 The burden of the week lies there. Ib.

The Sundays of man's life,
 Threaded together on Time's string,
 Make bracelets to adorn the wife
 Of the eternal glorious King.
 On Sunday heaven's gate stands ope,
 Blessings are plentiful and rife,
 More plentiful than hope. Ib.

Thou art a day of mirth,
 And, where the week-days trail upon the ground,
 Thy flight is higher. Ib.

Money, thou bane of bliss and source of woe.
Avarice.

Sweet day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
 The bridal of the earth and sky ;
 The dew shall weep thy fall to-night ;
 For thou must die. Virtue.

Sweet rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
 Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
 Thy root is ever in its grave,
 And thou must die. Ib.

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses ;
 A box where sweets compacted lie. Ib.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
 Like seasoned timber never gives ;
 But though the whole world turn to coal,
 Then chiefly lives. Ib.

Man is one world, and hath
 Another to attend him. Man.

Who shuts his hand, hath lost his gold ;
 Who opens it, hath it twice told.
Charms and Knots.

Grasp not at much, for fear thou losest all.

A deeper yellow on the corn,
For this good day new-born.
Pray, Sweet, for me.
That I may be
Faithful to God and thee.
Beloved, it is Morn.

Now God bless all true workers, let us pray :
The night-time cometh when we all must rest :
Strive we, and do, lest by-and-by we sit
In that blind life to which all other fate
Is cause for envy ; with the naked souls
Who never lived, knowing nor praise nor blame,
But kept themselves in mean neutrality,
Hateful alike to God and to His foes.

Ib., ch. 5.

Last of all, men vehemently in love with their own new opinions, though never so absurd, and obstinately bent to maintain them, gave those their opinions also that reverenced name of conscience.
Ib., ch. 7.

The "value" or "worth" of a man, is, as of all other things, his price ; that is to say, so much as would be given for the use of his power.
Ib., ch. 10.

They that approve a private opinion, call than the power lasteth by which he is able to protect them.

Ib. Part 2, ch. 21.

All the sentences of precedent judges that have ever been cannot altogether make a law contrary to natural equity.
Ib., ch. 26.

A man's conscience and his judgment is the same thing, and as the judgment, so also the conscience, may be erroneous.
Ib., ch. 29.

Unnecessary laws are not good laws, but traps for money.
Ib., ch. 30.

Leisure is the mother of Philosophy.
Ib. Part 4, ch. 46.

If we will reverence the age, the present is the oldest. . . . But if it be well considered the praise of ancient authors proceeds not from the reverence of the dead, but from the competition and mutual envy of the living.

HOOD

170a

The wavy waste. Ode to Rae Wilson (1837).

Not one of those self-constituted saints,
Quacks—not physicians—in the cure of souls.

Ib.

Nor think I'm pious when I'm only bilious.

Ib.

All creeds I view with toleration thorough,
And have a horror of regarding heaven
As anybody's rotten borough.

Ib.

On Bible stilts I don't affect to stalk,
Nor lard with Scripture my familiar talk.

Ib.

Spontaneously to God should tend the soul
Like the magnetic needle to the Pole.

Ib.

That frown upon St. Giles's sins, but blink
The peccadilloes of all Piccadilly.

Ib.

One place there is—beneath the burial sod,
Where all mankind are equalised by death;
Another place there is—the Fane of God,
Where all are equal who draw living breath.

Ib.

Dear bells! how sweet the sound of village
bells,

When on the undulating air they swim!
Now loud as welcome! faint, now, as farewells.

Ib.

A daw's not reckoned as a religious bird
Because it keeps a-cawing from a steeple.

Ib.

Who backs his rigid Sabbath, so to speak,
Against the wicked remnant of the week.

Ib.

I lie, I cheat, do anything for pelf,
But who on earth can say I am not pious?

Ib.

That very thing so many Christians want—Humility.

Ib.

Some minds improve by travel, others, rather,
Resemble copper wire or brass,
Which gets the narrower by going farther.

Ib.

People who hold such absolute opinions
Should stay at home in Protestant dominions.

Ib.

The blue significant Forget-me-not.

Ib.

A pride there is of rank—a pride of birth,
A pride of learning, and a pride of purse,
A London pride—in short, there be on earth
A host of prides, some better and some worse;
But of all prides, since Lucifer's attain,
The proudest swells a self-elected Saint.

Ib.

That bid you baulk
A Sunday walk,
And shun God's work as you should shun
your own.

Ib.

Calling all sermons contrabands,
In that great Temple that's not made with hands.

Ib.

Making all earth a fane, all heaven its dome.

Ib.

170b

Each cloud-capped mountain is a holy altar;
An organ breathes in every grove;
And the full heart's a Psalter,
Rich in deep hymns of gratitude and love.

Ib.

Come let us sit and watch the sky,
And fancy clouds, where no clouds be.

Ode to Melancholy (1827).

And there is even a happiness
That makes the heart afraid.

Ib.

All things are touched with Melancholy.

Ib.

There's not a string attuned to mirth,
But has its chord in Melancholy.

Ib.

Where folks that ride a bit of blood
May break a bit of bone.

The Epping Hunt (1829).

The field kept getting more select;
Each thicket served to thin it.

Ib.

A jolly wight there was, that rode
Upon a sorry mare.

Ib.

Thus pleasure oft eludes our grasp,
Just when we think to grip her;
And hunting after happiness
We only hunt a slipper.

Ib.

In fact he did not find M.D.'s
Worth one D — M.

Jack Hall.

Our hands have met, but not our hearts;
Our hands will never meet again.

To a false friend.

I love thee, I love thee,
'Tis all that I can say;
It is my vision in the night,
My dreaming in the day.

I Love Thee.

There are three things which the public will always clamour for, sooner or later; namely,
Novelty, novelty, novelty.

Announcement of Comic Annual for 1836.

For my part getting up seems not so easy
By half as lying.

Morning Meditations (1839).

I don't set up for being a cosmopolite, which to my mind signifies being polite to every country except your own.

Up the Rhine (1839-1840).

Holland . . . lies so low, they're only saved
by being dammed.

Ib.

They [the Germans] say ve for we, and wisy wersy.

Ib.

able.

The Green Man (1838).

The sedate, sober, silent, serious, sad-coloured sect [Quakers].

The Doves and the Crows (1839).

Extremes meet, as the whiting said with its tail in its mouth.

Ib.

Oh! would I were dead now,
Or up in my bed now,
To cover my head now
And have a good cry.

Table of Errata (1839).

The famous Gate of Billing
That does not lead to cooing.

The Turtles (1842).

Of all games or sports Cricket appears to be the most trying to the temper, for a player cannot lose his wicket without being put out.

The Whispering Gallery (1842).

Hys was the Blisse of Ignorance, but We,
being born to bee learned, and unhappye withal, have noight but the Ignorance of Blisse.

Sentimental Journey from Islington to Waterloo Bridge (1822).

Some dreams we have are nothing else but dreams,
Unnatural and full of contradictions.

The Haunted House (1844).

A House—but under some prodigious ban
Of excommunication. Ib.

O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted. Ib.

But Time was dumb within that Mansion old,
Or left his tale to the heraldic banners. Ib.

Far happier is thy head that wears
That hat without a crown.

Ode—Clapham Academy.

Thou'lt find thy Manhood all too fast—
Soon come, soon gone! and age at last
A sorry breaking-up! Ib.

Boughs are daily rifled
By the gusty thieves,
And the book of Nature
Getteth short of leaves. The Seasons.

No warmth, no cheerfulness, no healthful ease—

No comfortable feel in any member—
No shade, no shine, no butterflies, no bees,
No fruits, no flowers, no leaves, no birds,
No-venber! No! (1844).

When he is forsaken,
Withered and shaken,
What can an old man do but die? Ballad.

With fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red.
Song of the Shirt. Published in Punch,
Dec. 16, 1843.

Stitch! stitch! stitch!
In poverty, hunger, and dirt. Ib.

It's Oh! to be a slave
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where woman has never a soul to save,
If this is Christian work! Ib.

It is not linen you're wearing out
But human creatures' lives! Ib.

Sewing at once, with a double thread,
A shroud as well as a shirt. Ib.

Oh, God! that bread should be so dear,
And flesh and blood so cheap! Ib.

A little weeping would ease my heart,
But in their briny bed
My tears must stop, for every drop
Hinders needle and thread. Ib.

He keeps a parlour boarder of a pig.
The Irish Schoolmaster (1826).

That sour tree of knowledge—now a birch. Ib.

He never spoils the child and spares the rod,
But spoils the rod, and never spares the child. Ib.

Another weepeth over chilblains fell,
Always upon the heel, yet never to be well!
Ib.

He comes in at one year,
To go out by the other.
Ode to the late Lord Mayor (1826).

I like you, Tom! and in these lays Give honest worth its honest praise.
Stanzas to Tom Woodgate.

The cowslip is a country wench,
The violet is a nun;
But I will woo the dainty rose,
The queen of every one. Flowers.

Summer is gone on swallow's wings.
The Departure of Summer.

Seeing would certainly have led to D—ing.
Legend of Navarre.

They talked together like two egotists,
In conversation made all up of eyes. Ib.

But evil is wrought by want of Thought
As well as want of Heart!
The Lady's Dream (1844).

Oh! take, young seraph, take thy harp,
And play to me so cheerily;
For grief is dark, and care is sharp,
And life wears on so wearily. To Hope.

Farewell! I did not know thy worth;
But thou art gone, and now 'tis prized;
So angels walked unknown to earth,
But when they flew were recognised.
To an Absentee.

We watched her breathing through the night,
Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro. The Death Bed.

So silently we seemed to speak,
So slowly moved about,
As we had lent her half our powers
To eke her living out. Ib.

Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied—
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died. Ib.

I remember, I remember,
The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm further off from Heaven
Than when I was a boy. I remember.

She was a dumpy woman, though
Her family was high.

John Trot.

Let those who have no homes at all,
Go battle for a long one.

The Volunteer.

But barely had they gone a mile,
When, gravely, one and all,
At once began to think the man
Was not so very small.

The Wee Man.

Lord! how they chided with themselves,
That they had let him in;
To see him grow so monstrous now,
That came so small and thin.

Ib.

But when was ever honey made
With one bee in a hive?

The Last Man (1826).

And her woe began to run afresh,
As if she'd said Gee woe!

Faithless Sally Brown.

They went and told the sexton, and
The sexton tolled the bell.

Ib.

Man, born of woman, must of woman die.

A Valentine.

For gowns, and gloves, and caps, and tippets,
Are beauty's sauces, spice, and sippets.

A Recipe.

Or hand his tracts to the untractable.

Ib.

On Margate beach, where the sick one roams,
And the sentimental reads;
Where the maiden flirts, and the widow comes,
Like the ocean,—to cast her weeds.

The Mermaid of Margate.

And Christians love in the turf to lie,
Not in watery graves to be;
Nay, the very fishes will sooner die
On the land than in the sea.

Ib.

Sure, I said, Heaven did not mean,
Where I reap thou shouldst but glean,
Lay thy sheaf a-down and come,
Share my harvest and my home.

Ruth (1827).

From runninge slow he standeth faste.

The fall of the Deer.

And goareth them that seek his Gore.

Ib.

His love was great though his wit was small.

Equestrian Courtship.

Of all our pains, since man was curst,
I mean of body, not the mental,
To name the worst among the worst,
The dental sure is transcendental.

A True Story.

The best of friends fall out, and so
His teeth had done some years ago.

Ib.

He knocked at his wife's head, until
It opened unto him.

Tim Turpin.

A great judge, and a little judge,
The judges of a-size.

Ib.

Whitee—as well as blackee—man-cipation.

The Monkey Martyr.

The whole thing seemed
So fine, he deemed
The smallest demagogues as great as Gogs!

Ib.

Let's consider the past with a lingering gaze.
Like a peacock whose eyes are inclined to his tail.

A Parthian Glance.

Beer will grow mothery, and ladies fair
Will grow like beer.

The Stag-Eyed Lady.

Pulling his beard because he had no heir.

Ib.

For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!

Faithless Nelly Gray.

The love that loves a scarlet coat,
Should be more uniform!

Ib.

Much study had made him very lean,
And pale, and leaden-eyed.

Eugene Aram (1829).

Their pangs must be extreme,— Woe, woe, unutterable woe—
Who spill life's sacred stream.

Ib.

There was manhood in his look,
That murder could not kill.

Ib.

But Guilt was my grim chamberlain
That lighted me to bed.

Ib.

The bounding pinnace played a game
Of dreary pitch and toss;
A game that, on the good dry land,
Is apt to bring a loss!

The Sea Spell.

Heaven never heard his cry, nor did
The ocean heed his caul.

Ib.

Alas! my everlasting peace
Is broken into pieces.

Ib.

For hark! the last chime of the dial has ceased,

And Old Time, who his leisure to cozen,
Has finished the Months, like the flasks at a feast,

Is preparing to tap a fresh dozen!

For the New Year.

And ye, who have met with Adversity's blast,
And been bowed to the earth by its fury;
To whom the Twelve Months, that have recently passed

Were as harsh as a prejudiced jury—
Still, fill to the Future! and join in our chime,

The regrets of remembrance to cozen,
And having obtained a New Trial of Time,
Shout in hopes of a kindlier dozen.

Ib.

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love.

Hero and Leander. 20.

A moment's thinking is an hour in words.

Ib., 41.

What different lots our stars accord!
This babe to be hailed and wooed as a Lord!

173a

And that to be shunned like a leper !
 One, to the world's wine, honey, and corn,
 Another, like Colchester native, born
 To its vinegar only, and pepper.

Miss Kilmansegg (1840). Her Birth.

Plutus, as sponsor, stood at her font,
 And Midas rocked the cradle. Ib.

Hundreds of men were turned into beasts,
 Like the guests of Circe's horrible feasts,
 By the magic of ale and cider. Ib.

A name ?—if the party had a choice,
 What mortal would be a Bugg by choice ?
 As a Hogg, a Grubb, or a Chubb rejoice ?
 Or any such nauseous blazon ?

Her Christening.

And then in the fulness of joy and hope,
 Seemed washing his hands with invisible soap,
 In imperceptible water. Ib.

And as sure as London is built of bricks.
Her Education.

She had an idea from the very sound
 That people with naught were naughty. Ib.

Flatterers make cream cheese of chalk. Ib.

To gratify stern ambition's whims,
 What hundreds and thousands of precious limbs

On a field of battle we scatter.

Her Fame.

There's Bardus, a six-foot column of fop,
 A lighthouse without any light atop.

Her First Step.

As many more
 Crowd round the door,
 To see them going to see it.

Her Fancy Ball.

And rubbed his hands, and smiled aloud
 And bowed, and bowed, and bowed, and bowed,

Like a man who is sawing marble. Ib.

Earls that dated from early years. Ib.

For people who stand on legs of gold,
 Are sure to stand well with society. Ib.

For one of the pleasures of having a rout
 Is the pleasure of having it over.

Her Dream.

What blessed ignorance equals this,
 To sleep—and not to know it ? Ib.

Oh, bed ! oh, bed ! delicious bed !
 That heaven upon earth to the weary head. Ib.

There's Morbid, all bile, and verjuice and nerves,

Where other people would make preserves,
 He turns his fruit into pickles :

Jealous, envious, and fretful by day,
 At night, to his own sharp fancies a prey,
 He lies like a hedgehog rolled up the wrong way, Tormenting himself with his prickles. Ib.

Oh ! there's nothing in life like making love,
 Save making hay in fine weather.

Her Courtship.

173b

But the more the eggs, the worse the hatch ;
 The more the fish, the worse the catch ;
 The more the sparks, the worse the match ;
 Is a fact in Woman's history. Ib.

Alas ! for the love that's linked with gold. Ib.

For next to that interesting job,
 The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob,
 There's nothing so draws a London mob
 As the noosing of very rich people. Ib.

Yet Wedlock's a very awful thing !
 'Tis something like that feat in the ring,
 Which requires good nerve to do it—
 When one of a " Grand Equestrian Troop " Ib.
 Makes a jump at a gilded hoop,
 Not certain at all
 Of what may befall
 After his getting through it !

Her Marriage.

From a tower in an ivy-green jacket. Ib.

For bells are Music's laughter. Ib.

Men, whom their fathers had helped to gild,
 And men who had had their fortunes to build,
 And—much to their credit—had richly filled
 Their purses by pursy-verance. Ib.

But of all the lunar things that change,
 The one that shows most fickle and strange,
 And takes the most eccentric range,
 Is the moon—so called—of honey !

Her Honeymoon.

There's double beauty whenever a Swan
 Swims on a lake with her double thereon. Ib.

And garnished with trees that a man might cut down,
 Instead of his own expenses. Ib.

Home-made dishes that drive one from home.
Her Misery.

Home-made physic that sickens the sick. Ib.

And of all the griefs that mortals share,
 The one that seems the hardest to bear
 Is the grief without community. Ib.

So sorrow is cheered by being poured
 From one vessel into another. Ib.

A lull like the lull of the treacherous sea.
Her Last Will.

There are daily sounds to tell us that Life
 Is dying, and Death is living. Ib.

Gold ! Gold ! Gold ! Gold !
 Bright and yellow, hard and cold.

Her Moral.

Spurned by the young, but hugged by the old
 To the very verge of the churchyard mould,
 Price of many a crime untold ;
 Gold ! Gold ! Gold ! Gold !
 Good or bad a thousand-fold !

How widely its agencies vary—
 To save—to ruin—to curse—to bless—
 As even its minted coins express,
 Now stamped with the image of good Queen
 Bess,
 And now of a Bloody Mary. Ib.

2nd Sunday after Trinity.

No distance breaks the tie of blood ;
Brothers are brothers evermore ;
Nor wrong, nor wrath of deadliest mood,
That magic may o'erpower.

Ib.

Oh ! might we all our lineage prove,
Give and forgive, do good and love.

Ib.

Then draw we nearer day by day,
Each to his brethren, all to God ;
Let the world take us as she may,
We must not change our road.

Ib.

Men love us, or they need our love.

7th Sunday after Trinity.

The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
The surest guide a wanderer prove ;
Death only binds us fast
To the bright shore of love.

8th Sunday after Trinity.

Why should we faint and fear to live alone,†
Since all alone, so Heaven has willed, we die,
Nor e'en the tenderest heart, and next our own, Knows half the reasons why we smile and sigh ?

24th Sunday after Trinity.

Blest are the pure in heart,
For they shall see our God.†

The Purification.

Still to the lowly soul
He doth himself impart,
And for His cradle and His throne
Chooseth the pure in heart.

Lectures (Latin) on Poetry (1832-41).
(Translation by Edward Kershaw Francis, 1912.) Dedication.

Only that which is startling, not to say monstrous and uncouth, makes a noise and is talked about. The authors are like untrained boys trying to sing: the one aim of each is to sing as loud as he can. Whether they are singing sweetly and in tune they neither know nor care. Lecture 1.

Let us therefore deem the glorious art of Poetry a kind of medicine divinely bestowed upon man. Ib.

A style of Architecture [the Gothic] which,
to me at least, is, in comparison with all others,
the most beautiful of all, and by far the most in harmony with the mysteries of religion.
Lecture 3.

We feel that he [Dryden] never heartily and sincerely praised any human being, or felt any real enthusiasm for any subject he took up. Lecture 5.

The English Virgil [Spenser]. Ib.

Verse has more power to soothe than prose.
Lecture 6.

As he [Homer] could speak of the rich and royal without envy, so he could deal with the poorest of the poor without a touch of slight or contempt. Lecture 14.

As fire is kindled by fire, so is a poet's mind kindled by contact with a brother poet.
Lecture 16.

The gift of tears is (as has been said)* the best gift of God to suffering man. Ib.

Though I am far from denying that to this day the counsels of Divine Goodness regarding dumb creatures are, for us, involved in deep obscurity, yet we see nevertheless that Scripture foretells for them a "glorious

* Mollissima corda

Humano generi dare se Natura fatetur
Quæ lacrimas dedit: hæc nostri pars optima sensus.
Juvenal, xv., 131.

187b

liberty," and we are assured that the compassion of Heaven, to which we owe so much, will not be wanting to them. Lecture 19.

Poetry, native and true poetry, is nothing else than each poet's innermost feeling issuing in rhythmic language. Lecture 22.

Nemesis hangs over men who are overbold in aspiration, whether, like Prometheus, they devise methods and expedients for alleviation of common ills, or, as Ió, indulge in building castles in the air, which is the way with most of us in the ignorance of our early years.
Lecture 23.

Pindar blended passing events with ancient times in such wise that he does not seem to be praising the past, but rather fanning into flame the embers of a dying beauty.
Lecture 24.

Strong men delight in forceful speech.
Soldiers relish a speaker delivering himself a little unreservedly. Lecture 25.

The essence of all poetry to be found, not in high-wrought subtlety of thought, nor in pointed cleverness of phrase, but in the depths of the heart and the most sacred feelings of the men who write. Lecture 28.

In real life serious things and mere trifles, laughable things and things that cause pain,
are wont to be mixed in strangest medley.
It is necessary, then, that Tragedy, as being a mirror of life, must leave room for an element of comic humour. Ib.

Which of us is not sometimes affected, almost to despair, by the splendid vision of earth and sky? Lecture 31.

Some are more strongly affected by the facts of human life; others by the beauty of earth and sky. Ib.

Undoubtedly the study of the more abstruse regions of philosophy, which we now call Metaphysics, . . . always seems to have included an element not very much removed from a sort of insanity. Lecture 34.

"Praise great estates; cultivate a small one" (Georgics 2, 413). We all know how old farm folk especially delight in aphorisms of this kind, and in this respect, at all events, show much real wit. Lecture 37.

It is clear, or at least a probable hypothesis,
. . . that poetry was providentially destined to prepare the way for Revealed Truth itself.
Lecture 40.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved; and now we lie

In Flanders Fields.

In Flanders Fields. Punch, Dec. 8, 1915.

Take up our quarrel with the foe :

To you from failing hands we throw

The torch; be yours to hold it high.

If ye break faith with us who die,

We shall not sleep, though poppies grow

In Flanders Fields. Ib.

But O the truth, the truth ! the many eyes
That look on it ! the diverse things they see !
A Ballad of Fair Ladies in Revolt. St. 16.

Sir spokesman, sneers are weakness veiling rage. St. 42.

I've studied men from my topsy-turvy
Close, and, I reckon, rather true.
Some are fine fellows : some, right scurvy :
Most, a dash between the two.

Juggling Jerry. St. 7.

They need their pious exercises less
Than schooling in the Pleasures.

A Certain People.

And chiefly for the weaker by the wall,
You bore that lamp of sane benevolence.

To a Friend Lost.

Now Vengeance has a brood of eggs,
But Patience must be hen.

Archduchess Anne. St. 12.

With patient inattention hear him prate.
Bellerophon. St. 4.

Full lasting is the song, though he
The singer passes : lasting too,
For souls not lent in usury,
The rapture of the forward view.

A Reading of Earth.

The Thrush in February. St. 17.

So near to mute the zephyrs flute
That only leaflets dance.

Outer and Inner. St. 1.

So may we read, and little find them cold :
Not frosty lamps illuminating dead space,
Not distant aliens, not senseless Powers.
The fire is in them whereof we are born ;
The music of their motion may be ours.

Meditation under Stars.

We spend our lives in learning pilotage,
And grow good steersmen when the vessel's crank. The Wisdom of Eld.

There are giants to slay, and they call for their Jack. The Empty Purse.

Sword of Common Sense !
Our surest gift. Ode. To the Comic Spirit.

For he is England ; Admiral,
Till the setting of her sun.

pleasures of life. Ch. 11.

She was a lady of incisive features bound in stale parchment. Ch. 14.

"But how divine is utterance!" she said.
"As we to the brutes, poets are to us." Ch. 16.

There is nothing the body suffers that the soul may not profit by. Ch. 43.

I expect that Woman will be the last thing civilised by man.

MEREDITH, Owen (see Lytton, Edward Robert Bulwer)

MERIVALE, John Herman (1779-1844)

Fortune and Hope, farewell! I've found the port:

You've done with me; go now with others sport. *Translation of Greek Epigram.

MERRICK, Rev. James (1720-1769)

So high at last the contest rose,
From words they almost came to blows.
The Chameleon.

You all are right and all are wrong:
When next you talk of what you view,
Think others see as well as you. Ib.

Not what we wish, but what we want.
Hymn.

MEYNELL, Alice (née Thompson)
(d. Nov. 27, 1922)

I come from nothing; but from where
Come the undying thoughts I bear?
The Modern Poet.

A poet's face asleep is this grey morn.
In February.

She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them white.

She guards them from the steep.
The Lady of the Lambs.

She holds her little thoughts in sight,
Though gay they run and leap.
She is so circumspect and right,
She has her soul to keep. Ib.

My human song must be
My human thought. Be patient till 'tis done.

I shall not hold my little peace; for me
There is no peace but one.

The Poet to the Birds.
(Last Poems, pub. 1923.)

214b

But, visiting sea, your love doth press
And reach in further than you know,
And fills all these; and when you go
There's loneliness in loneliness.
Song. As the inhastening tide doth roll.

A mirror faced a mirror: ire and hate
Opposite ire and hate.
Reflexions in Ireland.

New every year,
New born and newly dear,
He comes with tidings and a song,
The ages long, the ages long.
Unto us a Son is Given.

Flocks of the memories of the days draw near
The dove-cote doors of sleep. At Night.

MICKLE, William Julius (1735-1788)

And are ye sure the news is true?
And are ye sure he's weel?
Song 3. "There's nae luck about the house."

For there's nae luck about the house;
There's nae luck at aw;
There's little pleasure in the house,
When our gude man's awa'. Ib.

Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,
His breath like cauler air,
His very foot has music i't,
As he comes up the stair!
And shall I see his face again?
And shall I hear him speak? Ib.

The moon, sweet regent of the sky.*

MILL, John Stuart (1806-1873)

All that makes existence valuable to anyone depends on the enforcement of restraints upon the actions of other people.

On Liberty (1859). Ch. 1.

We can never be sure that the opinion we are endeavouring to stifle is a false opinion ; and even if we were sure, stifling it would be an evil still. Ib., ch. 2.

He who knows only his own side of the case knows little of that. Ib.

The fatal tendency of mankind to leave off thinking about a thing, when it is no longer doubtful, is the cause of half their errors. Ib.

A party of order or stability and a party of progress or reform are both necessary elements of a healthy state of political life. Ib.

The liberty of the individual must be thus far limited ; he must not make himself a nuisance to other people. Ib., ch. 3.

Whatever crushes individuality is despotism, by whatever name it may be called. Ib.

Genius can only breathe freely in an atmosphere of freedom. Ib.

All good things which exist are the fruits of originality. Ib.

That so few now dare to be eccentric marks
the chief danger of the time. Ib.

The despotism of custom is everywhere the standing hindrance to human advancement. Ib.

A people, it appears, may be progressive for a certain length of time, and then stop.
When does it stop ? When it ceases to possess individuality. Ib.

That most odious and anti-social of all passions—envy. Ib., ch. 4.

The bad workmen, who form the majority of the operatives in many branches of industry, are decidedly of opinion that bad workmen ought to receive the same wages
as good. Ib.

The only ground, therefore, on which restrictions on Sunday amusements can be defended

Of Man's first disobedience and the fruit
Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world, and all our woe,
With loss of Eden.

Paradise Lost (c. 1663).—Book 1, l. 1.

Things unattempted yet, in prose or rhyme. l. 16.

What in me is dark

Illumine, what is low raise and support ;
That to the height of this great argument
I may assert eternal Providence,
And justify the ways of God to Men. l. 27.

For one restraint, lords of the world besides. l. 32.

As far as angels' ken. l. 59.

Yet from those flames

No light, but rather darkness visible
Served only to discover sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace
And rest can never dwell : hope never comes,
That comes to all. l. 62.

As far removed from God and light of heaven,
As from the centre thrice to th' utmost pole. l. 73.

But O how fallen ! how changed
From him who, in the happy realms of light, Clothed with transcendent brightness didst outshine

Myriads though bright ! l. 84.

United thoughts and counsels, equal hope,
And hazard in the glorious enterprise. l. 88.

Though changed in outward lustre, that fixed mind

And high disdain from sense of injured merit.
l. 97.

What though the field be lost ?

All is not lost ; th' unconquerable will,
And study of revenge, immortal hate
And courage never to submit or yield :
And what is else not to be overcome ? l. 105.

Vaunting aloud, but racked with deep despair.
l. 126.

Fall'n Cherub, to be weak is miserable,
Doing or suffering : but of this be sure,
To do ought good never will be our task,
But ever to do ill our sole delight,
As being the contrary to his high will,
Whom we resist. If then his providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil.
l. 157.

What re-inforcement we may gain from hope,
If not, what resolution from despair. l. 190.

Farewell happy fields,
Where joy for ever dwells : hail horrors,
hail ! l. 249.

A mind not to be changed by place or time.
The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a heav'n of hell, a hell of heaven.
What matter where, if I be still the same.
l. 253.

Here we may reign secure, and in my choice
To reign is worth ambition, though in hell :
Better to reign in hell, than serve in heav'n.
l. 261.

In worst extremes, and on the perilous edge
Of battle. l. 276.

Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the

And when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons
Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine.
l. 500.

With high words, that bore
Semblance of worth, not substance, gently raised
Their fainted courage, and dispelled their fears.
l. 528.

The imperial ensign, which, full high advanced,
Shone like a meteor, streaming to the wind.
l. 536.

A shout that tore hell's concave, and beyond Frightened the reign of Chaos and old Night.
l. 542.

In perfect phalanx to the Dorian mood
Of flutes and soft recorders. l. 550.

Instead of rage
Deliberate valour breathed, firm and unmoved
With dread of death to flight or foul retreat.
l. 553.

Chase
Anguish, and doubt, and fear, and sorrow,
and pain,
From mortal or immortal minds. l. 557.

He above the rest
In shape and gesture proudly eminent,
Stood like a tower ; his form had not yet lost
All her original brightness, nor appeared
Less than archangel ruined, and th' excess
Of glory obscured. l. 589.

In dim eclipse, disastrous twilight sheds
On half the nations, and with fear of change

Care
Sat on his faded cheek ; but under brows
Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride
Waiting revenge. l. 601.

Thrice he assayed, and thrice, in spite of scorn, Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth. At last Words interwove with sighs found out their way. l. 619.

That strife
Was not inglorious, though th' event was dire.
l. 623.

Who overcomes
By force, hath overcome but half his foe.
l. 648.

Mammon led them on ;
Mammon, the least erected Spirit that fell
From heaven ; for e'en in heaven his looks and thoughts
Were always downward bent, admiring more
The riches of heaven's pavement, trodden gold,
Than aught divine or holy else enjoyed
In vision beatific. l. 678.

Let none admire
That riches grow in hell ; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. l. 690.

Anon out of the earth a fabric huge Rose like an exhalation. l. 710.

From morn
To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve,
A summer's day ; and with the setting sun
Dropt from the zenith like a falling star.
l. 742.

The suburb of their straw-built citadel.
 While over head the moon
 Sits arbitress.
 High on a throne of royal state, which far
 Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
 Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
 Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold,
 Satan exalted sat, by merit raised
 To that bad eminence; and, from despair
 Thus high uplifted beyond hope.
 Surer to prosper than prosperity
 Could have assured us.

l. 773.

l. 784.

l. 39.

The strongest and the fiercest Spirit
 That fought in Heaven, now fiercer by despair.
 His trust was with th' Eternal to be deemed Equal in strength; and rather than be less Cared not to be at all.

l. 44.

My sentence is for open war: of wiles
 More unexpert I boast not.
 Which, if not victory, is yet revenge.

l. 51.

l. 105.

But all was false and hollow, though his tongue
 Dropped manna, and could make the worse
 appear
 The better reason, to perplex and dash
 Maturest counsels.

l. 112.

Th' ethereal mould
 Incapable of stain would soon expel
 Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire Victorious. Thus repulsed, our final hope Is flat despair.

l. 139.

For who would lose,
 Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
 Those thoughts that wander through eternity,
 To perish rather, swallowed up and lost
 In the wide womb of uncreated night,
 Devoid of sense and motion?

His red right hand.*
 Unrespired, unpitied, unreprieved,
 Ages of hopeless end.

l. 174.

l. 185.

Besides what hope the never-ending flight
 Of future days may bring.

l. 221.

Thus Belial, with words clothed in reason's garb,
 Counsell'd ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth,
 Not peace.

l. 226.

Our torments also may in length of time
 Become our elements.

l. 274.

In his rising seemed
 A pillar of state: deep on his front engraven
 Deliberation sat and public care;
 And princely counsel in his face yet shone,
 Majestic though in ruin: sage he stood,
 With Atlantean shoulders fit to bear
 The weight of mightiest monarchies; his look
 Drew audience and attention still as night
 Or summer's noon-tide air.

l. 301.

To sit in darkness here
 Hatching vain empires.

l. 377.

And through the palpable obscure find out
 His uncouth way.

l. 406.

Long is the way
 And hard, that out of hell leads up to light.

l. 432.

Refusing to accept as great a share
 Of hazard as of honour.

l. 452.

Their rising all at once was as the sound
 Of thunder heard remote.

l. 476.

O shame to men! devil with devil damned
 Firm concord holds; men only disagree
 Of creatures rational.

l. 496.

For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense.

l. 556.

And reasoned high
 Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate,
 Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute,
 And found no end, in wandering mazes lost.

l. 558.

Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy:
 Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm
 Pain for a while, or anguish, and excite
 Fallacious hope, or arm th' obdured breast
 With stubborn patience as with triple steel.

l. 565.

A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog.

l. 592.

And feel by turns the bitter change
 Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
 From beds of raging fire to starve in ice
 Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
 Immovable, infixed, and frozen round
 Periods of time, thence hurried back to fire.

l. 598.

Worse
 Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived, Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire.

l. 626.

If shape it might be called that shape had none.

l. 667.

Black it stood as night,
 Fierce as ten Furies, terrible as hell,
 And shook a dreadful dart.

l. 670.

Whence and what art thou, execrable shape?

l. 681.

Back to thy punishment,
 False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings.

l. 699.

The grisly terror. [Death.]

l. 704.

Their fatal hands
 No second stroke intend.

l. 712.

So frowned the mighty combatants, that hell
 Grew darker at their frown.

l. 719.

Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed
 From all her caves, and back resounded Death.

l. 788.

Grim death.

l. 804.

Death
 Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear
 His famine should be filled.

l. 845.

The fatal key,
Sad instrument of all our woe. l. 871.

She opened ; but to shut
Excelled her power. l. 883.

For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions
fierce,
Strive here for mastery. l. 898.

Chaos umpire sits,
And by decision more embroils the fray
By which he reigns : next him high arbiter
Chance governs all. Into this wild abyss,
The womb of Nature, and perhaps her grave.
l. 907.

To compare
Great things with small. l. 921.

With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his way,
And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies. l. 949.

Sable-vested Night, eldest of things. l. 962.
And Discord, with a thousand various mouths.
l. 967.

With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout,
Confusion worse confounded. l. 995.

Havoc, and spoil, and ruin are my gain.
l. 1009.

So he with difficulty and labour hard Moved on, with difficulty and labour he.
l. 1021.

This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.*
l. 1052.

Hail, holy Light, offspring of Heaven firstborn,
Or of th' Eternal co-eternal beam,
May I express thee unblamed ?
Book 3, l. 1.

The rising world of waters dark and deep.
l. 11.

Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary move
Harmonious numbers. l. 37.

Seasons return, but not to me returns
Day, or the sweet approach of even or morn,
Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose,
Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine.
l. 41.

From the cheerful ways of men
Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair
Presented with an universal blank
Of Nature's works, to me expunged and rased,
And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out.
l. 46.

Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
l. 99.

To prayer, repentance, and obedience due.
l. 191.

Dark with excessive bright. l. 380.

The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown.
l. 495.

Unspeakable desire to see, and know
All these His wondrous works, but chiefly man. l. 663.

For neither man nor angel can discern
Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks
Invisible, except to God alone. l. 682.

And oft, though Wisdom wake, Suspicion sleeps

At Wisdom's gate, and to Simplicity
Resigns her charge, while Goodness thinks no ill

Where no ill seems. l. 686.

Thy desire, which tends to know
The works of God, thereby to glorify
The great Work-Master, leads to no excess
That reaches blame, but rather merits praise
The more it seems excess. l. 694.

By owing, owes not, but still pays, at once
Indebted and discharged. l. 55.

Me miserable ! which way shall I fly
Infinite wrath, and infinite despair ?
Which way I fly is Hell ; myself am Hell ;
And in the lowest deep a lower deep,
Still threatening to devour me opens wide,
To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven.

The mantling vine. l. 258.
 For contemplation he and valour formed;
 For softness she and sweet attractive grace;
 He for God only, she for God in him:
 His fair large front and eye sublime declared
 Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks
 Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clust'ring, but not beneath his shoulders broad. l. 297.

With thee conversing I forget all time;
 All seasons and their change, all please alike,
 Sweet is the breath of Morn, her rising sweet
 With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the Sun,

When first on this delightful land he spreads
 His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower,
 Glist'ring with dew; fragrant the fertile earth

After soft showers; and sweet the coming on
 Of grateful evening mild; then silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird, and this fair Moon,
 And these the gems of Heaven, her starry
 train;

But neither breath of Morn, when she ascends
 With charm of earliest birds; nor rising Sun
 On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit,
 flower,

Glist'ring with dew; nor fragrance after showers;
 Nor grateful evening mild; nor silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird, nor walk by Moon,
 Or glittering starlight, without thee is sweet. l. 639.

 In Paradise of all things common else. l. 750.

Blest pair! and O yet happiest, if ye seek
 No happier state, and know to know no more. l. 774.

Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve. l. 800.

Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires. l. 808.

Him thus intent Ithuriel with his spear
 Touched lightly; for no falsehood can endure
 Touch of celestial temper, but returns
 Of force to its own likeness. l. 810.

Not to know me argues yourselves unknown. l. 830.

Abashed the devil stood,
 And felt how awful goodness is. l. 846.

Came not all hell broke loose? l. 918.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains. l. 970.

Like Teneriff or Atlas, unremoved. l. 987.

Now dreadful deeds
 Might have ensued; nor only Paradise
 In this commotion, but the starry cope
 Of Heaven perhaps, or all the elements
 At least had gone to wrack, disturbed and torn
 With violence of this conflict. l. 990.

Fled Murm'ring, and with him fled the shades of night. l. 1014.

Now morn her rosy steps in th' eastern clime
 Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl.
Book 5, l. 1.

His sleep
 Was aery-light, from pure digestion bred. l. 3.

Hung over her enamoured, and beheld
 Beauty, which whether waking or asleep,
 Shot forth peculiar graces. l. 13.

My fairest, my espoused, my latest found,
 Heaven's last best gift, my ever new delight. l. 18.

Since good, the more
 Communicated, more abundant grows. l. 71.

Best image of myself and dearer half. l. 95.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of Good,
 Almighty, thine this universal frame,
 Thus wondrous fair: thyself how wondrous then! l. 153.

Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
 If better thou belong not to the dawn,
 Sure pledge of day. l. 166.

A wilderness of sweets. l. 294.

On hospitable thoughts intent. l. 332.
 Nor jealousy
 Was understood, the injured lover's hell. l. 449.
 The bright consummate flower. l. 481.
 Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues,
 Powers. l. 601.
 All seemed well pleased; all seemed, but were not all. l. 617.
 They eat, they drink, and in communion
 sweet,
 Quaff immortality and joy. l. 637.
 Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
 Friendliest to sleep and silence. l. 667.
 An host
 Innumerable as the stars of night,
 Or stars of morning, dew-drops which the sun
 Impearls on every leaf and every flower. l. 744.
 Begirt th' almighty throne
 Beseeching or besieging. l. 868.
 So spake the Seraph Abdiel, faithful found
 Among the faithless, faithful only he;
 Among innumerable false, unmoved,
 Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,
 His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal. l. 896.
 Till morn,
 Waked by the circling hours, with rosy hand
 Unbarred the gates of light. Book 6, l. 2.
 Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought
 The better fight, who singly hast maintained
 Against revolted multitudes the cause
 Of truth. l. 29.
 Universal reproach (far worse to bear Than violence). l. 34.
 On they move
 Indissolubly firm. l. 68.
 Arms on armour clashing brayed
 Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
 Of brazen chariots raged; dire was the noise
 Of conflict. l. 209.
 Inextinguishable rage. l. 217.
 Cancelled from Heaven, and sacred memory,
 Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell. l. 379.
 Therefore eternal silence be their doom. l. 385.
 But live content, which is the calmest life:
 But pain is perfect misery, the worst
 Of evils, and excessive, overturns
 All patience. l. 461.
 He onward came; far off his coming shone. l. 768.
 Though fall'n on evil days,
 On evil days though fall'n, and evil tongues.
Book 7, l. 25.
 Fit audience find, though few;
 But drive far off the barb'rous dissonance
 Of Bacchus and his revellers. l. 31.

Endued
 With sanctity of reason. l. 507.
 The angel ended, and in Adam's ear
 So charming left his voice, that he awhile Thought him still speaking, still stood fixed to hear. Book 8, l. 1.
 And grace that won who saw to wish her stay. l. 43.
 Gird the sphere
 With centric and eccentric scribbled o'er,
 Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb. l. 82.
 Consider first, that great
 Or bright iners not excellence. l. 90.
 God, to remove His ways from human sense, Placed heaven from earth so far, that earthly sight
 If it presume, might err in things too high,
 And no advantage gain. l. 119.
 Heaven is for thee too high
 To know what passes there. Be lowly wise:
 Think only what concerns thee and thy being;
 Dream not of other worlds, what creatures
 there
 Live, in what state, condition, or degree,
 Contented that thus far hath been revealed
 Not of earth only, but of highest heaven. l. 172.
 Taught to live
 The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts
 To interrupt the sweet of life. l. 182.
 To know
 That which before us lies in daily life,
 Is the prime wisdom; what is more is fume,
 Or emptiness, or fond impertinence. l. 192.
 And feel that I am happier than I know. l. 282.
 In solitude
 What happiness? Who can enjoy alone,
 Or all enjoying, what contentment find? l. 364.
 I waked
 To find her, or for ever to deplore
 Her loss, and other pleasures all abjure. l. 478.
 Grace was in all her steps! Heaven in her eye! l. 488.
 In every gesture dignity and love! l. 502.
 Her virtue, and the conscience of her worth,
 That would be wooed, and not unsought be won. l. 511.
 All heaven
 And happy constellations on that hour
 Shed their selectest influence! l. 520.
 To light the bridal lamp. l. 549.
 What she wills to do or say
 Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best:
 All higher knowledge in her presence falls
 Degraded. l. 561.
 Accuse not Nature; she hath done her part;
 Do thou but thine, and be not diffident
 Of wisdom. l. 561.
 * "Paradys stood formed in her eyen."—Chaucer:
Troilus, 5,818 (Of Criseyde).

Off-times nothing profits more
Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right. l. 571.

In loving thou dost well, in passion not,
Wherein true love consists not. Love refines
The thoughts, and heart enlarges. l. 588.

Those graceful acts,
Those thousand decencies, that daily flow
From all her words and actions. l. 600.

With a smile that glowed
Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue. l. 618.

My unpremeditated verse. Book 9, l. 24.

Long choosing, and beginning late. l. 26.

But what will not ambition and revenge
Descend to? l. 168.

Revenge, at first, though sweet,
Bitter ere long, back on itself recoils. l. 171.

For nothing lovelier can be found
In woman, than to study household good,
And good works in her husband to promote. l. 232.

Smiles from reason flow,
To brute denied, and are of love the food. l. 239.

For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return. l. 249.

The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
Safest and seemliest by her husband stays;
Who guards her, or with her the worst endures. l. 267.

At shut of evening flowers. l. 278.

For he who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses
The tempted with dishonour foul. l. 296.

Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve
First thy obedience. l. 367.

As one who, long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick, and sewers annoy the air. l. 445.

She fair, divinely fair, fit love for Gods. l. 489.

So glozed the Tempter. l. 549.

Hope elevates, and joy
Brightens his crest. l. 633.

God so commanded, and left that command
Sole daughter of his voice. l. 652.

Earth felt the wound; and Nature from her seat
Sighing, through all her works gave signs of
woe. l. 782.

Inferior, who is free? l. 825.

In her face excuse
Came prologue, and apology too prompt. l. 853.

A pillared shade
High overarched, and echoing walks between. l. 1106.

Thus it shall befall
Him, who to worth in women overtrusting, Lets her will rule. Restraint she will not brook;
And left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse. l. 1182.

And of their vain contest appeared no end. l. 1189.

Yet shall I temper so
Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.
Book 10, l. 77.

This woman, whom thou mad'st to be my help,
And gav'st me as thy perfect gift, so good,
So fit, so acceptable, so divine. l. 137.

Sagacious of his quarry from so far. l. 281.

Returned
Successful beyond hope. l. 462.

He hears
On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal hiss, the sound
Of public scorn. l. 506.

How gladly would I meet
Mortality, my sentence, and be earth
Insensible! how glad would lay me down,
As in my mother's lap! There I should rest,
And sleep secure. l. 775.

Prevenient grace descending had removed
The stony from their hearts. Book 11, l. 3.

Must I thus leave thee, Paradise! thus leave Thee, native soil, these happy walks and shades,
Fit haunt of Gods! l. 269.

Gently hast thou told Thy message, which might else in telling wound. l. 298.

Then purged with euphrasy and rue
The visual nerve, for he had much to see. l. 414.

Demoniac frenzy, moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness. l. 485.

And over them triumphant Death his dart
Shook, but delayed to strike, though oft invoked
With vows, as their chief good and final hope. l. 491.

If thou well observe
The rule of not too much, by temperance taught. l. 530.

So may'st thou live till, like ripe fruit, thou drop
Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gathered, not harshly plucked, for death mature.
This is old age. l. 535.

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st
Live well, how long or short permit to Heaven. l. 553.

A bevy of fair women, richly gay
In gems and wanton dress.

l. 582.

The evening star,
Love's harbinger.

l. 588.

Bred only and completed to the taste
Of lustful appetite, to sing, to dance,
To dress, and troll the tongue, and roll the eye.

l. 618.

Spake much of right and wrong,
Of justice, of religion, truth, and peace,
And judgment from above.

l. 666.

So violence
Proceeded, and oppression and sword-law.

l. 671.

Thus fame shall be achieved, renown on earth,
And what most merits fame in silence hid.

l. 698.

The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar :
All now was turned to jollity and game,
To luxury and riot, feast and dance.

l. 713.

Peace to corrupt no less than war to waste.

l. 784.

Regardless whether good or evil fame.

Book 12, l. 47.

Tyranny must be,
Though to the tyrant thereby no excuse.

l. 95.

In mean estate live moderate, till grown
In wealth and multitude, factious they grow.
But first among the priests dissension springs !
Men who attend the altar, and should most Endeavour peace.

l. 351.

A deathlike sleep,
A gentle wafting to immortal life.

l. 434.

Truth shall retire
Bestuck with sland'rous darts, and works of faith
Rarely be found.

l. 535.

And to the faithful, death the gate of life.

l. 571.

Some natural tears they dropped, but wiped them soon ;

The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide
They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow

Through Eden took their solitary way.

l. 645.

Deeds

Above heroic, though in secret done,
And unrecorded left through many an age.

Paradise Regained (1671). Book 1. l. 14.

Ye see our danger on the utmost edge
Of hazard, which admits no long debate.

By winning words to conquer willing hearts,
And make persuasion do the work of fear.

l. 232.

Who brought me hither
Will bring me hence ; no other guide I seek.

l. 335.

I have lost
Much lustre of my native brightness.

l. 377.

I have not lost
To love, at least contemplate and admire,
What I see excellent in good, or fair,
Or virtuous.

l. 380.

Fellowship in pain divides not smart,
Nor lightens aught each man's peculiar load.

l. 401.

For lying is thy sustenance, thy food ;
Yet thou pretend'st to truth.

l. 429.

Ambiguous, and with double sense deluding,
Which they who asked have seldom understood.

l. 435.

Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk.

l. 478.

Most men admire
Virtue, who follow not her lore.

l. 482.

Him, their joy so lately found,
So lately found, and so abruptly gone.

Book 2, l. 9.

Alas, from what high hope to what relapse
Unlooked for, are we fallen !

l. 30.

His life
Private, unactive, calm, contemplative.

l. 80.

Persuasive.
Enchanting tongues

l. 158.

Tangled in amorous nets.

l. 162.

Beauty stands
In th' admiration only of weak minds
Led captive.

l. 220.

Honour, glory, and popular praise,
Rocks whereon greatest men have oft wrecked.

l. 227.

Nature hath need of what she asks.

l. 253.

If at great things thou would'st arrive,
Get riches first.

l. 426.

They whom I favour thrive in wealth amain,
While virtue, valour, wisdom, sit in want.

l. 430.

A crown
Golden in show, is but a wreath of thorns, Brings dangers, troubles, cares, and sleepless nights.

l. 458.

For therein stands the office of a king,
His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise,
That for the public all this weight he bears.

l. 463.

Thy actions to thy words accord.

Book 3, l. 9.

Glory the reward
That sole excites to high attempts, the flame
Of most erected spirits.

l. 25.

Yet years, and to ripe years judgment mature,
Quench not the thirst of glory, but augment.

l. 37.

And what the people but a herd confused,
A miscellaneous rabble, who extol
Things vulgar ?

l. 49.

Of whom to be dispraised were no small praise.

l. 56.

Who best

Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first Well hath obeyed.

l. 194.

For where no hope is left, is left no fear.

l. 206.

Elephants endorsed with towers.

l. 329.

Triumph, that insulting vanity.

Book 4, l. 138.

The childhood shows the man,
As morning shows the day. Be famous then
By wisdom; as thy empire must extend,
So let extend thy mind o'er all the world.

l. 220.

Error by his own arms is best evinced.

l. 235.

Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts
And eloquence.

l. 240.

The olive grove of Academe,
Plato's retirement, where the Attic bird
Drills her thick-warbled notes the summer long.

l. 244.

Thence to the famous orators repair,
Those ancient, whose resistless eloquence
Wielded at will that fierce demagogue,
Shook th' arsenal, and fulminated over Greece.

l. 267.

From whose mouth issued forth
Mellifluous streams that watered all the schools
Of Academics old and new.

l. 276.

Epicurean and the Stoic severe.

l. 280.

He who receives

Light from above, from the Fountain of Light,
No other doctrine needs, though granted true.

l. 288.

The first and wisest of them all professed
To know this only, that he nothing knew.*

l. 293.

For all his tedious talk is but vain boast,
Or subtle shifts conviction to evade.

l. 307.

Deep versed in books, and shallow in himself.

l. 327.

As children gathering pebbles on the shore.

l. 330.

In them is plainest taught, and easiest learnt,
What makes a nation happy, and keeps it so.

l. 361.

Till morning fair
Came forth with pilgrim steps in amice grey.

l. 426.

Rime being no necessary Adjunct or true
Ornament of Poem or good Verse, in longer Works especially, but the Invention of a barbarous Age, to set off wretched matter and lame Meeter.

Preface to Paradise Lost, 1669 edition.

* Socrates.

The troublesome and modern bondage of Rhymeing.

lb.

O dark, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon,
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day!

Samson Agonistes (1671). l. 80.

To live a life half dead, a living death.

l. 100.

Wisest men

Have erred, and by bad women been deceived;
And shall again, pretend they ne'er so wise.

l. 210.

Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men;
Unless there be who think not God at all.

l. 293.

What boots it at one gate to make defence,
And at another to let in the foe?

l. 560.

But who is this? what thing of sea or land?
Female of sex it seems,
That so bedecked, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for th' isles
Of Javan or Gadire,
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails filled, and streamers waving.

l. 710.

If weakness may excuse,
What murderer, what traitor, parricide,
Incestuous, sacrilegious, but may plead it?
All wickedness is weakness.

l. 831.

That grounded maxim,
So rife and celebrated in the mouths
Of wisest men, that to the public good
Private respects must yield.

l. 865.

Against the law of nature, law of nations.

l. 889.

In argument with men, a woman ever
Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.

l. 903.

Yet winds to seas

Are reconciled at length, and sea to shore.

l. 961.

Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end.

l. 1008.

It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit,
Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest
merit,

That woman's love can win or long inherit;
But what it is, hard is to say,
Harder to hit,

Which way soever men refer it.

l. 1010.

What pilot so expert but needs must wreck, Imbarked with such a steers-mate at the helm?

l. 1044.

He's gone, and who knows how he may report
Thy words by adding fuel to the flame?

l. 1350.

Lords are lordliest in their wine.

l. 1418.

For evil news rides post, while good news bait.

l. 1538.

Death, who sets all free,
Hath paid his ransom now, and full discharge.
l. 1572.

So fond are mortal men
Fallen into wrath divine,
As their own ruin on themselves to invite.
l. 1684.

And nests in order ranged
Of tame villatic fowl. l. 1694.

Samson hath quit himself
Like Samson, and heroically hath finished
A life heroic. l. 1709.

Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
Or knock the breast; no weakness, no contempt,
Dispraise, or blame, nothing but well and fair
And what may quiet us in a death so noble.
l. 1721.

Hence, loathèd Melancholy,
Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight born,
In Stygian cave forlorn,
'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks and sights unholy! L'Allegro (1632). l. 1.

So buxom, blithe, and debonair. l. 24.

Haste thee, Nymph, and bring with thee
Jest and youthful Jollity,
Quips, and Cranks, and wanton Wiles,
Nods, and Becks, and wreathèd Smiles.
l. 25.

Sport that wrinkled Care derides,
And Laughter holding both his sides.
Come, and trip it as you go,
On the light fantastic toe. l. 31.

The clouds in thousand liveries dight. l. 62.

And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale. l. 67.

Meadows trim with daisies pied. l. 75.

Where perhaps some beauty lies,
The Cynosure of neighb'ring eyes. l. 79.

Of herb, and other country messes,
Which the neat-handed Phyllis dresses. l. 85.

To many a youth and many a maid,
Dancing in the chequered shade. l. 95.

On a sunshine holiday. l. 98.

Then to the spicy nut-brown ale. l. 100.

Towered cities please us then,
And the busy hum of men. l. 117.

Ladies, whose bright eyes
Rain influence, and judge the prize
Of wit or arms. l. 121.

And pomp, and feast, and revelry,
With mask, and antique pageantry,
Such sights as youthful poets dream,
On summer eves by haunted stream. l. 127.

Or sweetest Shakespeare, Fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild. l. 133.

And ever against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs,

Married to immortal Verse,
Such as the meeting soul may pierce,
In notes with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness long drawn out. l. 135.

The melting voice through mazes running,
Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony. l. 143.

Hence, vain deluding joys,
The brood of Folly, without father bred.
Il Penseroso (1632). l. 1.

As thick and numberless
As the gay motes that people the sunbeams.
l. 7.

Hail, divinest Melancholy. l. 12.

And looks commercing with the skies,
Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes. l. 39.

Spare Fast, that oft with Gods doth diet. l. 46.

And add to these retirèd Leisure,
That in trim gardens takes his pleasure. l. 49.

The Cherub Contemplation. l. 54.

Sweet bird, that shunn'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy. l. 61.

Where glowing embers through the room
Teach light to counterfeit a gloom,
Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth. l. 79.

Sometime let gorgeous Tragedy
In sceptred pall come sweeping by. l. 97.

Such notes as, warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek. l. 104.

Where more is meant than meets the ear.
l. 120.

But let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloister's pale. l. 155.

With antique pillars massy proof,
And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light;
There let the pealing organ blow
To the full-voiced quire below,
In service high, and anthems clear
As may, with sweetness, through mine ear,
Dissolve me into ecstasies,
And bring all heaven before mine eyes. l. 159.

Till old experience do attain
To something like prophetic strain.* l. 173.

Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie.
Arcades (1633). Song 1.

Under the shady roof
Of branching elm star-proof. Song 2.

Above the smoke and stir of this dim spot,
Which men call Earth. Comus (1634), l. 5.

Yet some there be that by due steps aspire
To lay their just hands on that golden key
That opes the palace of Eternity. l. 12.

* "From hence, no question, has sprung an observation . . . confirmed now into a settled opinion, that some long experienced souls in the world, before their dislodging, arrive to the height of prophetic spirits."—Old translation of Erasmus's Praise of Folly.

But the true soul,
Burns the same where'er it goes.
Come o'er the sea.

No eye to watch, and no tongue to wound us,
All earth forgot, and all heaven around us.
Ib.

Hate cannot wish thee worse
Than guilt and shame have made thee.
When first I met thee.

The light that lies
In woman's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.
The time I've lost.

My only books
Were woman's looks,
And folly's all they've taught me.† Ib.

Come rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer,
Though the herd have fled from thee, thy love is still here. Come, rest in this bosom.

I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart,
But I know that I love thee, whatever thou art. Ib.

They may rail at this life—from the hour I began it,
 I've found it a life full of kindness and bliss ;
 And until they can show me some happier planet,
 More social and bright, I'll content me with this. They may rail.

And doth not a meeting like this make amends
 For all the long years I've been wandering away ? And doth not a meeting.

* Answer to the question, "Why is a pump like Viscount Castlereagh ?"

233a

Yes—for a spirit, pure as hers,
Is always pure, even while it errs;
As sunshine, broken in the rill,
Though turned astray, is sunshine still. Ib.
Deep, deep—where never care or pain,
Shall reach her innocent heart again! Ib.
Alas—how light a cause may move
Dissension between hearts that love!
Hearts that the world in vain had tried,
And sorrow had more closely tied;
That stood the storm, when waves were rough,
Yet in a sunny hour fall off,
Like ships, that have gone down at sea,
When heaven was all tranquillity! Ib.
And oh! if there be an elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this. Ib.

None knew whether
The voice or lute was most divine,
So wondrously they went together. Ib.
Love on through all ills, and love on till they die. Ib.

The Jolly Testator.

So I wonder a woman, the Mistress of Hearts,
Should descend to aspire to be Master of Arts;
A Ministering Angel in woman we see,
And an angel need covet no other Degree.
O why should a Woman not get a Degree.

NEWBOLT, Sir Henry John (b. 1862)

To set the Cause above renown,
To love the game beyond the prize,
To honour, while you strike him down,
The foe that comes with fearless eyes;
To count the life of battle good,
And dear the land that gave you birth;
And dearer yet the brotherhood
That binds the brave of all the earth.
The Island Race (1898). Clifton Chapel.

* Pure water is the best of gifts that man to man can bring,
But who am I that I should have the best of anything?
Let princes revel at the pump, let peers with ponds make free;
Whiskey or wine or even beer is good enough for me.
*Anon. Attributed to the Hon. G. W. E. Russell and also to Lord Neaves, but not published in his "Songs and Verses," where the quatrain above quoted appears. For other versions, see "Notes and

The tree of deepest root is found
Least willing still to quit the ground ;
'Twas therefore said by ancient sages
That love of life increased with years,
So much that in our later stages,
When pains grow sharp, and sickness rages,
The greatest love of life appears.

The Three Warnings.

'Tis never for their wisdom that one loves the wisest, or for their wit that one loves the wittiest ; 'tis for benevolence and virtue and honest fondness one loves people ; the other qualities make one proud of loving them, too.

* Paraphrased by Johnson in his Life of Cowley :
"Wit is that which has been often thought, but was never before so well expressed."

And ten low words oft creep in one dull line.

l. 347.

Where'er you find "the western cooling breeze,"

In the next line, it "whispers through the trees:"

If crystal streams "with pleasing murmurs creep,"

The reader's threatened (not in vain) with "sleep":

Then at the last and only couplet fraught With some unmeaning thing they call a thought,

A needless Alexandrine ends the song,
That like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.

l. 350.

True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,

As those move easiest who have learned to dance.

'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence,
The sound must seem an echo to the sense:
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;

But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent roar:

When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,

The line too labours, and the words move slow;
Not so when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er the unbending corn, and skims along the main.

l. 362.

Avoid extremes; and shun the fault of such,
Who still are pleased too little or too much.
At every trifle scorn to take offence;
That always shows great pride, or little sense.

l. 384.

For fools admire, but men of sense approve.

l. 391.

Regard not then if wit be old or new,
But blame the false, and value still the true.

l. 406.

But let a lord once own the happy lines,
How the art brightens! how the style refines!
Before his sacred name flies every fault,
And each exalted stanza teems with thought!

l. 419.

Some praise at morning what they blame at night,

But always think the last opinion right.

l. 431.

And still to-morrow's wiser than to-day.
We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;
Our wiser sons, no doubt, will think us so.

Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.
Canto 5, l. 34.

Awake, my St. John, leave all meaner things
To low ambition, and the pride of kings.
Let us (since life can little more supply
Than just to look about us and to die),
Expatiate free o'er all this scene of man;
A mighty maze! but not without a plan.

An Essay on Man (1733). Epistle 1, l. 1.

Together let us beat this ample field,
Try what the open, what the covert yield;
The latent tracts, the giddy heights, explore
Of all who blindly creep, or sightless soar;
Eye nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise;
Laugh where we must, be candid where we can;

But vindicate the ways of God to man.
Say first, of God above, of man below
What can we reason, but from what we know?
l. 8.

Observe how system into system runs,
What other planets circle other suns,
What varied being peoples every star.
l. 25.

Heaven from all creatures hides the book of
fate,
All but the page prescribed, their present state.
l. 77.

Pleased to the last, he crops the flowery food,
And licks the hand just raised to shed his blood.
l. 83.

Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish, or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruin hurled,
And now a bubble burst, and now a world.
l. 87.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast:
Man never is, but always to be blest:
The soul, uneasy and confined from home,
Rests and expatiates in a life to come.
Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutored mind
Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind;
His soul proud science never taught to stray
Far as the solar walk, or milky way;
Yet simple nature to his hope has given,
Behind the cloud-topped hill, an humbler heaven.
l. 95.

But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.

Go wiser thou! and in thy scale of sense
Weigh thy opinion against Providence.
l. 111.

In pride, in reasoning pride our error lies;
All quit their sphere, and rush into the skies;
Pride still is aiming at the blest abodes,
Men would be angels, angels would be gods.
l. 123.

The first Almighty Cause
Acts not by partial, but by general laws.
l. 145.

But all subsists by elemental strife,
And passions are the elements of life.
l. 169.

Die of a rose in aromatic pain.
l. 200.

The spider's touch, how exquisitely fine!
Feels at each thread and lives along the line.
l. 217.

What thin partitions sense from thought divide!
l. 226.

From nature's chain, whatever link you strike,
Tenth, or ten thousandth, breaks the chain alike.
l. 245.

All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
Whose body nature is, and God the soul.
l. 268.

As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
As the rapt seraph that adores and burns:
To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all.
l. 276.

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good:
And, spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear, whatever is, is right.
l. 289.

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is man.*
Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise, and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the stoic's pride.
Epistle 2 (1733), l. 1.

Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused, or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled:
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!
l. 13.

Instruct the planets in what orbs to run,
Correct old time, and regulate the sun.
l. 21.

What Reason weaves, by Passion is undone.
l. 42.

Two principles in human nature reign;
Self-love to urge, and reason, to restrain:
Nor this a good, nor that a bad, we call;
Each works its end, to move or govern all.
l. 53.

* "La vraie science et le vrai étude de l'homme c'est l'homme."—Pierre Charron (1541–1603), Treatise on Wisdom, Book 1, ch. 1. (In the first edition of Moral Essays the line appeared: "The only science of mankind is man.")

Fixed like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot;
Or meteor-like, flame lawless through the void,
Destroying others, by himself destroyed. l. 63.

Let subtle schoolmen teach these friends to fight,

More studious to divide than to unite. l. 81.

Pleasure, or wrong or rightly understood,
Our greatest evil, or our greatest good. l. 91.

On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but passion is the gale.

l. 107.

All spread their charms, but charm not all
alike;

On different senses different objects strike.

l. 127.

And hence one master passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest.

l. 131.

The young disease, that must subdue at length, Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his strength. l. 135.

Envy, to which the ignoble mind's a slave,
Is emulation in the learn'd or brave. l. 191.

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
But where's the extreme of vice was ne'er agreed:

Ask where's the north? at York, 'tis on the Tweed;

In Scotland, at the Orcades; and there,
At Greenland, Zembla, or the Lord knows where. l. 217.

Virtuous and vicious every man must be,
Few in the extreme, but all in the degree.

l. 231.

Whate'er the passion, knowledge, fame, or pelf,

Not one will change his neighbour with himself.

The learn'd is happy nature to explore,
The fool is happy that he knows no more.

l. 261.

Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law,
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw:
Some livelier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite:
Scarfs, garters, gold, amuse his riper stage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of age:

Pleased with this bauble still, as that before;
Till tired he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.

l. 275.

In folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.

l. 288.

The hour concealed, and so remote the fear,
Death still draws nearer, never seeming near.

Epistle 3 (1733), l. 76.

Whether with reason, or with instinct blest,
Know, all enjoy that power which suits them best;

To bliss alike by that direction tend,
And find the means proportioned to their end.

l. 79.

The state of nature was the reign of God.

l. 148.

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.

l. 177.

In vain thy reason finer webs shall draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law.

l. 191.

The enormous faith of many made for one.

l. 242.

Forced into virtue thus, by self-defence,
Ev'n kings learned justice and benevolence:
Self-love forsook the path it first pursued,
And found the private in the public good.

l. 279.

For forms of government let fools contest,
Whate'er is best administered is best:
For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight;
His can't be wrong whose life is in the right.

l. 303.

In Faith and Hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is Charity.

l. 307.

Oh happiness! our being's end and aim!
Good, pleasure, ease, content, whate'er thy
name:

That something still which prompts the eternal
sigh,

For which we bear to live, or dare to die.

Epistle 4 (1734), l. 1.

Fixed to no spot is happiness sincere,
'Tis nowhere to be found, or everywhere;
'Tis never to be bought, but always free.

l. 15.

There needs but thinking right, and meaning well.

l. 32.

Order is Heaven's first law, and this confest,
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest.

l. 49.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence.

But health consists with temperance alone.

l. 79.

But sometimes virtue starves, while vice is fed.
What then? Is the reward of virtue bread?

l. 150.

What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heart-felt joy.

l. 167.

Honour and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part; there all the honour lies.

l. 193.

Worth makes the man, and want of it, the
fellow;

The rest is all but leather or prunella.* l. 203.

But by your father's worth if yours you rate,
Count me those only who were good and great.

* "Corcillum est quod homines facit, cetera quisquilia omnia."—Petronius Arbiter, c. 75.

Go ! if your ancient but ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood,
Go ! and pretend your family is young ;
Nor own your fathers have been wrong so long.
What can ennoble sots, or slaves, or cowards ?
Alas ! not all the blood of all the Howards.
Look next on greatness ; say where greatness lies :

" Where, but among the heroes and the wise ?"
Heroes are much the same, the points agreed,
From Macedonia's madman to the Swede.
l. 209.

A wit's a feather, and a chief a rod ;
An honest man's the noblest work of God.
l. 247.

All fame is foreign, but of true desert ;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart :
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas ;
And more true joy Marcellus exiled feels,
Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels. l. 253.

Painful pre-eminence ! yourself to view
Above life's weakness, and its comforts too.
l. 267.

If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shined,
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind :
Or, ravished with the whistling of a name,
See Cromwell, damned to everlasting fame !
l. 281.

Know then this truth (enough for man to know),
" Virtue alone is happiness below." l. 309.

Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks through nature up to nature's God.*
l. 331.

The centre moved, a circle straight succeeds,
Another still, and still another spreads. l. 365.

Formed by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.
l. 379.

Oh ! while along the stream of time thy name
Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale ?
l. 383.

Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend.
l. 390.

For wit's false mirror held up nature's light ;
Showed erring pride, whatever is, is right ;
That reason, passion, answers one great aim ;
That true self-love and social are the same ;
That virtue only makes our bliss below ;
And all our knowledge is, ourselves to know.
l. 393.

Father of all ! in every age,
In every clime adored,
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
Jehovah, Jove, or Lord !

* Stated by Warton to be verbatim from Boling-broke's Letters to Pope.

Thou Great First Cause, least understood :
Who all my sense confined
To know but this, that thou art good,
And that myself am blind.

The Universal Prayer (1738).

And binding nature fast in fate
Left free the human will. Ib.

What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This, teach me more than hell to shun,
That, more than heaven pursue. Ib.

And deal damnation round the land,
On each I judge thy foe. Ib.

Save me alike from foolish pride
Or impious discontent. Ib.

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see ;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me. Ib.

And yet the fate of all extremes is such,
Men may be read, as well as books, too much.
To observations which ourselves we make,
We grow more partial, for the observer's sake.
Moral Essays. (In Five Epistles to several persons.) Epistle 1. To Lord Cobham
(1733). l. 9.

Like following life through creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect. l. 29.

All manners take a tincture from our own,
Or come discoloured through our passions shown.
Or fancy's beam enlarges, multiplies,
Contracts, inverts, and gives ten thousand dyes. l. 33.

When half our knowledge we must snatch, not take. l. 40.

Itch of vulgar praise. l. 60.

Who reasons wisely is not therefore wise,
His pride in reasoning, not in acting lies.
l. 117.

'Tis from high life high characters are drawn ;
A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn. l. 135.

'Tis education forms the common mind,
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.
l. 149.

Manners with fortunes, humours turn with climes,
Tenets with books, and principles with times.
l. 172.

Search, then, the Ruling Passion : there alone
The wild are constant, and the cunning known ;
The fool consistent, and the false sincere ;
Priests, princes, women, no dissemblers here.
l. 174.

Wharton, the scorn and wonder of our days,
Whose ruling passion was the lust of praise.
l. 179.

" Odious ! in woollen ! 'twould a saint provoke ! "

Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke.
l. 246.

And you, brave Cobham ! to the latest breath,
Shall feel your ruling passion strong in death :
Such in those moments as in all the past,
"Oh, save my country, heaven !" shall be your last. l. 262.

Nothing so true as what you once let fall,
"Most women have no characters at all."
Epistle 2. To a Lady.
[Martha Blount] (1735). l. 1.

Whether the charmer sinner it or saint it ;
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it. l. 15.

Choose a firm cloud, before it fall, and in it Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute. l. 19.

Fine by defect and delicately weak. l. 43.

See sin in state, majestically drunk. l. 69.

With too much quickness ever to be taught ;
With too much thinking to have common thought. l. 97.

Offend her, and she knows not to forgive ;
Oblige her, and she'll hate you while you live :
But die, and she'll adore you—then the bust
And temple rise—then fall again to dust. l. 137.

To heirs unknown descends the unguarded store,
Or wanders, heaven-directed, to the poor. l. 149.

Virtue she finds too painful an endeavour,
Content to dwell in decencies for ever. l. 163.

Men, some to business, some to pleasure take ;
But every woman is at heart a rake :
Men, some to quiet, some to public strife ;
But every lady would be queen for life. l. 215.

Pleasures the sex, as children birds, pursue,
Still out of reach, yet never out of view. l. 231.

See how the world its veterans rewards !
A youth of frolics, an old age of cards. l. 243.

Oh ! blest with temper, whose unclouded ray
Can make to-morrow cheerful as to-day ;
She, who can love a sister's charms, or hear
Sighs for a daughter with unwounded ear ;
She who ne'er answers till a husband cools,
Or, if she rules him, never shows she rules ;
Charms by accepting, by submitting sways,
Yet has her humour most when she obeys. l. 257.

And mistress of herself, though china fall. l. 268.

Woman's at best a contradiction still. l. 270.

Who shall decide, when doctors disagree,
And soundest casuists, like you and me ?
Epistle 3. To Lord Bathurst (1732). l. 1.

Like doctors thus, when much dispute has past,
We find our tenets just the same at last. l. 15.

Blest paper-credit ! last and best supply !
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly ! l. 39.

But thousands die, without or this or that,
Die, and endow a college, or a cat. l. 95.

The ruling passion, be it what it will,
The ruling passion conquers reason still. l. 153.

Extremes in nature equal good produce,
Extremes in man concur to general use. l. 161.

Who sees pale Mammon pine amidst his store,
Sees but a backward steward for the poor ;
This year a reservoir, to keep and spare ;
The next a fountain, spouting through his heir,

In lavish streams to quench a country's thirst,
And men and dogs shall drink him till they burst. l. 171.

Rise, honest Muse ! and sing the Man of Ross ! l. 250.

Ye little stars ! hide your diminished rays. l. 282.

Who builds a church to God, and not to fame,
Will never mark the marble with his name. l. 285.

In the worst inn's worst room. l. 299.

And tape-tied curtains, never meant to draw. l. 302.

Alas ! how changed from him,
That life of pleasure, and that soul of whim ! l. 305.

Where London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head, and lies. l. 339.

Constant at church, and change. l. 347.

But Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor. l. 351.

The tempter saw his time ; the work he plied ;
Stocks and subscriptions poured on every side,
Till all the demon makes his full descent
In one abundant shower of cent. per cent.,
Sinks deep within him, and possesses whole,
Then dubs director, and secures his soul. l. 369.

Good sense, which only is the gift of Heaven,
And though no science, fairly worth the seven.
Epistle 4. To the Earl of Burlington (1731). l. 43.

Lo, some are vellum, and the rest as good
For all his lordship knows, but they are wood. l. 139.

Light quirks of music, broken and uneven,
Make the soul dance upon a jig to heaven. l. 143.

To rest, the cushion and soft dean invite,
Who never mentions hell to ears polite. l. 149.

Bid harbours open, public ways extend,
Bid temples, worthier of the God, ascend ;
Bid the broad arch the dangerous flood contain,

The mole projected break the roaring main ;
Back to his bounds their subject sea command,
And roll obedient rivers through the land ;
These honours, Peace to happy Britain brings,
These are imperial works, and worthy kings. l. 197.

252a

See the wild waste of all-devouring years !
How Rome her own sad sepulchre appears !
Epistle 5. To Addison (1721). l. 1.

The sacred rust of twice ten hundred years.
l. 38.

Statesman, yet friend to truth ! of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear ;
Who broke no promise, served no private end,
Who gained no title, and who lost no friend,
Ennobled by himself, by all approved,
And praised, unenvied, by the muse he loved.*
l. 67.

Shut, shut the door, good John ! fatigued I said,
Tie up the knocker ; say I'm sick, I'm dead.
Prologue to the Satires.
Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot (1734). l. 1.

Even Sunday shines no Sabbath day to me.
l. 12.

A clerk, foredoomed his father's soul to cross.
Who pens a stanza, when he should engross,
l. 17.

Friend to my life, which, did you not prolong,
The world had wanted many an idle song.

Fired that the house reject him, " 'S death I'll print it,
And shame the fools." l. 61.

No creature smarts so little as a fool. l. 84.

Who shames a scribbler ? break one cobweb through,
He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread anew ;
Destroy his fib or sophistry,—in vain,
The creature's at his dirty work again,
Throned in the centre of his thin designs,
Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines ! l. 89.

As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisped in numbers, for the numbers came.
l. 127.

This long disease, my life. l. 131.

Each word-catcher, that lives on syllables.
l. 166.

Pretty in amber to observe the forms
Of hairs, or straws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms !
The things, we know, are neither rich nor rare,
But wonder how the devil they got there.
l. 169.

Means not, but blunders round about a meaning ;
And he whose fustian's so sublimely bad,
It is not poetry, but prose run mad. l. 187.

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne.
l. 197.

Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And, without sneering, teach the rest to sneer ;
Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault and hesitate dislike. l. 201.

252b

And so obliging, that he ne'er obliged. l. 208.

Like Cato, give his little senate laws,
And sit attentive to his own applause. l. 209.

Who but must laugh, if such a man there be ?
Who would not weep if Atticus were he ?
l. 213.

Above a patron, though I condescend
Sometimes to call a minister my friend,
I was not born for courts or great affairs ;
I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers.
l. 265.

Cursed be the verse, how well soe'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my foe.
l. 283.

Let Sporus tremble !—A. What that thing of silk,
Sporus, that mere white curd of ass's milk ?
Satire or sense, alas ! can Sporus feel ?
Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel ?
l. 305.

So well-bred spaniels civilly delight
In mumbling of the game they dare not bite.
Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams run dimpling all the way.
l. 313.

Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the dust. l. 333.

That not in fancy's maze he wandered long ;
But stooped to truth, and moralised his song.
l. 340.

Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle art,
No language, but the language of the heart.
By nature honest, by experience wise,
Healthy by temperance, and by exercise.
l. 398.

The lines are weak, another's pleased to say,
Lord Fanny spins a thousand such a day.
Satires and Epistles of Horace. Imitated
(1733). Book 2, Sat. 1, l. 5.

In moderation placing all my glory,
While Tories call me Whig, and Whigs a Tory.
Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet
To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet. l. 67.

The feast of reason and the flow of soul. l. 128.

It stands on record, that in Richard's times
A man was hanged for very honest rhymes.*

In the dry desert of a thousand lines. l. 111.
What will a child learn sooner than a song ?
l. 205.

Waller was smooth ; but Dryden taught to join
The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestic march, and energy divine.
l. 267.

Even copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
The last and greatest art, the art to blot.
l. 280.

Who pants for glory finds but short repose ;
A breath revives him or a breath o'erthrows.
l. 300.

There still remains, to mortify a wit,
The many-headed monster of the pit. l. 304.

What dear delight to Britons farce affords !
Ever the taste of mobs, but now of lords.
l. 310.

To know the poet from the man of rhymes.
l. 341.

We poets are (upon a poet's word)
Of all mankind, the creatures most absurd.
l. 358.

The zeal of fools offends at any time,
But most of all, the zeal of fools in rhyme.
l. 406.

"Praise undeserved is scandal in disguise."†
l. 413.

* These lines are adapted from Creech's translation.
† From a poem, "The Celebrated Beauties" (Anon.), Tonson's Miscellanies (1709). In The Garland, a collection of poems by Mr. Broadhurst (1721), the line appears : "Praise undeserved is satire in disguise."

Poetic justice, with her lifted scale,
Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,
And solid pudding against empty praise.
Book 1, l. 52.

But lived in Settle's numbers one day more.
Now mayors and shrieves all hushed and satiated lay,
Yet ate, in dreams, the custard of the day ;
While pensive poets painful vigils keep,
Sleepless themselves to give their readers sleep. l. 90.

Swearing and supperless the hero sate,
Blasphemed his gods, the dice, and damned
his fate. l. 116.

Sinking from thought to thought, a vast profound,
Plunged for his sense but found no bottom
there,
Yet wrote and floundered on in mere despair.

The danger o'er, both are alike required,
God is forgotten, and the Doctor slighted."

— Epigram by Robt. Owen (1771-1858).

A somewhat similar idea, in Latin, is in the works of John Owen, of Oxford, 1647 :

" Intrantis medici facies tres esse videntur
Ægrotanti ; hominis, Dæmonis, atque Dei.
Cum primum accessit medicus dixitque salutem,
En Deus aut custos angelus, æger ait."

(To the sick man the physician when he enters seems to have three faces, those of a man, a devil, a god.
When the physician first comes and announces the safety of the patient, then the sick man says : " Behold a God or a guardian angel ! ")

" Soldiers are never regarded in time of peace ; for when a war is ended soldiers are out of credit."—
Margaret Duchess of Newcastle : The Sociable Companions, 1. 1 (1668). The expression seems to have been a proverb.

SCOTT, Sir Walter (1771-1832)
November's sky is chill and drear,
November's leaf is red and scar.
Marmion (1808). Canto 1. Introduction.

The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows. Ib.

And wit that loved to play, not wound. Ib.

If ever from an English heart,
O here let prejudice depart ! Ib.

Stood for his country's glory fast,
And nailed her colours to the mast. Ib.

Profaned the God-given strength, and marred the lofty line. Ib.

Coal-black, and grizzled here and there,
But more through toil than age.
Canto 1, St. 5.

His square-turned joints, and strength of limb,
Showed him no carpet knight so trim,

But, in close fight, a champion grim,
In camps, a leader sage. Ib.

And frame love ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair. St. 7.

Stout heart, and open hand. St. 10.

For lady's suit, and minstrel's strain,
By knight should ne'er be heard in vain.
St. 13.

We hold our greyhound in our hand,
Our falcon on our glove ;

But where should we find leash or band
For dame that loves to rove ?

Let the wild falcon soar her swing,
She'll stoop when she has tired her wing.
St. 17.

I love such holy rambles ; still
They know to charm a weary hill

With song, romance, or lay ;
Some jovial tale, or glee, or jest,

Some lying legend at the least,
They bring to cheer the way. St. 25.

Just at the age 'twixt boy and youth,
When thought is speech, and speech is truth.
Canto 2. Introduction.

When musing on companions gone,
We doubly feel ourselves alone. Ib.

Love, to her ear, was but a name
Combined with vanity and shame. St. 3.

Her hopes, her fears, her joys were all
Bounded within the cloister wall. Ib.

Her kinsman bade her give her hand
To one who loved her for her land. St. 5.

In Saxon strength that abbey frowned,
With massive arches broad and round. St. 10.

Built ere the art was known
By pointed aisles, and shafted stalk,
The arcades of an alleyed walk
To emulate in stone. Ib.

'Tis an old tale, and often told. St. 27.

And come he slow, or come he fast,
It is but Death who comes at last. St. 30.

Still from the grave their voice is heard.
Canto 3. Introduction.

Theirs was the glee of martial breast,
And laughter theirs at little jest. St. 4.

Yet, trained in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldiers' hardy heart.

They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May ;

With open hand, and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy. Ib.

In the lost battle,
Borne down by the flying,
Where mingles war's rattle,
With groans of the dying. St. 11.

Shame and dishonour sit
By his grave ever ;
Blessing shall hallow it,—
Never, O never ! Ib.

High minds, of native pride and force,
Most deeply feel thy pangs, Remorse ! St. 13.

Wearied from doubt to doubt to flee,
We welcome fond credulity,
Guide confident, though blind. St. 30.

Far may we search before we find
A heart so manly and so kind !
Canto 4. Introduction.

The flash of that satiric rage,
Which, bursting on the early stage,
Branded the vices of the age,
And broke the keys of Rome. St. 7.

Remains of rude magnificence. St. 11.

The saddest heart might pleasure take
To see all nature gay. St. 15.

'Twere good
That kings would think withal,
When peace and wealth their land has blessed

'Tis better to sit still and rest,
Than rise, perchance to fall. St. 29

Where's the coward that would not dare
To fight for such a land ? St. 30.

But looking liked, and liking loved.
Canto 5. Introduction.

Bold in thy applause,
The Bard shall scorn pedantic laws. Ib.

And, oh ! he had that merry glance
That seldom lady's heart resists.
Lightly from fair to fair he flew,
And loved to plead, lament, and sue—
Suit lightly won, and short-lived pain,
For monarchs seldom sigh in vain. St. 9.

So faithful in love, and so dauntless in war,
There never was knight like the young Lochin-
var. St. 12.

With a smile on her lips and a tear in her eye.
Ib.

But woe awaits a country when
She sees the tears of bearded men. St. 16.

Heap on more wood ! The wind is chill ;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.
Each age has deemed the new-born year
The fittest time for festal cheer.

Canto 6. Introduction.

Power laid his rod and rule aside,
And Ceremony doffed her pride. Ib.

If unmelodious was the song,
It was a hearty note and strong. Ib.

England was merry England, when Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale,
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale ;
A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year.
Ib.

Small thought was his, in after-time
E'er to be hitched into a rhyme. Ib.

A life both dull and dignified. St. 1.

And darest thou then
To beard the lion in his den,
The Douglas in his hall ? St. 14.

Oh what a tangled web we weave
When first we practise to deceive ! St. 17.

And such a yell was there,
Of sudden and portentous birth,
As if men fought upon the earth,
And fiends in upper air. St. 25.

Good-night to Marmion. St. 28.

O woman ! in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
And variable as the shade
By the light quivering aspen made,—
When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou ! St. 30.

Forgot were hatred, wrongs, and fears ;
The plaintive voice alone she hears,
Sees but the dying man. Ib.

A sinful heart makes feeble hand. St. 31.

The monk, with unavailing cares,
Exhausted all the Church's prayers. St. 32.

Charge, Chester, charge ! On, Stanley, on !
Were the last words of Marmion. Ib.

O for a blast of that dread horn
On Fontarabian echoes borne ! St. 33.

With thy heart commune, and be still.
If ever, in temptation strong,
Thou led'st the right path for the wrong,
If every devious step, thus trod,
Still led thee farther from the road ;
Dread thou to speak presumptuous doom
On noble Marmion's lowly tomb ;
But say, " He died a gallant knight,
With sword in hand, for England's right." St. 37.

Why then a final note prolong,
Or lengthen out a closing song ? L'Envoi.

To all, to each, a fair good-night
And pleasing dreams, and slumbers light ! Ib.

Comparing what thou art,
With what thou might'st have been.
Waterloo. 18.

The stag at eve had drunk his fill.
Lady of the Lake (1810). Canto 1, st. 1.

'Twere long to tell what steeds gave o'er.
St. 6.

Two dogs of black St. Hubert's breed,
Unmatched for courage, breath, and speed.
St. 7.

Woe worth the chase, woe worth the day,
That costs thy life, my gallant grey ! St. 9

Back limped, with slow and crippled pace,
The sulky leaders of the chase. St. 10.

The rocky summits, split and rent,
Formed turret, dome, or battlement,
Or seemed fantastically set
With cupola or minaret. St. 11.

In listening mood, she seemed to stand,
The guardian Naiad of the strand. St. 17.

And ne'er did Grecian chisel trace
A Nymph, a Naiad, or a Grace,
Of finer form, or lovelier face !
What though the sun, with ardent frown,
Had slightly tinged her cheek with brown ?
St. 18.

A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dashed the dew.
Ib.

On his bold visage middle age
Had slightly pressed its signet sage,
Yet had not quenched the open truth
And fiery vehemence of youth. St. 21.

The will to do, the soul to dare. Ib.

His limbs were cast in manly mould,
For hardy sports or contest bold. Ib.

His ready speech flowed fair and free,
In phrase of gentlest courtesy ;
Yet seemed that tone, and gesture bland,
Less used to sue than to command. Ib.

The Minstrel was infirm and old;
His withered cheek and tresses grey
Seemed to have known a better day.

Lay of the Last Minstrel (1805).
Introduction.

The unpremeditated lay. Ib.

Old times were changed, old manners gone;
A stranger filled the Stuarts' throne;
The bigots of the iron time
Had called his harmless art a crime. Ib.

And tuned, to please a peasant's ear,
The harp a king had loved to hear. Ib.

Whose ponderous grate and massy bar
Had oft rolled back the tide of war. Ib.

His trembling hand had lost the ease,
Which marks security to please. Ib.

The present scene, the future lot,
His toils, his wants, were all forgot. Ib.

They carved at the meal
With gloves of steel,
And they drank the red wine through the helmet barred. Canto 1, st. 4.

Such is the custom of Branksome Hall. St. 7.

Vengeance, deep-brooding o'er the slain,
Had locked the source of softer woe;
And burning pride and high disdain
Forbade the rising tear to flow. St. 9.

To her bidding she could bow
The viewless forms of air. St. 12.

I cannot tell how the truth may be;
I say the tale as 'twas said to me. St. 22.

My heart is dead, my veins are cold;
I may not, must not, sing of love. St. 30.

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
And men below, and saints above;
For love is heaven, and heaven is love.
Canto 3, st. 2.

The meeting of these champions proud
Seemed like the bursting thunder-cloud. St. 5.

He was always for ill, and never for good.
St. 12.

And laughed, and shouted, "Lost! Lost!
Lost!" St. 13.

He never counted him a man,
Would strike below the knee. St. 17.

A simple race! they waste their toil
For the vain tribute of a smile. St. 35.

Call it not vain:—they do not err,
Who say, that when the Poet dies,
Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
And celebrates his obsequies.
Canto 5, st. 1.

True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven. St. 13.

It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind. Ib.

Scarce rued the boy his present plight,
So much he longed to see the fight. St. 18.

Not you, but Fate, has vanquished me.
St. 26.

As I am true to thee and thine,
Do thou be true to me and mine! Ib.

He would not waken old debate,
For he was void of rancorous hate,
Though rude, and scant of courtesy. St. 28.

Yet, rest thee God! for well I know
I ne'er shall find a nobler foe. St. 29.

Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,

This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned

From wandering on a foreign strand?
If such there breathe, go, mark him well;
For him no Minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim;
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung.
Canto 6, st. 1.

O Caledonia! stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!
Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood,
Land of my sires! St. 2.

Unknown the manner of his death. St. 7.

For love will still be lord of all. St. 11.

Soft is the note, and sad the lay,
That mourns the lovely Rosabelle. St. 23.

From many a garnished niche around,
Stern saints and tortured martyrs frowned.
St. 29.

That day of wrath, that dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away.
St. 31.

Oft had he changed his weary side,
Composed his limbs, and vainly sought
By effort strong to banish thought.
Sleep came at length, but with a train
Of feelings true and fancies vain,
Mingling, in wild disorder cast,
The expected future with the past.
Rokeby (1813). Canto 1, st. 2.

He woke and feared again to close
His eyelids in such dire repose. St. 4.

He saw and scorned the petty wile. St. 6.

Death had he seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by tortures slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes, and scorned them all.
St. 8.

Assumed despondence bent his head,
While troubled joy was in his eye.
The well-feigned sorrow to belie. St. 14.

Doubts, horrors, superstitious fears
Saddened and dimmed descending years.
St. 17.

Thoughts from the tongue that slowly part,
Glance quick as lightning through the heart.
St. 19.

SCOTT

273a

Hour after hour he loved to pore

Friendship, esteem, and fair regard,
And praise, the poet's best reward ! St. 27.

For not to rank nor sex confined
Is this vain ague of the mind. (Superstition.)
Canto 2, st. 11.

The sparkle of his swarthy eye. Canto 3, st. 4.

Speak thy purpose out ;
I love not mystery or doubt. St. 11.

He bids the ruddy cup go round,
Till sense and sorrow both are drowned.
St. 15.

Much then I learned, and much can show,
Of human guilt and human woe,
Yet ne'er have, in my wanderings, known
A wretch whose sorrows matched my own.
Canto 4, st. 23.

His face was of the doubtful kind
That wins the eye, but not the mind.
Canto 5, st. 16.

His was the subtle look and sly,
That, spying all, seems nought to spy. Ib.

So flits the world's uncertain span !
Nor zeal for God, nor love for man
Gives mortal monuments a date
Beyond the power of Time and Fate.
Canto 6, st. 1.

And sidelong glanced, as to explore,
In meditated flight, the door. St. 6.

Fell as he was in act and mind,
He left no bolder heart behind ;
Then give him, for a soldier meet,
A soldier's cloak for winding sheet. St. 33.

So—now, the danger dared at last,
Look back, and smile at perils past.

Bridal of Triermain (1813).
Introduction. St. 2.

Like Collins, ill-starred name !
Whose lay's requital was, that tardy Fame,
Who bound no laurel round his living head,
Should hang it o'er his monument when dead.
St. 8.

So sweet, so soft, so faint,
It seemed an angel's whispered call
To an expiring saint. Canto 1, st. 4.

Where lives the man that has not tried,
How mirth can into folly glide,
And folly into sin ? St. 21.

For priests will allow of a broken vow,
For penance or for gold. Canto 2, st. 17.

Brand him who will with base report,—
He shall be free from mine. St. 18.

Lordlings and witlings not a few,
Incapable of doing aught,

* Sound, sound the clarion, fill the fife,
Throughout the sensual world proclaim,
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name.

These lines are part of a poem of fourteen stanzas in The Edinburgh Bee, October 12, 1791, said to be written by Major [Thos. Osbert] Mordaunt (1730-1809). Scott was twenty-one at the time of the publication, and was in Edinburgh, but there is no evidence to prove that he wrote this stanza, which is strikingly superior to the rest of the poem.

Oh, then, I see, Queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the forefinger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners'
legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
Her traces, of the smallest spider's web,
Her collars, of the moonshine's watery beams.

Ib.

Not half so big as a round little worm
Pricked from the lazy finger of a maid.

Ib.

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.

Ib.

And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep.

And in their triumph die. ii. 6.

O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint!
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idle in the wanton summer air. Ib.

Till holy church incorporate two in one. Ib.

Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. iii. 1.

Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat. Ib.

Men's eyes were made to look, and let them
gaze:

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. Ib.

O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! Ib.

No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:—a plague o' both your houses! Ib.

I thought all for the best. Ib.

O, I am fortune's fool! Ib.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. Ib.

Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' mansion. iii. 2.

When he shall die,
Take him, and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun. Ib.

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical! Ib.

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace! Ib.

There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers. Ib.

He was not born for shame:
Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crowned
Sole monarch of the universal earth. Ib.

Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful
man;
Affliction is enamoured of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity. iii. 3.

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death. Ib.

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy. Ib.

Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet. Ib.

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountains' tops. iii. 5.

280a

Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps. iii. 5.

Villain and he be many miles asunder. Ib.

For Venus smiles not in a house of tears. iv. 1.

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty. iv. 2.

Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field. iv. 5.

"Music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding. Ib.

If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand :
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne. v. 1.

Meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones. Ib.

A beggarly account of empty boxes. Ib.

Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness
And fear'st to die ? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hang upon thy back,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's
law ;
The world affords no law to make thee rich ;
Then be not poor, but break it. Ib.

My poverty, but not my will, consents. Ib.

The time and my intents are savage-wild ;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea. v. 3.

Can vengeance be pursued further than death ?
Ib.

Tempt not a desperate man. Ib.

Put not another sin upon my head
By urging me to fury. Ib.

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book.
Ib.

Beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there. Ib.

Eyes, look your last !
Arms, take your last embrace ! Ib.

Come bitter conduct, come unsavoury guide !
Thou desperate pilot, now at length run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark !
Ib.

A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents. Ib.

But earthly happier * is the rose distilled,
Than that, which, withering on the virgin
thorn,

Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.
A Midsummer Night's Dream (c. 1595). i. 1.

* In all the old copies the reading is "earthlier happy." In the Folio the words are "earthlier happie." The "r" is supposed to have been transposed.

280b

Ah me ! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear, by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth. Ib.

Love looks not with the eyes, but with the
mind ;
And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind. Ib.

This is Eracles' vein. i. 2.

I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar
you as gently as any sucking dove ; I will roar
you an 'twere any nightingale. Ib.

Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire. ii. 1.

A proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day. ii. 2.

And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free. Ib.

I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well. Ib.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.* Ib.

I know a bank, where the wild thyme blows,
Where ox-lips, and the nodding violet grows ;
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine.† Ib.

The will of man is by his reason swayed. ii. 3.

God shield us !—a lion among ladies is a most dreadful thing : for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living. iii. 1.

Bless thee, Bottom ! bless thee ! thou art translated. Ib.

To say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. Ib.

Lord, what fools these mortals be ! iii. 2.

So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet a union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem. Ib.

And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye. Ib.

Cupid is a knavish lad
Thus to make poor females mad. Ib.

Jack shall have Jill,
Nought shall go ill,
The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well. Ib.

Who will not change a raven for a dove ?
iii. 3.

* The reading of Fisher's quarto. In the Folio the passage appears as one line : "I'll put a girdle about the earth in forty minutes."

† Stevens amends this to "whereon the wild thyme blows," and alters "luscious woodbine" to "lush woodbine."

SHAKESPEARE—Romeo and Juliet.—Two Gentlemen of Verona

281a

I have a reasonable good ear in music : let us have the tongs and the bones. iv. 1.

But as the fierce vexation of a dream. Ib.

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact.

One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,—
That is the madman : the lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth
to heaven,

And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing

A local habitation and a name. v. 1.

Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear ! Ib.

Very tragical mirth. Ib.

For never anything can be amiss
When simpleness and duty tender it. Ib.

And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence. Ib.

That is the true beginning of our end. Ib.

Our true intent is—all for your delight. Ib.

The best in this kind are but shadows. Ib.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve :
Lovers, to bed ; 'tis almost fairy time. Ib.

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
The Two Gentlemen of Verona (c. 1595). i. 1.

To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans ;
Coy looks, with heart-sore sighs. Ib.

I have no other but a woman's reason :
I think him so, because I think him so. Ib.

Since maids, in modesty, say "No," to that Which they would have the proferer construe
"Ay." Ib.

O how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day ! Ib.

Fire, that is closest kept, burns most of all.*
i. 2.

They love least, that let men know their love.
Ib.

And yet another yet. ii. 1.

A jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible
As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple ! Ib.

I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son. ii. 3.

I have done penance for contemning love.
ii. 4.

She is mine own ;
And I as rich in having such a jewel,

281b

As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Ib.

The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopped, impatiently doth rage. ii. 7.

Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words. Ib.

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces ;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels'
faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman. iii. 1.

Except I be by Sylvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale ;
Except I look on Sylvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon. Ib.

Win her with gifts, if she respect not words :
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More quick than words, do move a woman's mind. Ib.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good. Ib.

Hope is a lover's staff. Ib.

Ay, much is the force of heaven-bred poesy.
iii. 2.

A man I am, crossed with adversity. iv. 1.

Who is Sylvia ? what is she,
That all our swains commend her ?
Is she kind, as she is fair ? iv. 2.

Love doth to her eyes repair
To help him of his blindness. iv. 4.

Is she not passing fair ? Ib.

How use doth breed a habit in a man ! v. 4.

Were man
But constant, he were perfect. Ib.

I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not. Ib.

In sooth I know not why I am so sad ;
It wearies me : you say it wearies you ;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
I am to learn.

The Merchant of Venice (c. 1596). i. 1.

And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Ib.

Now, by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath framed strange fellows in her
time ;
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes

And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper ;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile

Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.
Ib.

* Founded on Ovid, Metam., 4, 64. See "Quoque magis," etc., p. 642c.

You have too much respect upon the world :
They lose it that do buy it with much care.

Ib.

I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano ;
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.

Ib.

Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster ?

Ib.

As who should say, I am Sir Oracle,
And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark !
O my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing.

Ib.

Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat, hid in two bushels of chaff : You shall seek all day ere you find them ; and when you have found them, they are not worth the search.

Ib.

My purse, my person, my extremest means
Lie all unlocked to your occasions.

Ib.

In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advised watch,
To find the other forth ; and by adventuring both

I oft found both.

Ib.

They are as sick that surfeit with too much,
as they that starve with nothing.

i. 2.

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces.

Ib.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

Ib.

I dote on his very absence.

Ib.

Ships are but boards, sailors but men ; there be land rats and water rats.

i. 3.

If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.

Ib.

Even there where merchants most do congregate.

Ib.

The devil can cite scripture for his purpose.

Ib.

A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath !

Ib.

For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.

Ib.

Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath, and whispering humbleness.

Ib.

For when did friendship take,
A breed of barren metal of his friend ?

Ib.

O father Abraham ! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teach them to suspect

The thoughts of others !

Ib.

I like not fair terms and a villain's mind.

Ib.

Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed livery of the burnished sun.

ii. 1.

If Hercules and Lichas play at dice,
Which is the better man ? The greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand !

Ib.

O heavens, this is my true-begotten father !

ii. 2.

According to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and other branches of learning.

Ib.

It is a wise father that knows his own child.

Ib.

Like one well studied in a sad ostent

To please his grandam.

Ib.

These foolish drops do somewhat drown my manly spirit.

ii. 3.

And the vile squeaking of the wry-necked fife.

ii. 5.

All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoyed.
How like a younker, or a prodigal
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugged and embraced by the strumpet wind !
How like a prodigal doth she return ;
With over-weathered ribs, and ragged sails,
Lean, rent, and beggared by the strumpet wind !

Ib.

For love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies they themselves commit.

ii. 6.

I never heard a passion so confused,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable.

ii. 8.

A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.

Ib.

Thus hath the candle singed the moth.
O, these deliberate fools !

ii. 9.

The ancient saying is no heresy :—
Hanging and wooing goes by destiny.

Ib.

The Goodwins, I think they call the place ;
a very dangerous flat and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

iii. 1.

Let him look to his bond.

Ib.

If it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge.

Ib.

Hath not a Jew eyes ? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions ?

Ib.

The villainy you teach me, I will execute ;
and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

Ib.

No satisfaction, no revenge ; nor no ill-luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders ; no sighs, but o' my breathing ; no tears, but o' my shedding.

Ib.

Thou stick'st a dagger into me.

Ib.

SHAKESPEARE—The Merchant of Venice

283a

He makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music. iii. 2.

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head ? Ib.

So may the outward shows be least themselves :
The world is still deceived with ornament.
In law what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being seasoned with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil ? Ib.

There is no vice so simple but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts. Ib.

Thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas ! Ib.

Rash-embraced despair,
And shuddering fear and green-eyed jealousy. Ib.

Is an unlessoned girl, unschooled, unpractised:
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn ; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn. Ib.

And swearing, till the very roof was dry,
With oaths of love. Ib.

He did entreat me past all saying nay. Ib.

Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper ! Ib.

I will have my bond. iii. 3.

I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now. iii. 4.

This comes too near the praising of myself. Ib.

How every fool can play upon the word !
iii. 5.

What a wit-snapper are you ! Ib.

Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant ? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning. Ib.

Let it serve for table talk. Ib.

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch,
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy. iv. 1.

Some men there are love not a gaping pig,
Some that are mad if they behold a cat. Ib.

Do all men kill the thing they do not love ?
Ib.

A harmless necessary cat. Ib.

What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice ? Ib.

What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong ?
Ib.

The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it. Ib.

I am a tainted wether of the flock. Ib.

I never knew so young a body with so old a head. Ib.

283b

On what compulsion must I ? tell me that. Ib.

The quality of mercy is not strained ;
It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath : it is twice blessed ;
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes :
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest ; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown ;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings ;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway ;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself ;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice. Ib.

We do pray for mercy ;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. Ib.

Wrest once the law to your authority ;
To do a great right, do a little wrong. Ib.

'Twill be recorded for a precedent ;
And many an error, by the same example
Will rush into the state. Ib.

A Daniel come to judgment ! Ib.

Is it so nominated in the bond ? Ib.

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom. Ib.

Speak me fair in death. Ib.

Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip. Ib.

You take my house, when you do take the prop

That doth sustain my house ; you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live. Ib.

He is well paid that is well satisfied. Ib.

I pray you know me when we meet again. Ib.

You taught me first to beg, and now, methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answered. Ib.

Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears ; soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines* of bright gold !
There's not the smallest orb which thou be-hold'st,

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins.
Such harmony is in immortal souls ;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it. v. 1.

I am never merry when I hear sweet music. Ib.

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature

* " Patens " in the Folio. The paten or patine is the small flat dish used in the service of the altar.

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus.
Let no such man be trusted! Ib.

How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. Ib.

For a light wife doth make a heavy husband. Ib.

How many things by season seasoned are
To their right praise, and true perfection! Ib.

This night, methinks, is but the daylight sick. Ib.

These blessed candles of the night. Ib.

So doth the greater glory dim the less. Ib.

Much Ado about Nothing (c. 1598). i. 1.

He is a very valiant trencher-man. Ib.

They never meet but there is a skirmish of wit between them. Ib.

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat. Ib.

I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books. Ib.

What, my dear lady Disdain! Ib.

Shall I never see a bachelor of three-score again? Ib.

In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.* Ib.

Benedick the married man. Ib.

There live we as merry as the day is long. ii. 1.

Speak low, if you speak love. Ib.

Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the office and affairs of love;
Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself,
And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch,
Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. Ib.

Silence is the perfected herald of joy;
I were but little happy, if I could say how much. Ib.

Every why hath a wherefore. (Proverb.) ii. 2.

He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier;
and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. ii. 3.

Note this before my notes.

There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting. Ib.

Sigh no more ladies, sigh no more,

Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea, and one on shore;
To one thing constant never. Ib.

Sits the wind in that corner? Ib.

Man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his old age. Ib.

Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? Ib.

When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Ib.

Of this matter

Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hearsay. iii. 1.

So turns she every man the wrong way out;
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth. Ib.

Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps. Ib.

For others say thou dost deserve, and I Believe it better than reportingly. Ib.

Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it. iii. 2.

He brushes his hat o' mornings; what should that bode? Ib.

Are you good men and true? iii. 3.

To be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune;
but to write and read comes by nature. Ib.

You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man. Ib.

You shall comprehend all vagrom men. Ib.

For the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured. Ib.

The fashion wears out more apparel than the man. Ib.

Comparisons are odorous. iii. 5.

I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestest than I. Ib.

A good old man, sir, he will be talking; as they say, "When the age is in, the wit is out." Ib.

An two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. Ib.

O, what men dare do! what men may do!
What men daily do, not knowing what they do! iv. 1.

I have marked

A thousand blushing apparitions start
Into her face; a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness bear away those blushes. Ib.

For it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lacked and lost,
Why, then we rack the value. Ib.

* Thos. Watson (1560-1591) has a sonnet with the line: "In time the bull is brought to bear the yoke." Ovid (Tristia, 4, 6, 1) has: "Tempore ruricolæ patiens fit taurus aratri."

The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination. Ib.

Into the eye and prospect of his soul. Ib.

O that I were a man for his sake ! Ib.

But manhood is melted into courtesies,
valour into compliment. Ib.

Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves ; and it will go near to be thought so presently. iv. 2.

Yea, marry, that's the effest way.* Ib.

Flat burglary as ever was committed. Ib.

O that he were here to write me down an ass !—but masters, remember that I am an ass ; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. Ib.

A fellow that hath had losses ; and one that hath two gowns and everything handsome about him. Ib.

Patch grief with proverbs. v. 1.

'Tis all men's office to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow.
Ib.

For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently.
Ib.

In a false quarrel there is no true valour. Ib.

Runs not this speech like iron through your blood ? Ib.

He is composed and framed of treachery. Ib.

No, I was not born under a rhyming planet.
v. 2.

Done to death by slanderous tongues. v. 3.

As proper men as ever trod upon neat'sleather. Julius Cæsar (c. 1599). i. 1.

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things !

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey ? Ib.

Beware the Ides of March. i. 2.

Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life ; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself. Ib.

“ Dar'st thou Cassius, now,
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point ? ” Upon the
word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow. Ib.

Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. Ib.

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus ; and we petty men

Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates :
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Ib.

Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cæsar.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great ? Ib.

There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king. Ib.

Let me have men about me that are fat ;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights ;
Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry look ;
He thinks too much : such men are dangerous.
Ib.

Seldom he smiles ; and smiles in such a sort,
As if he mocked himself, and scorned his spirit,
That could be moved to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease,
Whilst they behold a greater than themselves.
Ib.

For mine own part, it was Greek to me.* Ib.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite. Ib.

Therefore 'tis meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes ;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced ? Ib.

Lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face ;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. Act ii. 1.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream. Ib.

For he will never follow anything
That other men begin. Ib.

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flatter'd.
Ib.

You are my true and honourable wife ;
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. Ib.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so fathered and so husbanded ? Ib.

When beggars die, there are no comets seen ;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes. ii. 2.

Cowards die many times before their deaths ;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Ib.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel !
ii. 2.

* Hum, I think this is heathen Greek ; I'm sure 'tis so to me.—Aphra Behn: False Count (1682), iv. 1.

* Effest = quickest.

286a

But I am constant as the northern star.

iii. 1.

O mighty Cæsar ! dost thou lie so low ?

Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure ?

Ib.

The choice and master spirits of this age.

Ib.

Though last, not least in love.

Ib.

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man

That ever livèd in the tide of times.

Ib.

And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atè by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry "Havoc !" and let slip the dogs of war.

Ib.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers ! hear me for my cause, and be silent that ye may hear.

iii. 2.

Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved
Rome more.

Ib.

As he was valiant I honour him : but, as he was ambitious I slew him.

Ib.

Who is here so base that would be a bond-man ? If any, speak : for him have I offended.Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman ? If any, speak : for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country ? If any, speak : for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Ib.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears ;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.

The evil that men do lives after them ;

The good is oft interred with their bones ;

So let it be with Cæsar.

Ib.

For Brutus is an honourable man ;

So are they all, all honourable men.

Ib.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me.

Ib.

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept ;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.

Ib.

But here I am to speak what I do know.

Ib.

You all did love him once, not without cause.

Ib.

O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason !

Ib.

But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world ; now, lies he
there,

And none so poor to do him reverence.

Ib.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but men.
I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it.

Ib.

If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

Ib.

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel.

Ib.

This was the most unkindest cut of all.

Ib.

286b

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquished him : then burst his mighty heart ;And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
... great Cæsar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen !

Ib.

O, now you weep ; and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity ; these are gracious drops.

Ib.

What private griefs they have, alas ! I know not.

Ib.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts :
I am no orator, as Brutus is ;But, as you know me all, a plain, blunt man,
That love my friend.

Ib.

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor power of speech,
To stir men's blood : I only speak right on :
I tell you that which you yourselves do know.

Ib.

But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The very stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Ib.

Now let it work ! Mischief, thou art afoot ;
Take thou what course thou wilt !

Ib.

Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Ib.

When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

iv. 2.

In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

iv. 3.

You yourself
Are much condemned to have an itching palm.

Ib.

The foremost man of all this world.

Ib.

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Ib.

I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Ib.

I said an elder soldier, not a better ;
Did I say better ?

Ib.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats ;
For I am armed so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind.

Ib.

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Ib.

A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Ib.

All his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learned and conned by rote,
To cast into my teeth.

Ib.

Carries anger as the flint bears fire ;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Ib.

SHAKESPEARE—The Merry Wives of Windsor

287a

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune ;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.* Ib.

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless. v. 1.

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard. Ib.

For ever and for ever farewell, Cassius !
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile ;
If not, why, then this parting was well made. Ib.

O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come ! Ib.

O hateful error, melancholy's child !
Why dost thou show, to the apt thoughts of
men,
The things that are not ? v. 3.
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well ! Ib.

Give him all kindness : I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. v. 4.
This was the noblest Roman of them all. v. 5.

He, only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle ; and the elements
So mixed in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, " This was a man ! " Ib.

I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it.
The Merry Wives of Windsor (c. 1600). i. 1.

All his successors, gone before him, have done't ; and all his ancestors that come after him, may. Ib.

It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies—
love. Ib.

Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is good gifts. Ib.

Lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.
Ib.

Word of denial, froth and scum, thou liest !
Ib.

I had rather than forty shillings, I had my book of songs and sonnets here. Ib.

If there be no great love in the beginning,
yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another ; I hope upon familiarity will grow more contempt. Ib.

There's the humour of it.† Ib.

* There is an hour in each man's life appointed
To make his happiness, if then he seize it.
Fletcher and Massinger: The Custom of the Country
(1619), ii. 1.
† This was inserted by Theobald from the quarto.

" Convey " the wise it call. " Steal ! " foh,
a fico for the phrase ! i. 3.

Tester I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,
Base Phrygian Turk ! Ib.

Thou art the Mars of malcontents ; I second thee ; troop on ! Ib.

Here will be an old abusing of God's patience, and the King's English. i. 4.

His worst fault is that he is given to prayer ;
he is something peevish that way ; but nobody but has his fault ; but let that pass. Ib.

We burn daylight. ii. 1.

They do no more adhere and keep pace together than the hundredth psalm to the tune of " Green Sleeves." Ib.

Faith thou hast some crotchets in thy head
now. Ib.

If money go before, all ways do lie open. ii. 2.

Why, then the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open. Ib.

Love like a shadow flies when substance love
pursues,
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues. Ib.

Hiding mine honour in my necessity. Ib.

Marry, this is the short and the long of it. Ib.

Unless experience be a jewel ; that I have purchased at an infinite rate. Ib.

Like a fair house built on another man's ground. Ib.

By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. ii. 3.

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is.
iii. 2.

O, what a world of vile, ill-favoured faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year. iii. 4.

If it be my luck, so ; if not, happy man be his dole ! Ib.

If I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains taken out and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. iii. 5.

I have a kind of alacrity in sinking. Ib.

The rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril. Ib.

A man of my kidney. Ib.

Your husband is in his old lunes again. iv. 2.

Life is a shuttle. v. 1.

They say there is divinity in odd numbers,
either in nativity, chance, or death. Ib.

Better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break. v. 3.

Let the sky rain potatoes ! let it thunder on the tune of " Green Sleeves " ! v. 5.

288a

What cannot be eschewed, must be embraced.

Ib.Ford: And one that is as slanderous as Satan?Page: And as poor as Job?Ford: And as wicked as his wife? — *Ib.*O powerful love! that in some respects makes a beast a man; in some other, a man a beast. Ib.

The courtesy of nations allows you my better; in that you are the first-born.

As You Like It (c. 1600). *i. 1.*Therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. *Ib.*The dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. *i. 2.*Unmuzzle your wisdom. *Ib.*Well said! that was laid on with a trowel. *Ib.*Only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty. *Ib.*Now Hercules be thy speed, young man! *Ib.*Thus must I from the smoke into the smother. Ib.Celia: Not a word? Ros.: Not one to throw at a dog. *i. 3.*O, how full of briars is this working-day world! *Ib.*Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold. *Ib.*We'll have a swashing and a martial outside. *Ib.*Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head:
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.*
*ii. 1.*The big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose,
In piteous chase. *Ib.*Thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much. *Ib.*Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens! *Ib.*I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter. *Ib.*He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age! *ii. 3. Experto crede; aliquid amplius in silvis invenies quam in libris. Ligna et lapides docebunt te quod a magistris audire non possis. (Believe one who has had experience; you will find something more in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you cannot learn from masters.)—St. Bernard (1091–1153): Epistle (106) to Master Henry Murdach (afterwards Abbot of Fountains and Archbishop of York).

288b

For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood. *Ib.*My age is as a lusty winter, Frosty, but kindly. *Ib.*O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that, do choke their service up. *Ib.*But travellers must be content. *ii. 4.*We that are true lovers, run into strange capers. *Ib.*Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of. *Ib.*Under the greenwood tree. *ii. 5.*I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. *Ib.*I'll rail against all the first-born in Egypt. *Ib.*And railed on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms. ii. 7."Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune."And then he drew a dial from his poke,
And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock."
Thus may we see," quoth he, "how the world
wags." *Ib.*And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot and rot;
And thereby hangs a tale. *Ib.*My lungs began to crow like chanticleer. *Ib.*Motley's the only wear. *Ib.*And says, if ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,—Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage—he hath strange places crammedWith observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms. *Ib.*I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please. *Ib.*The "why" is plain as way to parish church. *Ib.*Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness. *Ib.*If ever you have looked on better days,
If ever been where bells have knolled to church. *Ib.*All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.

Then the whining schoolboy with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad Mile to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,

Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,

Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation

Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,

In fair round belly, with good capon lined,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,

Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts

Into the lean and slippered pantaloen,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;

His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide

For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,

That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,—

Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything. Ib.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude:

Thy tooth is not so keen,

Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude. Ib.

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly. Ib.

The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she.
iii. 2.

Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd? Ib.

He that wants money, means, and content is without three good friends. Ib.

Thou art in a parlous state. Ib.

Helen's cheek, but not her heart. Ib.

O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping! Ib.

Do you not know I am a woman? what I think, I must speak.* Ib.

I do desire we may be better strangers. Ib.

You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Ib.

The lazy foot of time. Ib.

I am he, that unfortunate he. Ib.

Touch. Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry. Ib.

Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray
the gods make me honest. Ib.

I am not a slut, though I thank the gods
I am foul. iii. 3.

Down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love. iii. 5.

Who ever loved that loved not at first sight? *
Ib.

But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes him. Ib.

Wraps me in a most humorous sadness. iv. 1.

I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad. Ib.

He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapped him on the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-whole. Ib.

Men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love. Ib.

Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Ib.

Men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. Ib.

You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue.† Ib.

Chewing the food‡ of sweet and bitter fancy.
iv. 3.

Kindness, nobler ever than revenge. Ib.

I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways. v. 1.

No sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason. v. 2.

Oh how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! Ib.

An ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own. v. 4.

The Retort courteous . . . the Quip modest . . . the Reproof valiant . . . the Countercheck quarrelsome . . . the Lie circumstantial . . . the Lie direct. Ib.

Your "if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if." Ib.

If it be true that, "good wine needs no bush," 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue. Epilogue.

* Quoted as a "dead shepherd's saw." The "dead shepherd" was Marlowe, who died in 1593, and the line is from his "Hero and Leander," see page 205.

† A proverbial saying. See Chaucer's Mar-chauntes Tale, l. 1027: "For lakke of answer noon of

O! farewell, honest soldier. Ib.

Ber. What is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him. Ib.

Is not this something more than fantasy? Ib.

This bodes some strange eruption to our state. Ib.

Whose sore task

Of unimprovèd metal hot and full. Ib.

Some enterprise

That hath a stomach in 't. Ib.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome. Ib.

We do it wrong, being so majestic, Ib.

To offer it the show of violence. Ib.

And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. Ib.

So hallowed and so gracious is the time. Ib.

But look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern * hill. Ib.

Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves. i. 2.

With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole. Ib.

The head is not more native to the heart. Ib.

He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I sealed my hard consent. Ib.

A little more than kin, and less than kind. Ib.

Thou know'st 'tis common, all that live must die,

Passing through nature to eternity. Ib.

Ay, madam, it is common. Ib.

Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes,† shows of grief,

That can denote me truly; these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play,
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe. Ib.

But to perséver

In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief;
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient. Ib.

O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fixed
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God!
O God!

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on 't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed! Things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this! Ib.

Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beitem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Ib.

Why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on. Ib.

Frailty, thy name is woman! Ib.

A little month. Ib.

Like Niobe, all tears. Ib.

A beast, that wants discourse of reason. Ib.

But no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules. Ib.

It is not, nor it cannot come to good. Ib.

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart. Ib.

The funeral baked meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Ere I had ever seen that day, Horatio! Ib.

In my mind's eye, Horatio. Ib.

He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again. Ib.

In the dead vast * and middle of the night. Ib.

Armed at all points. Ib.

These hands are not more like. Ib.

But answer made it none. Ib.

A countenance more
In sorrow than in anger. Ib.

While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred. Ib.

A sable silvered. Ib.

I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. Ib.

If you have hitherto concealed this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.
I will requite your loves. Ib.

Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. Ib.

A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting.
The perfume and suppliance of a minute. i. 3.

His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state. Ib.

And keep you in the rear of your affection. Ib.

The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon;
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring,*
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth,
Contagious blastments are most imminent. Ib.

Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear. Ib.

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whilst, like a puffed and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede. Ib.

A double blessing is a double grace. Ib.

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,

Nor any unproportioned thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops† of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatched, unfledged comrade. Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear't that th' opposèd may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy; rich not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,

Are most select and generous chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—To thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season this in thee! Ib.

'Tis in my memory locked,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it. Ib.

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance. Ib.

Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends* the tongue vows. Ib.

Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence. Ib.

It is a nipping and an eager air. i. 4.

But to my mind—though I am native here,
And to the manner born—it is a custom
More honoured in the breach than the observance. Ib.

Angels and ministers of grace defend us! Ib.

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,
That I will speak to thee. Ib.

Let me not burst in ignorance! Ib.

In complete steel,
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous. Ib.

With thoughts beyond the reaches of our

It waves† you to a more removèd ground. Ib.

I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself? Ib.

Go on; I'll follow thee. Ib.

My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve. Ib.
Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. Ib.

Whither wilt thou lead me? speak; I'll go no further. i. 5.

But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison house,
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young
blood;
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres;
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine;
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O list! Ib.

Murder most foul, as in the best it is,
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural. Ib.

With wings as swift

O my prophetic soul! mine uncle! Ib.

O, Hamlet, what a falling off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity,

* "Gives" in the Folio; "lends" in the quartos.
† "Wafts" in the Folio.

That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage. Ib.

But soft! methinks, I scent the morning's air. Ib.

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
O horrible! O horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not. Ib.

Leave her to Heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Ib.

While memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there. Ib.

Within the book and volume of my brain. Ib.
O villain, villain, smiling, damn'd villain! Ib.

My tables—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;*
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark. Ib.

There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this. Ib.

And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;
You, as your business and desire shall point
you,

For every man hath business and desire,
Such as it is—and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray. Ib.

These are but wild and whirling words, my lord. Ib.

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you. Ib.

Art thou there, truepenny?
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage. Ib.

O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!
Ib.

There are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your† philosophy. Ib.

Rest, rest, perturb'd spirit. Ib.

The time is out of joint;—O curs'd spite,
That ever I was born to set it right! Ib.

The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreckon'd blood. ii. 1.

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth. Ib.

By indirections find directions out. Ib.

He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk. Ib.

This is the very ecstasy of love. Ib.

Such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance. ii. 2.

Thou still hast been the father of good news. Ib.

Brevity is the soul of wit. Ib.

More matter with less art. Ib.

That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true; a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art. Ib.

And now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect, defective, comes by cause. Ib.

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; "beautified" is a vile phrase. Ib.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love. Ib.

Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,
When I have positively said "'Tis so,"
And it proved otherwise? Ib.

Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters. Ib.

Hamlet. You are a fishmonger.

Polonius. Not I, my lord.

Hamlet. Then I would you were so honest a man. Ib.

Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.* Ib.

Still harping on my daughter. Ib.

Words, words, words! Ib.

The satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potentially believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if,
like a crab, you could go backward. Ib.

Though this be madness, yet there is method in it. Ib.

These tedious old fools. Ib.

As the indifferent children of the earth. Ib.

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button. Ib.

Hamlet. What news?

Rosencrantz. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Hamlet. Then is doomsday near? Ib.

293a

There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so.* Ib.

O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space,
were it not that I have bad dreams. Ib.

The very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream. Ib.

I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but shadow's shadow. Ib.

Beggar that I am, I am poor even in thanks. Ib.

It goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'er-hanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god!
the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! and yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? Man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling,
you seem to say so. Ib.

There was no such stuff in my thoughts. Ib.

And the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for it. Ib.

'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarré them to controversy. Ib.

There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. Ib.

I am but mad north-north-west; when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw. [i.e. a "heron-shaw," or "heron".] Ib.

Come, give us a taste of your quality. Ib.

The play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general. Ib.

Let them be well used; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time:
after your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you lived. Ib.

Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity; the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Ib.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Ib.

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? Ib.

He would drown the stage with tears,
And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;

* Adeo nihil est miserum nisi cum putes (so nothing is wretched unless when you think it so).—Boethius.

293b

Make mad the guilty, and appal the free;
Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,
The very faculties of eyes and ears. Ib.

A dull, and muddy-mettled rascal. Ib.

But I am pigeon-livered, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter.* Ib.

Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab. Ib.

For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous organ. Ib.

The devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape. Ib.

I'll have grounds
More relative than this; the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. Ib.

'Tis too much proved,—that with devotion's visage
And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself. iii. 1.

To be, or not to be; that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die,—to sleep:—

No more; and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To die—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of
time,

The oppressor's wrong, the proud† man's contumely,

The pangs of despised‡ love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? Who would fardels bear,§

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscovered country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience doth make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution

§ "Who would these fardels bear," in the Folio.

Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,*
And lose the name of action. Ib.

Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remembered. Ib.

For, to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind. Ib.

Get thee to a nunnery. Ib.

I am myself indifferent honest. Ib.

What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all. Ib.

Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in 's own house. Ib.

Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow,
thou shalt not escape calumny. Ib.

If thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool;
for wise men know well enough what monsters
you make of them. Ib.

I have heard of your paintings, too, well enough. God hath given you one face, and you make yourself another. Ib.

O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye,
tongue, sword:

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers! quite, quite,
down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That sucked the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;

That unmatched form and figure of blown youth,

Blasted with ecstasy. O, woe is me!
To see what I have seen, see what I see! Ib.

Madness in great ones must not unwatched go. Ib.

Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue;
but if you mouth it, as many of your players do,
I had as lief the town-crier had spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently, for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) the whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. iii. 2.

Tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise. Ib.

It out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it. Ib.

Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature. Ib.

The purpose of playing; whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as
'twere, the mirror up to nature. Ib.

Though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one, must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. Ib.

Not to speak it profanely. Ib.

Having neither the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man. Ib.

I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably. Ib.

I hope we have reformed that indifferently. Ib.

O, reform it altogether. Ib.

That's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Ib.

Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation coped withal. Ib.

Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits?
Ib.

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp;
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Ib.

A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Has ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd'd are those,

Whose blood and judgment are so well
co-mingled,

That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him

In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this. Ib.

And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Ib.

Your only jig-maker. Ib.

Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. Ib.

Died two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year;
but, by'r lady, he must build churches then. Ib.

For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot. Ib.

Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief. Ib.

* "Awry" in the quarto; "away" in the Folio.

SHAKESPEARE—Hamlet

295a

Hamlet : Is this a prologue or the posy of a ring ?

Oph. : 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. : As woman's love. Ib.

O confound the rest !

Such love must needs be treason in my breast :

In second husband let me be accurst !

None wed the second but who killed the first. Ib.

I do believe you think what now you speak ;

But what we do determine oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory. Ib.

If she should break it now ! Ib.

Sleep rock thy brain ;

And never come mischance between us twain ! Ib.

The lady doth protest too much, methinks. Ib.

No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest ;
no offence i' the world. Ib.

We that have free souls, it touches us not :
let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung. Ib.

Why let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play ;

For some must watch, while some must sleep :

So runs the world away. Ib.

Put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair. Ib.

O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother ! Ib.

The proverb is something musty. Ib.

'Tis as easy as lying. Ib.

It will discourse most eloquent* music. Ib.

You would play upon me ; you would seem to know my stops ; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery ; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Ib.

Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. Ib.

It is backed like a weasel. Ib.

Very like a whale. Ib.

They fool me to the top of my bent. Ib.

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world ; now could I drink
hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Ib.

Let me be cruel, not unnatural :
I will speak daggers to her, but use none. Ib.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven ;

It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,

A brother's murder ! iii. 3.

295b

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent. Ib.

May one be pardoned, and retain th' offence ? Ib.

Try what repentance can ; what can it not ?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent ? Ib.

Help, angels, make assay !

Bow, stubborn knees ! and, heart, with strings of steel,

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe. Ib.

Now might I do it, pat. Ib.

Some act

That has no relish of salvation in it. Ib.

Words without thoughts never to heaven go. Ib.

Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with. iii. 4.

How now ! a rat ?

Dead, for a ducat, dead ! Ib.

And let me wring your heart : for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff. Ib.

Such an act,

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty. Ib.

As false as dicers' oaths. Ib.

Ah me, what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index ? Ib.

Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on his brow ;
Hyperion's curls ; the front of Jove himself ;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command ;
A station [attitude] like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill ;
A combination and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man. Ib.

Like a mildewed ear,

Blasting his wholesome brother. Ib.

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed
And batten on this moor ? Ib.

At your age,

The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment. Ib.

O shame, where is thy blush ? Ib.

A cutpurse of the empire and the rule ;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket. Ib.

A king of shreds and patches. Ib.

Do you not come your tardy son to chide ? Ib.

Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works. Ib.

For use almost can change the stamp of nature. Ib.

Tears, perchance, for blood. Ib.

* In Knight's edition, "excellent music."

296a

This is the very coinage of your brain :

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ib.

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,

And makes as healthful music. It is not madness

That I have uttered : bring me to the test.

Ib.

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul.

Ib.

Repent what's past ; avoid what is to come.

Ib.

For in the fatness of these porsy times,

Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg.

Ib.

Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

Ib.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat.

Ib.

And when you are desirous to be blessed,

I'll blessing beg of you.

Ib.

I must be cruel, only to be kind :

Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.

Ib.

For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petard ; and it shall go hard,

But I will delve one yard below their mines,

And blow them to the moon.

He keeps them, like an ape does nuts, in the corner of his jaw ; first mouthed, to be last swallowed.

Ib.

Diseases, desperate grown,

By desperate appliance are relieved,

Or not at all.

iv. 3.

We go to gain a little patch of ground,

That hath in it no profit but the name.

iv. 4.

What is a man

If his chief good, and market of his time,

Be but to sleep and feed ? A beast, no more.

Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,

Looking before, and after, gave us not,

That capability and godlike reason,

To fust in us unused.

Ib.

Rightly to be great,

Is not to stir without great argument,

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,

When honour's at the stake.

Ib.

We know what we are, but know not what we may be.

iv. 5.

We must be patient : but I cannot choose but weep to think they should lay him i'

the cold ground.

Ib.

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions.

Ib.

296b

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason can but peep to what it would.

Ib.

To hell, allegiance ! vows, to the blackest devil !

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit !

Ib.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance ;

pray, love, remember : and there is pansies,

that's for thoughts.

Ib.

You must wear your rue with a difference.

Ib.

They say he made a good end.

Ib.

And will he not come again ?

Ib.

No, no, he is dead,

Go to thy death-bed,

He never will come again.

Ib.

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan ;

Grammercy on his soul !

Ib.

His means of death, his obscure funeral,

No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite, nor formal ostentation.

Ib.

And, where the offence is, let the great axe fall.

Ib.

It warms the very sickness in my heart,

That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,

" Thus diddest thou."

iv. 7.

A very riband in the cap of youth.

Ib.

He grew into his seat ;

And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorpored and demi-natured

With the brave beast.

Ib.

One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow.

Ib.

Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears : but yet

It is our trick ; nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will.

Ib.

Crowner's-quest law.

v. 1.

There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners,

ditchers, and grave-makers : they hold up

Adam's profession.

Ib.

Cudgel thy brains no more about it ; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating.

Ib.

Hath this fellow no feeling of his business ?

Ib.

The hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

Ib.

The pate of a politician, . . . one that could circumvent God.

Ib.

Where be his quiddits now, his quillets,

his cases, his tenures, and his tricks ?

Ib.

One that was a woman, sir ; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ib.

How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. Ib.

The age is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. Ib.

Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy. Ib.

Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own jeering? quite chapfallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Ib.

To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole? Ib.

'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.* Ib.

Imperial Cæsar, dead, and turned to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away. Ib.

Lay her i' the earth;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May violets spring! Ib.

I tell thee, churlish priest,
A minst'ring angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling. Ib.

Sweets to the sweet: farewell! Ib.

Sir, though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous. Ib.

Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou. Ib.

And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couplets are disclosed,
His silence will sit drooping. Ib.

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his day. Ib.

This grave shall have a living monument. Ib.

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will. v. 2.

It did me yeoman's service. Ib.

What imports the nomination of this gentleman? Ib.

The phrase will be more german to the matter. Ib.

Not a whit! We defy augury: there's a providence in the fall of a sparrow. Ib.

I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother. Ib.

I do receive your offered love, like love,
And will not wrong it. Ib.

A hit, a very palpable hit. Ib.

Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe,
Osric:

I am justly killed with my own treachery. Ib.

This fell sergeant, Death,
Is strict in his arrest. Ib.

Report me and my cause aright. Ib.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane. Ib.

Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown shall live behind me!

If thou diest ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. Ib.

The rest is silence. Ib.

If music be the food of love, play on.
Twelfth Night (c. 1601). i. 1.

That strain again—it had a dying fall;
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odour. Ib.

Journeys end in lovers meeting. Ib.

He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural. Ib.

Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale? Ib.

Ginger shall be hot i' the mouth, too. Ib.

These most brisk and giddy-paced times. ii. 4.

Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart.
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,†
Than women's are. Ib.

Duke. And what's her history?
Viola. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,

* An imaginary author.

† "Won" in most modern editions, but "worn" in the original.

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pined in thought;

And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,*
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more; but,
indeed,

Our shows are more than will; for still we prove

Much in our vows, but little in our love. Ib.

I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too. Ib.

some have greatness thrust upon them. Ib.

The trick of singularity. Ib.

This fellow's wise enough to play the fool;
And to do that well craves a kind of wit. iii. 1.

O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip! Ib.

Love sought is good, but given unsought is better. Ib.

Let there be gall enough in thy ink; though thou write with a goose pen, no matter. iii. 2.

Why, this is very midsummer madness. iii. 4.

If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction. Ib.

Let thy tongue tang with arguments of state. Ib.

Still you keep o' the windy side of the law. Ib.

An I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Ib.

I hate ingratitude more in a man
Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness. Ib.

In nature there's no blemish but the mind.
None can be called deformed but the unkind. iii. 5.

As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That that is, is." † iv. 2.

* Cf. Chaucer: Parlement of Foules, l. 242:

Dame Pience sitting ther I fond,
With face pale, upon an hille of sond.

† According to Francis Douce (1757-1834) this "hermit of Prague" (obviously not Jerome of Prague, who lived in the 15th century and was not a hermit) was "another of that name [Jerome], born likewise at Prague and called the hermit of Camaldoli in Prague"— meaning apparently a hermit of the Camaldolense (Tuscan) order, which was not founded till about A.D.

Out, hyperbolical fiend! Ib.

There is no darkness but ignorance. Ib.

And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges. v. 1.

For the rain it raineth every day. Ib.

A great while ago the world begun. Ib.

I have had my labour for my travail.

Troilus and Cressida (c. 1602). i. 1.

Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man? i. 2.

Women are angels, wooing. Ib.

Men prize the thing ungained more than it is. Ib.

The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. i. 3.

Let us like merchants show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed
By showing the worst first. Ib.

Two curs shall tame each other; pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on. Ib.

Modest doubt is called
The beacon of the wise. ii. 2.

What is aught, but as 'tis valued? Ib.

'Tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god. Ib.

The amity that wisdom knits not, folly
May easily untie. ii. 3.

He that is proud eats up himself. Ib.

Words pay no debts. iii. 2.

To be wise and love
Exceeds man's might. Ib.

As false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or step-dame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of false-
hood,
As false as Cressid. Ib.

Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. iii. 3.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin. Ib.

For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast. Ib.

And like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air. Ib.

A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Ib.

980. The legendary Gorboduc, King of Britain, is represented by Geoffrey of Monmouth to have been contemporary with Romulus and Remus, whose traditional date is 750 years before Christ. The hermit and the niece of Gorboduc were probably humorous inventions of Shakespeare, and entirely imaginary.

SHAKESPEARE—All's Well that Ends Well—Measure for Measure

299a

What's past, and what's to come, is strewed with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion. iv. 5.

The end crowns all. Ib.

Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man. v. 3.

A bright particular star.
All's Well that Ends Well (c. 1602). i. 1.

Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none. Ib.

The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. Ib.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven. Ib.

"Let me not live," quoth he,
"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits." i. 2.

He must needs go that the devil drives. i. 3.

My friends were poor but honest.* Ib.

Whose words all ears took captive. v. 3.

Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear. Ib.

Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of time. Ib.

Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,
Not light them for themselves.

Measure for Measure (c. 1604). i. 1.

I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes,
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause and aves vehement;
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion,
That does affect it. Ib.

He was ever precise in promise-keeping. i. 2.

299b

And liberty plucks justice by the nose. i. 4.
I hold you as a thing ensky'd and sainted. i. 5.

Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt. Ib.

And let him learn to know when maidens sue,
Men give like gods. Ib.

We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,—
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch, and not their terror. ii. 1.

'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus,
Another thing to fall. I do not deny,
The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May, in a sworn twelve, have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. Ib.

The jewel that we find, we stoop and take it,
Because we see it; but what we do not see
We tread upon, and never think of it. Ib.

This will last out a night in Russia,
When nights are longest there. Ib.

At war 'twixt will and will not. ii. 2.

Condemn the fault and not the actor of it?
Ib.

No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the King's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does. Ib.

O! it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant. ii. 2.

The tempter or the tempted, who sins most?
Ib.

But man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,—
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep. Ib.

That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy. Ib.

Our compelled sins
Stand more for number than for account. ii. 4.

O pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean. Ib.

The miserable have
No other medicine but only hope. iii. 1.

Dar'st thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension;
And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies. Ib.

If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms. Ib.

* See Middleton, The Witch, iii. 2:

"Though I be poor I'm honest."

Ay, but to die, and go we know not where ;
 To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot ;
 This sensible warm motion to become
 A kneaded clod ; and the delighted spirit
 To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
 In thrilling region* of thick-ribbed ice ;
 To be imprisoned in the viewless winds,
 And blown with restless violence round about
 The pendent world ! Ib.

The weariest and most loathed worldly life
 That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment
 Can lay on nature, is a paradise
 To what we fear of death. Ib.

Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. iii. 1.

A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow. iii. 2.

Back-wounding calumny
 The whitest virtue strikes. Ib.

Shame to him, whose cruel striking
 Kills for faults of his own liking ! Ib.

When rich villains have need of poor ones,
 Poor ones may make what price they will. iii. 3.

Take, oh, take those lips away,
 That so sweetly were forsworn.† iv. 1.

Seals of love, but sealed in vain,
 Sealed in vain. Ib.

Every true man's apparel fits your thief. iv. 2.

A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
 And rasure of oblivion. v. 1.

My business in this state
 Made me a looker-on here in Vienna. Ib.

They say best men are moulded out of faults ;
 And, for the most, become much more the better
 For being a little bad. Ib.

For truth is truth
 To th' end of the reckoning. Ib.

What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine. Ib.

Horribly stuffed with epithets of war.
Othello (c. 1604). i. 1.

A fellow almost damned in a fair wife ;
 That never set a squadron in the field,
 Nor the division of a battle knows,
 More than a spinster. Ib.

The bookish theoretic. Ib.

Mere prattle without practice
 Is all his scholarship. Ib.

'Tis the curse of service ;
 Preferment goes by letter and affection,
 Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Ib.

* In some editions "regions."

† This stanza, with an additional one, is found in Beaumont and Fletcher's Rollo, v. 2. The song is possibly a ballad current in Shakespeare's time, but Malone and other editors prefer to believe that it is by Shakespeare.

We cannot all be masters. Ib.

Whip me such honest knaves. Ib.

But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
 For daws to peck at : I am not what I am. Ib.

Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Ib.

Who would be a father ? Ib.

Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
 Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
 To do no contrived murder. I lack iniquity
 Sometime to do me service. i. 2.

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation. Ib.

For my particular grief
 Is of so floodgate and o'erbearing nature,
 That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows. i. 3.

Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
 My very noble and approved good masters,—
 That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
 ter,

It is most true ; true, I have married her :
 The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more ! Rude am I in my speech,

And little blessed with the soft phrase of peace. Ib.

The tented field. Ib.

And little of this great world can I speak,
 More than pertains to feats of broil and battle ;
 And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
 In speaking for myself. Ib.

I will a round unvarnished tale deliver. Ib.

A maiden never bold ;
 Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
 Blushed at herself. Ib.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
 To the very moment that he bade me tell it :
 Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances ;
 Of moving accidents by flood and field ;
 Of hairbreadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach ;

Of being taken by the insolent foe,
 And sold to slavery. Ib.

Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle,
 Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads
 touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak,—such was my process ;

And of the cannibals that each other eat,
 The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
 Do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to hear

Would Desdemona seriously incline. i. 3.

She gave me for my pains a world of sighs :
 She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange ;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful ;
 She wished she had not heard it ; yet she wished

That heaven had made her such a man : she thanked me ;

301a

And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I
spake :

She loved me for the dangers I had passed ;
And I loved her that she did pity them.
This is the only witchcraft I have used. Ib.

Take up this mangled matter at the best :
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands. Ib.

I do perceive here a divided duty. Ib.

The robbed that smiles, steals something from the thief. Ib.

The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war,
My thrice-driven bed of down. Ib.

I saw Othello's visage in his mind. Ib.

A moth of peace. Ib.

She has deceived her father, and may thee. Ib.

I will incontinently drown myself. Ib.

Virtue ! a fig ! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Ib.

Put money in thy purse. Ib.

The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. Ib.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse. Ib.

Framed to make women false. Ib.

I have 't ;—it is engendered ;—hell and night Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. Ib.

A maid

That paragons description and wild fame ;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens.
ii. 1.

Do not put me to 't,
For I am nothing if not critical. Ib.

I am not merry, but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise. Ib.

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her
mind,

See suitors following, and not look behind. Ib.

To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer. Ib.

O most lame and impotent conclusion ! Ib.

Is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor ? Ib.

He speaks home, madam ; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar. Ib.

A subtle slippery knave. Ib.

Making him egregiously an ass. Ib.

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop
Not to outsport discretion. ii. 3.

Potations pottle deep. Ib.

301b

And let me the canakin clink !

A soldier's a man ;

A life's but a span ;

Why, then, let a soldier drink. Ib.

Most potent in potting. Ib.

'Tis pride that pulls the country down.* Ib.

'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep. Ib.

Silence that dreadful bell ! Ib.

The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure. Ib.

But men are men ; the best sometimes forget.
Ib.

Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter.
Ib.

Cassio, I love thee ;

But never more be officer of mine. Ib.

Ay, past all surgery. Ib.

Reputation, reputation, reputation ! O, I have lost my reputation ! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. Ib.

O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil ! Ib.

O that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains ! Ib.

Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. Ib.

Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil. Ib.

Come, come ; good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used. Ib.

How poor are they that have not patience !
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees ?
Ib.

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short. Ib.

Excellent wretch ! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee ! And when I love thee
not,

Chaos is come again. iii. 3.

Good name in man or woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls :

Who steals my purse, steals trash ; 'tis something, nothing ;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands ;

But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed. Ib.

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy ;
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on. Ib.

* From the old ballad, "Take thy old cloak about thee." In Percy's Reliques the line is given : "Itts pride that puttis this countrey downe."

302a

But, O, what damnèd minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly loves.* Ib.

Poor and content is rich, and rich enough. Ib.

To be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolved. Ib.

If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heartstrings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind
To prey at fortune. Ib.

I am declined
Into the vale of years. Ib.

That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. Ib.

Trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. Ib.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday. Ib.

He that is robbed, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know't, and he's not robbed at all. Ib.

O, now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumèd troops,† and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill
trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!

And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone! Ib.

Be sure of it: give me the ocular proof. Ib.

No hinge, nor loop
To hang a doubt on. Ib.

On horror's head horrors accumulate:
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed. Ib.

But this denoted a foregone conclusion. Ib.

O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge. Ib.

O, hardness to dissemble! iii. 4.

The hearts of old gave hands:
But our new heraldry is—hands not hearts. Ib.

I would have him nine years a killing. iv. 1.

O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!
Ib.

But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago! Ib.

* In the quarto edition "strongly loves" is the reading, instead of "fondly loves."

† Troops. The quarto has "troop."

302b

I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words. iv. 2.

Had it pleased heaven
To try me with affliction; had he rained
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head;
Steeped me in poverty to the very lips;
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me
A fixed figure, for the time of scorn*
To point his slow unmoving finger at! † Ib.

Patience, thou young and rose-lipped cherubin.
Ib.

O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst
ne'er been born! Ib.

I will be hanged if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devised this slander. Ib.

Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.
Ib.

O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west! Ib.

Sing willow, willow, willow. iv. 3.

'Tis neither here nor there. Ib.

Nay, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my game. v. 1.

He hath a daily beauty in his life. Ib.

This is the night
That either makes me, or fordoes me quite.
Ib.

It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause. Ib.

That whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster. v. 2.

Put out the light, and then—put out the light?
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me;—but once put out thy light,

Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. Ib.

I will kill thee,
And love thee after. Ib.

Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all. Ib.

* "Time of scorn"—perhaps a misprint for "hand of scorn."

† In the Folio:

"The fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow and moving finger at."

303^a

My wife ! my wife ! what wife ?—I have no wife.

O, insupportable ! O heavy hour !
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon. Ib.

It is the very error of the moon. Ib.

Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh. Ib.

A guiltless death I die. Ib.

O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil ! Ib.

She was false as water. Ib.

If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it. Ib.

But why should honour outlive honesty ? Ib.

Who can control his fate ? Ib.

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Ib.

I have done the state some service, and they know 't. Ib.

Speak of me as I am ; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice : then must you speak

Of one that loved not wisely, but too well ;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreme : of one, whose hand
Like the base Indian,* threw a pearl away, Richer than all his tribe : of one, whose subdued eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Ib.

All that is spoke is marred. Ib.

I kissed thee, ere I killed thee. Ib.

1st Witch :

When shall we three meet again,
In thunder, lightning, or in rain ?

Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tossed. i. 3.

What are these,
So withered, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,
And yet are on 't ? Ib.

If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say, which grain will grow, and which will not. Ib.

To be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief. Ib.

The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them. Ib.

303^b

The insane root,

That takes the reason prisoner. Ib.

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths ;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence. Ib.

Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. Ib.

Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings. Ib.

Nothing is
But what is not. Ib.

Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest
day. Ib.

Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it ; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he owed
As 'twere a careless trifle. i. 4.

There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face ;
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust. Ib.

Yet do I fear thy nature ;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way ; thou wouldst be great ;
Art not without ambition ; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly
That wouldst thou holily ; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win. i. 5.

That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose. Ib.

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. Ib.

Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under it. Ib.

Coigne of vantage. i. 6.

If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere
well
It were done quickly. i. 7.

That but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here. Ib.

So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking off. Ib.

I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
And falls on the other. Ib.

I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people. Ib.

Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would,"
Like the poor cat i' the adage.* Ib.

* "Judean" for "Indian" in the First Folio.

I dare do all that may become a man ;
Who dares do more is none. Ib.

Nor time nor place
Did then adhere. Ib.

We fail !
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. Ib.

Memory, the warder of the brain. Ib.

False face must hide what the false heart doth know. Ib.

There's husbandry in heaven ;
Their candles are all out. ii. 1.

Shut up
In measureless content. Ib.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand ? Come, let me clutch thee :—

I have thee not and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight ? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressèd brain ?
ii. 1.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going.
Ib.

Hear it not, Duncan ; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell ! Ib.

The fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night. ii. 2.

The attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us. Ib.

Consider it not so deeply. Ib.

I had most need of blessing, and " Amen " —
Stuck in my throat. Ib.

Methought I heard a voice cry, " Sleep no
more !

Macbeth does murder sleep,"—the innocent
sleep ;

Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great Nature's second course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast.* Ib.

Infirm of purpose ! Ib.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand ? No ; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green—one red. Ib.

The labour we delight in physics pain. ii. 3.
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
Ib.

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of. Ib.

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate, and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment ? No man.
Ib.

304b

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I

There's daggers in men's smiles. Ib.

Upon my head they put a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrenched with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. iii. 1.

Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men. Ib.

I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed, that I am reckless what I do to spite the world. Ib.

Naught's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content :
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.
iii. 2.

Things without all remedy
Should be without regard ; what's done is done. Ib.

We have scotched the snake, not killed it. Ib.

After life's fitful fever he sleeps well.
Treason has done his worst : nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further. Ib.

A deed of dreadful note. Ib.

But now I am cabined, cribbed, confined,
bound in. iii. 4.

Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both ! Ib.

Thou canst not say I did it : never shake
Thy gory locks at me. Ib.

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold ;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with. Ib.

What man dare, I dare :
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The armed rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger ;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble. Ib.

Hence, horrible shadow !
Unreal mockery, hence ! Ib.

You have displaced the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admired disorder. Ib.

Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder ? Ib.

Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once. Ib.

Macb. What is the night ?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning.
Ib.

And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy. iii. 5.

Double, double, toil and trouble. iv. 1.

* In Hamner's edition the " voice " is continued to the end of Macbeth's speech. Johnson made it stop at "murder sleep" (as above).

305a

Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey,
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
You that mingle may.*

By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes;
Open locks, whoever knocks.

How now, you secret, black, and midnight
hags!

A deed without a name.

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

The weird sisters.

When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.

I would not be the villain that thou think'st,
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,

And the rich East to boot.

Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings.

Stands Scotland where it did?

What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;

Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'erfraught heart, and bids it break.

What, all my pretty chickens and their dam,
At one fell swoop?

But I must also feel it as a man;
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.

O, I could play the woman with mine eyes.

Out, damned spot! out, I say!

Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeared?

Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

All the perfumes of Arabia will not
Sweeten this little hand.

What's done cannot be undone.

Foul whisperings are abroad.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!

Where gott'st thou that goose look?

This push
Will cheer me ever, or dis-seat me now.
I have lived long enough; my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

* This song is found in Middleton's The Witch (1604).
Act v. 2.

305b

And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep; mouth-honour,
breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;
And, with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous stuff,
Which weighs upon the heart?

Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none of it.

I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.

Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, "They come." Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn.

I have supped full with horrors;
Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

To doubt the equivocation of the fiend,
That lies like truth.

There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here,
I 'gin to be a weary of the sun.

Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.

I bear a charmed life.

And be these juggling fiends no more believed,
That palter with us with a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.

Lay on, Macduff;
And damned be he that first cries, "Hold, enough!"

So young, and so untender?
King Lear (c. 1605). i. 1.

Come not between the dragon and his wrath.

Hence, and avoid my sight!

Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides.

My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.

A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor
as the king.

That which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.
Ib.

An thou canst not smile as the wind sits,
thou'lt catch cold shortly.
Ib.

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest.
i. 4.

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster!
Ib.

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!
Ib.

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Ib.

Zed! thou unnecessary letter!
ii. 2.

He cannot flatter, he,—
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth!

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know.
Ib.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.
Ib.

Down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below!
iii. 4.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
Ib.

O, sir, you are old!
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine.
Ib.

I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary.
Ib.

O, let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks!
Ib.

To wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure
Must be their schoolmasters.
Ib.

Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks! rage!
blow!
iii. 2.

A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man.
Ib.

There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.
Ib.

I am a man
More sinned against than sinning.
Ib.

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that!
iii. 4.

Tom's a-cold.
Ib.

Take heed o' the foul fiend!
Ib.

Out-paramoured the Turk.
Ib.

'Tis a naughty night to swim in.

The prince of darkness is a gentleman.
Ib.

Child Roland to the dark tower came,
His word was still—Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.
Ib.

The little dogs and all,
Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.
iii. 6.

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,†
Or bobtail tyke, or trundle-tail.
Ib.

The worst is not,
So long as we can say, "This is the worst."
iv. 1.

You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind
Blows in your face.
iv. 2.

Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile.
Ib.

Patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest.
iv. 3.

There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes.
Ib.
Our foster-nurse of Nature is repose.
iv. 4.

How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
iv. 6.

Half-way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head;
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice.
Ib.

The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumbered idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high.
Ib.

Ay, every inch a king.
Ib.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,
though women all above.
Ib.

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary,
to sweeten my imagination.

Through tattered clothes small vices do
appear ;
Robes and furred gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks.

iv. 6.

When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools.

Ib.

Mine enemy's dog,

Though he had bit me, should have stood that night

Against my fire.

iv. 7.

I am a very foolish, fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more or
less ;

And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.

Antony and Cleopatra (c. 1606). Act i. 1.

The nature of bad news infects the teller.

i. 2.

There's a great spirit gone ! Thus did I desire it :

What our contempt's do often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again.

Ib.

Indeed, the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Instinctively had quit it. Ib.

From the still-vexed Bermoothes. Ib.

I will be correspondent to command
And do my spriting* gently. Ib.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:

Curtisied when you have and kissed,
The wild waves whist. Ib.

The strain of strutting chancicleer. Ib.

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;

Those are pearls that were his eyes;
Nothing of him that doth fade,

He that dies pays all debts. iii. 2.

Travellers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em. iii. 3.

I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded. iv. 1.

Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air ;
And like the baseless fabric of this vision
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep. iv. 1.

For aye thy foot-licker. Ib.

I do begin to have bloody thoughts. Ib.

With foreheads villainous low. Ib.

Now does my project gather to a head. v. 1.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I ;
In a cowslip's bell I lie :
There I couch when owls do cry ;
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer, merrily. Ib.

Let us not burden our remembrances with
A heaviness that's gone. Ib.

THE HISTORICAL PLAYS

Lord of thy presence, and no land beside.
King John (c. 1595). i. 1.

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter :
For new-made honour doth forget men's names. Ib.

For he is but a bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of observation. Ib.

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth.
Ib.

For courage mounteth with occasion. ii. 1.

311b

I, would that I were low laid in my grave ;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me. Ib.

He speaks plain cannon,—fire and smoke and bounce. ii. 2.

Zounds ! I was never so bethumped with words
Since first I called my brother's father dad. Ib.

Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—There is no sin, but to be rich ;
And, being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—There is no vice, but beggary. Ib.

Thou ever strong upon the stronger side !
Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by,
To teach thee safety ! iii. 1.

Thou wear a lion's hide ! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf-skin on those recreant limbs ! Ib.

Old Time, the clock-setter, that bald sexton,
Time. Ib.

But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek. iii. 4.

Grief fills the room up of my absent child,
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form. Ib.

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man. Ib.

When Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye. Ib.

And he that stands upon a slippery place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up. Ib.

Methinks nobody should be sad but I. iv. 1.
How now, foolish rheum ! Ib.

Alas ! I then have chid away my friend :
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart. Ib.

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess. iv. 2.

And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse. Ib.

We cannot hold mortality's strong hand. Ib.
Why do you bend such solemn brows on me ? Ib.

The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. Ib.

Another lean, unwashed artificer. Ib.

312a

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds, Makes ill deeds done!* Hadst thou not been by,

A fellow by the hand of nature marked,
Quoted, and signed, to do a deed of shame. Ib.

Out of my sight and never see me more! Ib.

Whate'er you think, good words, I think,
were best. Ib.

Be great in act as you have been in thought.
v. 1.

Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threatener, and outface the brow

Of bragging horror. Ib.

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself.
v. 7.

Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true. Ib.

Time-honoured Lancaster.

King Richard II (c. 1596). Act i. 1.

Let's purge this choler without letting blood.
Ib.

The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten times barred up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.

Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done. Ib.

We were not born to sue, but to command.
Ib.

That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts. i. 2.

The hopeless word of—never to return. i. 3.

All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Ib.

Grief makes one hour ten. Ib.

There is no virtue like necessity. Ib.

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.
Ib.

O, who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O, no! the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse. Ib.

Oh, but they say the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention, like deep harmony. ii. 1.

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes.
Ib.

312b

This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-Paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world;
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England. Ib.

England, bound in with the triumphant sea. Ib.

The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he. Ib.

Cozening hope; he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper-back of death. ii. 2.

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief. Ib.

Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry:
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly. Ib.

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembering my good friends.
ii. 3.

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.
Ib.

Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor.
Ib.

I see my glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Thy sun sits weeping in the lowly west. ii. 4.

Eating the bitter bread of banishment. iii. 1.

Not all the water in the rough, rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king.
iii. 2.

If angels fight,
Weak men must fall; for heaven still guards
the right. Ib.

O, call back yesterday, bid time return! Ib.

The worst is death, and death will have his
day. Ib.

Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Ib.

Of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills. Ib.

And nothing can we call our own but death.
Ib.

For heaven's sake let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings. Ib.

He is come to ope
The purple testament of bleeding war. iii. 3.

And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave. Ib.

They well deserve to have
That know the strong'st and surest way to get. Ib.

Gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain, Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long. iv. 1.

Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham ! Ib.

As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-graced actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious. v. 2.

How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept !
So is it in the music of men's lives. v. 5.

Pride must have a fall. Ib.

In those holy fields,
Over whose acres walked those blessed feet,
Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were nailed,
For our advantage, on the bitter cross.

King Henry IV. Part 1. (c. 1597). i. 1.
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of. Ib.

Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon. i. 2.

Thou hast the most unsavoury similes. Ib.

The rusty curb of old father antic, the law. Ib.

I would thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought ! Ib.

O, thou hast damnable iteration ; and art,
indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Ib.

And now am I, if a man should speak truly,
little better than one of the wicked. Ib.

Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal ; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Ib.

He was never yet a breaker of proverbs :
he will give the devil his due. Ib.

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee. Ib.

I know them to be as true-bred cowards
as ever turned back. Ib.

If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work. Ib.

A certain lord, neat, and trimly dressed,
Fresh as a bridegroom ; and his chin, newreaped,

Showed like a stubble-land at harvest home ;
He was perfumed like a milliner ;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and took 't away again. Ib.

And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He called them untaught knaves, unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly, unhandsome course
Betwixt the wind and his nobility. Ib.

313^b

So pestered with a popinjay. Ib.

He made me mad
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,
Of guns, and drums, and wounds. Ib.

And telling me the sovereign'st thing on earth
Was parmaceti for an inward bruise ;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous saltpetre should be digged
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroyed*
So cowardly ; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier. Ib.

This bald, unjointed chat of his. Ib.

Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds. Ib.

The blood more stirs
To rouse a lion, than to start a hare. Ib.

By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon ;
Or dive into the bottom of the deep Where fathom-line could never touch the
ground,
And pluck up drownèd honour by the locks. Ib.

But out upon this half-faced fellowship ! Ib.

Why what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me ! i. 3.

I know a trick worth two of that. ii. 1.

If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged ;
it could not be else. ii. 2.

Argument for a week, laughter for a month,
and a good jest for ever. Ib.

Falstaff sweats to death,
And lards the lean earth as he walks along. Ib.

Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. ii. 3.

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know ;
And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate ! Ib.

A Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy. ii. 4.

As merry as crickets. Ib.

Call you that backing of your friends ? A plague upon such backing ! Give me them that will face me. Ib.

A plague on all cowards, still say I. Ib.

I am a Jew else ; an Ebrew Jew. Ib.

Two rogues in buckram suits. Ib.

Three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green. Ib.

* Whereof that many a good felawe
Hath be distraught by sodein chaunce.
—Gower: Confessio Amantis (c. 1390), Book 3, 6.

314a

If reasons were as plenty as blackberries,
I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. Ib.

Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Ib.

Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. Ib.

Watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Ib.

Ah! No more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me. Ib.

What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Ib.

I will do it in King Cambyzes' vein. Ib.

If sack and sugar be a fault, heaven help
the wicked! Ib.

Banish plump Jack, and banish all the world. Ib.

Play out the play. Ib.

O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack! Ib.

At my nativity,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes
Of burning cressets. iii. 1.

And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men. Ib.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
Hotspur. Why, so can I, or so can any man!
But will they come when you do call for them? Ib.

O, while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil. Ib.

I had rather be a kitten and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers. Ib.

Mincing poetry,—
'Tis like the forced gait of a shuffling nag. Ib.

But in the way of bargain, mark you me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair. Ib.

And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff
As puts me from my faith. Ib.

O, he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house :—I had rather live

With cheese and garlic in a windmill. Ib.

A good mouth-filling oath. Ib.

A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood. iii. 2.

By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But like a comet, I was wondered at. Ib.

An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. iii. 3.

Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me. Ib.

You are so fretful, you cannot live long. Ib.

314b

Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn? *
Ib.

Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick,
In such a justling time? iv. 1.

This sickness doth infect
The very life-blood of our enterprise. Ib.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly armed,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropped down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship. Ib.

If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet. iv. 2.

The cankers of a calm world and a long peace. Ib.

There's but a shirt and a half in all my company. Ib.

Food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better. Ib.

To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast,
Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. Ib.

I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, nor more valiant-young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds. v. 1.

I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well. Ib.

Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off, when I come on? how then? Can honour set-to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is honour? A word. . . . Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible, then?
Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it—therefore, I'll none of it:
honour is a mere scutcheon :—and so ends
my catechism. Ib.

Look how we can, or sad, or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks. v. 2.

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere. v. 4.

Fare thee well, great heart!
Ill-weaved ambition, how much art thou shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough :—This earth, that bears
thee dead,
Bears not alive so stout a gentleman. Ib.

verbs (1546), ro. "To let the world wag and take mine ease in mine inn."

as a nobleman should do. *Ib.*Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burned.King Henry IV. Part 2. (c. 1598). i. 1.See what a ready tongue suspicion hath. *Ib.*Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remembered knolling a departed friend. *Ib.*I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. *ii. 2.*Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time. *Ib.*I am poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient. *Ib.*We that are in the vaward of our youth. *Ib.*For my voice, I have lost it with hollaing, and singing of anthems. *Ib.It was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing to make it too common. *Ib.*Wake not a sleeping wolf. *Ib.*O, thoughts of men accurst!
Past and to come seem best; things present, worst. *ii. 3.*He hath eaten me out of house and home.† *ii. 1.*Thus we play the fool with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. *ii. 2.*So that in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashioned others. And him—O wondrous him!O miracle of men! *ii. 3.*A good heart's worth gold. *ii. 4.*Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!Why then let grievous, ghastly, gaping woundsUntwine the sisters three! Ib.

That thou no more wilt weigh mine eyelids down,And steep my senses in forgetfulness? *iii. 1.*Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. *Ib.*Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair? *iii. 2.*I will maintain the word with my sword to be a good soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated: That is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or, when a man is,—being,— whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing. *Ib.*Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse. *Ib.*Most forcible Feeble. *Ib.*We have heard the chimes at midnight. *Ib.*I care not;—a man can die but once;—
we owe a death. *Ib.*He that dies this year is quit for the next. *Ib.*How subject we old men are to this vice of lying! *Ib.*He was, for all the world, like a forked

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw. ii. 4.

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloomed, and fruitful were the next. i. 6.

Undaunted spirit in a dying breast! iii. 2.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore. iii. 3.

He then that is not furnished in this sort,
Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight. iv. 1.

I owe him little duty and less love. iv. 4.

She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore to be won. v. 3.

I am a soldier, and unapt to weep,
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness. Ib.

For what is wedlock forcèd but a hell?
v. 6.

Rancour will out.
King Henry VI. Part 2 (c. 1591). i. 1.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face. i. 3.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep. iii. 1.

What know I how the world may deem of me?
iii. 2.

Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy. Ib.

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?
Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just. Ib.

Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably!
iii. 3.

He dies, and makes no sign: O God, forgive him! Ib.

There's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand. iv. 2.

Beggary is valiant. Ib.

The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers. Ib.

Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment; that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Ib.

Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school. iv. 7.

Kent, in the commentaries of Cæsar writ,
Is termed the civillest place of all this isle. Ib.

Ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven. Ib.

Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? iv. 8.

Was never subject longed to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject. iv. 9.

Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these!
iv. 10.

Frowns, words, and threats,
Shall be the war that Henry means to use. Ib.

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides. Ib.

Hadst thou but loved him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourished him, as I did with my blood. Ib.

An oath is of no moment, not being took
Before a true and lawful magistrate. i. 2.

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy. Ib.

A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre! i. 4.

Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion. Ib.

ii. 2.

Didst thou never hear
That things ill got had ever bad success ?
And happy always was it for that son,
Whose father, for his hoarding, went to hell ?

Ib.

And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns

Seeking a way, and straying from the way ;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out.

iii. 2.

For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

iii. 3.

Warwick, peace !

Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings !

iv. 4.

A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench.

iv. 8.

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind ;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

v. 6.

Down, down to hell ; and say I sent thee thither.

Ib.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.

Ib.

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York.

King Richard III (1593).

i. 1.

Our stern alarums changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures :
Grim-visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled front,

And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.

Ib.

Deformed, unfinished, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them.

Ib.

This weak piping time of peace.

Ib.

Simple, plain Clarence, I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven.

Ib.

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

i. 2.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman.

Ib.

Vouchsafe, diffused infection of a man.

Ib.

To leave this king encounter of our wits.

Ib.

318b

I never sued to friend nor enemy ;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing word ;

But, now thy beauty is proposed my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.

Ib.

Teach not thy lip such scorn ; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

Ib.

Was ever woman in this humour wooed ?

Was ever woman in this humour won ?

Ib.

Framed in the prodigality of nature.

Ib.

Because I cannot flatter and speak* fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abused

By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks ?

i. 3.

The world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch ;

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Ib.

And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Ib.

We will not stand to prate ;
Talkers are no good doers.

Ib.

Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes fall tears.

Ib.

Oh I have passed a miserable night,
So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days ;
So full of dismal terror was the time !

i. 4.

O Lord ! methought what pain it was to drown !

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears !
What sights of ugly death within mine eyes !
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks ;
A thousand men that fishes gnawed upon ;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scattered in the bottom of the sea ;
Some lay in dead men's skulls : and in those holes,

Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,
That wooed the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mocked the dead bones that lay scattered by.

If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
ii. 4.

You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,
Too ceremonious and traditional. iii. 1.

So wise, so young, they say, do ne'er live long.
Ib.

I moralise two meanings in one word. Ib.

So cunning, and so young, is wonderful. Ib.

He's all the mother's, from the top to toe. Ib.

When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks. iii. 3.

I think there's never man in Christendom
Can lesser hide his hate or love than he.
iii. 4.

Lives, like a drunken sailor, on the mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down. Ib.

Doubt not, my lad, I'll play the orator,
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself. iii. 5.

High-reaching Buckingham grows circum-spect. iv. 2.

Gold were as good as twenty orators. Ib.

I am not in the giving vein to-day. Ib.

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women Rail on the Lord's anointed! Ib.

An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.
Ib.

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman!
Ib.

Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we marched on without impediment.
v. 2.

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's

Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—
Have mercy, Jesu!—soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
Ib.

My conscience hath a thousand several
tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain. Ib.

There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul shall pity me. Ib.

By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers. Ib.

For the self-same heaven
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him. Ib.

Ib.

I have touched the highest point of all my greatness ;

And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting : I shall fall,
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Ib.

Press not a falling man too far.

Ib.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness !
This is the state of man : to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope ; to-morrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon
him :

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost ;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory ;
But far beyond my depth : my high-blown pride

At length broke under me ; and now has left me

Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye ;
I feel my heart new opened. O how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours !

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have :—

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

POEMS AND SONNETS

Hunting he loved, but love he laughed to scorn. Venus and Adonis (1593). St. 1.

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevelled hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen.
Love is a spirit, all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

St. 25.

" Ah me," quoth Venus, " young, and so unkind !"

St. 32.

Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love ?

St. 34.

Look what a horse should have, he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

St. 50.

Like a melancholy malcontent.

St. 53.

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none.

St. 65.

Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover ;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis plucked.

321*a*

Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last. St. 96.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny.

St. 109.

This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring. St. 110.

Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear.
St. 115.

Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns.
St. 126.

Foul cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.
St. 128.

For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there.
St. 130.

Love comforteth, like sunshine after rain.
St. 134.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
St. 135.

Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain court'sy who shall cope him
first. St. 148.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies! St. 155.

Grief hath two tongues: and never woman
yet,
Could rule them both, without ten women's
wit. St. 168.

For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.
St. 170.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator.
Lucrece (1594). St. 5.

In blind wonder of still-gazing eyes. St. 12.

Then where is truth if there be no self-trust?
St. 23.

Or sells eternity to get a toy. St. 31.

But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
St. 72.

Pity-pleading eyes. St. 81.

Soft pity enters at an iron gate. St. 85.

For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look. St. 88.

Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear.
St. 91.

Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret.
St. 93.

321*b*

O 'comfort-killing night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
St. 110.

O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason.
St. 126.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light.
St. 135.

To wrong the wronger till he render right. Ib.
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel.
St. 136.

For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
St. 144.

Grief best is pleased with grief's society.
St. 159.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore.
St. 160.

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime.

John's Bull's Other Island (1904). Act i.

An Irishman's heart is nothing but his imagination. Ib.

No Englishman has any common sense, or ever had, or ever will have. Ib.

Of course it's all tommy rot; but it's so brilliant, you know! How the dickens do you think of such things? Ib.

My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world (Keegan).

Act ii.

First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity. Act iv.

What really flatters a man is that you think him worth flattering. Ib.

There are only two qualities in the world: efficiency and inefficiency; and only two sorts of people: the efficient and the inefficient. Ib.

The true artist will let his wife starve, his children go barefoot, his mother drudge for his living at seventy, sooner than work at anything but his art.

Man and Superman. Act i.

There is no love sincerer than the love of food. Ib.

323b

It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can. Act ii.

Hell is full of musical amateurs. Music is the brandy of the damned. Act iii.

Englishmen never will be slaves: they are free to do whatever the Government and public opinion allow them to do. Ib.

An Englishman thinks he is moral when he is only uncomfortable. Ib.

As an old soldier I admit the cowardice: it's as universal as seasickness, and matters just as little. Ib.

In the arts of life man invents nothing; but in the arts of death he outdoes Nature herself, and produces by chemistry and machinery all the slaughter of plague, pestilence, and famine. Ib.

Woman reduces us all to the common denominator. Great Catherine (1919). Sc. 1.

I am well aware that I do not express myself with exactability. Ladies and gentlemen have that power over words that they can always say what they mean, but a common man can't. . . . He has more thoughts than words.

An Unsocial Socialist (c. 1881). Ch. 4.

A gentleman ain't a man—leastways not a common man—the common man bein' but the slave wot feeds and clothes the gentleman beyond the common. Ib.

Be like the sun and the meadow, which are not in the least concerned about the coming winter. Ib., ch. 5.

Do you know what a pessimist is?—A man who thinks everybody as nasty as himself, and hates them for it. Ib.

I think the most ridiculous sight in the world is a man on a bicycle, working away with his feet as hard as he possibly can, and believing that his horse is carrying him, instead of, as anyone can see, he carrying the horse. Ib., ch. 11.

You sometimes have to answer a woman according to her womanishness, just as you have to answer a fool according to his folly. Ib., ch. 18.

You must not suppose, because I am a man of letters, that I never tried to earn an honest living.

The Irrational Knot.
Preface (1905).

Money is indeed the most important thing in the world; and all sound and successful personal and national morality should have this fact for its basis. Ib.

Invention is the most expensive thing in the world. It takes no end of time, and no end of money. The Irrational Knot (1880), ch. 3.

What is the use of straining after an amiable view of things, Marian, when a cynical view is most likely to be the true one? Ib.

324a

I never was a good son or a good brother or a good patriot in the sense of thinking that my mother and my sister and my native country were better than other people's, because I happened to belong to them. Ch. 6.

Reminiscences make one feel so deliciously aged and sad. Ch. 14.

He hates chess. He says it is a foolish expedient for making idle people believe they are doing something very clever, when they are only wasting their time. Ib.

That ghostliest of all unrealities, the non-working man. Ch. 17.

If you want to see how selfish people are, and how skin-deep fashionable politeness is, take a voyage. . . . An ocean steamer is the next worst thing to the Palace of Truth. Ch. 18.

A man who has no office to go to—I don't care who he is—is a trial of which you can have no conception. Ib.

Only through the accident of being a hereditary peer can anyone, in these days of Votes for Everybody, get into Parliament, if handicapped by a serious modern cultural equipment.

Heartbreak House (1919). Introductory. The Cherry Orchard.

They prescribed inoculations and operations. . . . From such trifles as uvulas and tonsils they went on to ovaries and appendices, until at last no one's inside was safe. Ib. Hypochondria.

There was only one virtue, pugnacity; only one vice, pacifism. That is an essential condition of war. Ib. Madness in Court.

In London we have no theatres for the welfare of the people: they are all for the sole purpose of producing the utmost obtainable rent for the proprietor. Ib. Commerce in the Theatre.

Truth telling is not compatible with the defence of the realm.

Ib. How War muzzles the Dramatic Poet.

I am a woman of the world, Hector, and I can assure you that if you will only take the trouble always to do the perfectly correct thing, and to say the perfectly correct thing, you can do just what you like (Lady Utterword). Act i.

Every woman who hasn't any money is a matrimonial adventurer. Act ii.

Go anywhere in England where there are natural, wholesome, contented, and really nice English people; and what do you always find? That the stables are the real centre of the household. Act iii.

Everybody can see that the people who hunt are the right people, and the people who don't are the wrong ones. Ib.

Every drunken skipper trusts to Providence. But one of the ways of Providence with drunken skippers is to run them on the rocks. Ib.

324b

The British blockade won the war; but the wonder is that the British blockhead did not lose it. Preface. O'Flaherty, V.C., (1919).

You'll never have a quiet world till you knock the patriotism out of the human race. O'Flaherty V.C. (1915).

SHEFFIELD, John, Duke of Buckingham (1648-1721)

Of all those arts in which the wise excel, Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well.

Essay on Poetry. l. 1.

There's no such thing in nature, and you'll draw
A faultless monster, which the world ne'er saw. l. 231.

Read Homer once, and you can read no more; For all books else appear so mean, so poor, Verse will seem prose, but still persist to read, And Homer will be all the books you need. l. 322.

The world is made up, for the most part, of Fools and Knaves.

To Mr. Clifford, on his Humane Reason.

How weak and yet how vain a thing is man,
Mean what he will, endeavour what he can!
An Essay on Satire.

Learn to write well, or not to write at all. Ib.

Such is the mode of these censorious days,
The art is lost of knowing how to praise.
On Mr. Hobbes. l. 1.

Love is the salt of life. Ode on Love. Canto 5.

SHELLEY, Percy Bysshe (1792-1822)

How wonderful is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep! *
Queen Mab (1813). Canto 1.

In this interminable wilderness
Of worlds, at whose immensity
Even soaring fancy staggers. Ib.

Nature's unchanging harmony. Canto 2.

For when the power of imparting joy
Is equal to the will, the human soul
Requires no other heaven. Canto 3.

And conscience, that undying serpent, calls
Her venomous brood to their nocturnal task. Ib.

There needeth not the hell that bigots frame
To punish those who err: earth in itself
Contains at once the evil and the cure;
And all-sufficing Nature can chastise
Those who transgress her law,—she only knows
How justly to proportion to the fault
The punishment it merits. Ib.

* These are also the first lines of Shelley's The Demon of the World (1815).

325a

Many faint with toil,
That few may know the cares and woe of sloth. Ib.

The virtuous man,
Who, great in his humility, as kings
Are little in their grandeur. Ib.

Power, like a desolating pestilence,
Pollutes whate'er it touches; and obedience,
Bare of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
Makes slaves of men, and, of the human frame,
A mechanized automaton. Ib.

Heaven's ebon vault,
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which love has spread
To curtain her sleeping world. Canto 4.
Startling pale midnight on her starry throne. Ib.

War is the statesman's game, the priest's delight,
The lawyer's jest, the hired assassin's trade. Ib.

Twin-sister of religion, selfishness. Canto 5.
Commerce! beneath whose poison-breathing
shade
No solitary virtue dares to spring;
But poverty and wealth, with equal hand,
Scatter their withering curses. Ib.
Necessity, thou mother of the world! Canto 6.

Human pride
Is skilful to invent most serious names
To hide its ignorance. Canto 7.
The moonlight's ineffectual glow. Canto 8.
That sweet bondage which is freedom's self. Canto 9.

The slimy caverns of the populous deep,
Alastor (1815).
Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought. Ib.

A dream
Of youth, which night and time have quenched for ever. Ib.

But thou art fled
Like some frail exhalation. Ib.

Some respite to its turbulence unresting ocean
knows;
Whatever moves, or toils, or grieves, hath its appointed sleep. Stanzas. April, 1814.

Nought may endure but Mutability. Mutability.

And bloody Faith, the foulest birth of time.
Feelings of a Republican.

Honey from silkworms who can gather,
Or silk from the yellow bee?
The grass may grow in winter weather
As soon as hate in me. Lines to a Critic.

It stirs
Too much of suffocating sorrow.
Rosalind and Helen (1819).

325b

He was a coward to the strong:
He was a tyrant to the weak. Ib.

His name in my ear was ever ringing,
His form to my brain was ever clinging. Ib.

Darkly forward flowed
The stream of years. Ib.

It is unmeet
To shed on the brief flower of youth
The withering knowledge of the grave. Ib.

As to the Christian creed, if true
Or false, I never questioned it;
I took it as the vulgar do. Ib.

So the priests hated him, and he Repaid their hate with cheerful glee. Ib.

His soul seemed hovering in his eyes. Ib.

Fear not the tyrants shall rule for ever,
Or the priests of the bloody faith;
They stand on the brink of that mighty river,
Whose waves they have tainted with death. Ib.

Many a green isle needs must be
In the deep wide sea of misery,
Or the mariner, worn and wan,
Never thus could voyage on.
Lines written amongst the Euganean Hills.

O, wind,
If winter comes, can Spring be far behind?
Ode to the West Wind.

The wingless, crawling hours.
Prometheus Unbound (1820). Act 1.

Dreams and the light imaginings of men,
And all that faith creates or love desires,
Terrible, strange, sublime and beautiful shapes. Ib.

Evil minds
Change good to their own nature. Ib.

And the future is dark, and the present is spread
Like a pillow of thorns for thy slumberless
head. Ib.

Thy words are like a cloud of winged snakes. Ib.

From the dust of creeds out-worn. Ib.

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts. Act ii. 1.

Those eyes which burn through smiles that fade in tears,
Like stars half-quenched in mists of silver dew. Ib.

Sounds overflow the listener's brain,
So sweet, that joy is almost pain. Act ii. 2.

He gave man speech, and speech created
thought,
Which is the measure of the universe. Act ii. 4.

All spirits are enslaved which serve things evil. Ib.

All love is sweet,
Given or returned. Common as light is love,
And its familiar voice wearies not ever.

Act ii. 5.

They who inspire it are most fortunate,
As I am now ; but those who feel it most
Are happier still.

Ib.

My soul is an enchanted boat,
Which, like a sleeping swan, doth float
Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing.

Ib.

We have passed Age's icy caves,
And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,
And Youth's smooth ocean, smiling to betray :
Beyond the glassy gulfs we flee
Of shadow-peopled Infancy,
Through Death and Birth, to a diviner day.

Ib.

Thetis, bright image of eternity. Act iii. 1.

We two will sink on the wild waves of ruin,
Even as a vulture and a snake outspent
Drop, twisted in inextricable fight,
Into a shoreless sea.

Ib.

Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new.

Act iii. 2.

Death is the veil which those who live call life :
They sleep, and it is lifted.

Act iii. 3.

Or the dull sneer of self-loved ignorance.

Act iii. 4.

Man
Equal, unclassed, tribeless, and nationless.

Ib.

Laugh with a vast and inextinguishable laughter.

Act iv.

To suffer woes which Hope thinks infinite ;
To forgive wrongs darker than death or night ;
To defy Power, which seems omnipotent ;
To love, and bear ; to hope till Hope creates
From its own wreck the thing it contemplates ;

Neither to change, nor falter, nor repent ;
This, like thy glory, Titan, is to be Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free ;
This is alone Life, Joy, Empire, and Victory !

Ib.

And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.

The Sensitive Plant. Part I, st. 5.

And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tube-rose,
The sweetest flower for scent that blows.

St. 10.

Hail to thee, blithe spirit !
Bird thou never wert.

To a Skylark.

And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

Ib.

We look before and after ;
We pine for what is not ;

Our sincerest laughter
With some pain is fraught ;

Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.

Ib.

I could lie down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne, and yet must bear,
Till death like sleep might steal on me.
Stanzas, written in Dejection (Dec., 1818).

A pard-like spirit, beautiful and swift.

Adonais (1821). St. 32.

He has out-soared the shadow of our night ;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not, and torture not again ;
From the contagion of the world's slow stain,
He is secure, and now can never mourn
A heart grown cold, a head grown grey in vain.

St. 40.

Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise,
The grave, the city, and the wilderness.

St. 49.

Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity. St. 52.

'Tis malice, 'tis revenge, 'tis pride,
'Tis anything but thee.

To Harriet. May, 1814.

Fame is love disguised.

An Exhortation.

Kings are like stars—they rise, they set, they have

The worship of the world, but no repose.*
Hellas (1822).

Those who inflict must suffer, for they see
The work of their own hearts, and that must be

Our chastisement or recompense.

Julian and Maddalo (1819). l. 481.

Most wretched men
Are cradled into poetry by wrong :
They learn in suffering what they teach in song.

l. 543.

Then black despair,
The shadow of a starless night, was thrown
Over the world in which I moved alone.

The Revolt of Islam (1817).

Dedication, st. 6.

Can man be free if woman be a slave ?

Canto 2, st. 43.

With hue like that when some great painter dips
His pencil in the gloom of earthquake and eclipse.

Canto 5, st. 23.

That orbèd maiden, with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon.

The Cloud. 4.

I am the daughter of earth and water,
And the nursling of the sky ;
I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores ;
I change, but I cannot die.

Ib. 6.

I am the friend of the unfriended poor.

To Cambria.

Music, when soft voices die,
Vibrates in the memory ;

* See Bacon, Essays, 19, "Of Empire," p. 106.

Odours, when sweet violets sicken,
Live within the sense they quicken.

Poems written in 1821. To —

The desire of the moth for the star,
Of the night for the morrow,
The devotion to something afar
From the sphere of our sorrow. To —.

When a man marries, dies, or turns Hindoo,
His best friends hear no more of him.

Letter to Maria Gisborne (1820).

A hooded eagle among blinking owls.* Ib.
In London, that great sea, whose ebb and flow

At once is deaf and loud. Ib.

For she was beautiful; her beauty made
The bright world dim, and everything beside Seemed like the fleeting image of a shade.

The Witch of Atlas (1820). 12.

Man, who man would be,
Must rule the empire of himself; in it Must be supreme.

Sonnet. Political Greatness.

Old men are testy, and will have their way.

The Cenci (1819). i. 2.

There are deeds

Which have no form, sufferings which have no tongue. iii. 1.

Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart. v. 2.

What 'twas weak to do
'Tis weaker to lament, once being done. v. 3.

The fountains mingle with the river,

And the rivers with the ocean;

The winds of heaven mix for ever

With a sweet emotion;

Nothing in the world is single;

All things, by a law divine,

In one another's being mingle—

Why not I with thine?

Love's Philosophy.

The seed ye sow, another reaps;

The wealth ye find, another keeps;

The robes ye weave, another wears;

The arms ye forge, another bears.

To the Men of England.

SHENSTONE, William (1714-1763)

Come listen to my mournful tale,

Ye tender hearts and lovers dear;

Nor will you scorn to heave a sigh,

Nor need you blush to shed a tear.

Jemmy Dawson.

For seldom shall she hear a tale

So sad, so tender, and so true. Ib.

Ah me! full sorely is my heart forlorn

To think how modest worth neglected lies,

While partial fame doth with her blasts adorn

Such deeds alone as pride and pomp disguise.

The Schoolmistress (1742).

In every village marked with little spire, Embowered in trees, and hardly known to fame. Ib.

* Referring to Coleridge.

Her cap, far whiter than the driven snow,
Emblem right meet of decency does yield. Ib.

For never title yet so mean could prove,
But there was eke a mind which did that title
love. Ib.

The tufted basil, pun-provoking thyme,
Fresh baum, and marigold of cheerful hue. Ib.

By the sharp tooth of cankering eld defaced. Ib.

A little bench of heedless bishops here,
And there a chancellor in embryo,
Or bard sublime, if bard may e'er be so. Ib.

Wisheth, poor starveling elf! his paper kite may fly. Ib.

Whoe'er has travelled life's dull round,

Where'er his stages may have been,

May sigh to think he still has found

The warmest welcome at an inn.

Written at an Inn at Henley.

So sweetly she bade me adieu,

I thought that she bade me return.

I do not mean to be disrespectful, but the attempt of the Lords to stop the progress of reform, reminds me very forcibly of the great storm of Sidmouth, and of the conduct of the excellent Mrs. Partington on that occasion.
In the winter of 1824, there set in a great flood upon that town—the tide rose to an incredible height: the waves rushed in upon the houses, and everything was threatened with destruction. In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm, Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, squeezing out the sea water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean.
The Atlantic was roused. Mrs. Partington's spirit was up; but I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a slop or a puddle, but she should not have meddled with a tempest.

St. 46.

True is that whilome that good poet sayd,
The gentle mind by gentle deeds is knowne;

* The first line seems to be derived from The Book of Curtesye, printed by Caxton, and found in manuscripts of c. 1470-1480. In stanza 50 of this poem, Chaucer is eulogised, and it is said of him: "And in our tunge was welles of eloquence." The second line has a parallel in the Preface to Lord Berners' Huon of Bordeaux
(c. 1530; 3rd ed. 1601): "High and adventurous actions, which . . . leaveth their names cannonised in Fames aeternall Calender."

To build a house for fools and mad ;
To show, by one satiric touch,
No nation wanted it so much. l. 538.

See now comes the captain all daubed with gold lace. The Grand Question Debated.

Can hardly tell how to cry bo to a goose. Ib.

Say, Britain, could you ever boast,
Three poets in an age at most ?
Our chilling climate hardly bears
A sprig of bays in fifty years.

On Poetry (1733).

As learned commentators view
In Homer more than Homer knew. Ib.

So geographers, in Afric maps,
With savage pictures fill their gaps,
And o'er uninhabitable downs
Place elephants for want of towns. Ib.

To Cerberus they give a sop,
His triple barking mouth to stop. Ib.

He gives directions to the town
To cry it up or run it down. Ib.

Hobbes clearly proves that every creature
Is in a state of war by nature. Ib.

So, naturalists observe, a flea
Hath smaller fleas that on him prey ;
And these have smaller still to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum ;
Thus every poet in his kind
Is bit by him that comes behind.* Ib.

Your panegyrics here provide ;
You cannot err on flattery's side. Ib.

A coming shower your shooting corns presage.
Description of a City Shower.

He who betrays his friend, shall never be Under one roof, or in one ship, with me.
Horace (1716). Book 3, 2.

And though the villain 'scape awhile, he feels Slow vengeance, like a bloodhound at his heels. Ib.

Philosophy ! the lumber of the schools.
Ode to Sir W. Temple (1689). c. 2.

We scrawl all o'er with old and empty rules,
Stale memorandums of the schools. Ib. c. 3.

" Libertas et natale solum ! "
Fine words, indeed ! I wonder where he stole
'em.

Lines written in 1724 on Chief Justice Whitshed's motto on his coach, after the trial of Drapier.

Censure's to be understood,
Th' authentic mark of the elect ;
The public stamp Heav'n sets on all that's great and good,
Our shallow search and judgment to direct.
Ode to the Athenian Society (1691). c. 4.

How strange a paradox is true,
That men who lived and died without a name,
Are the chief heroes in the sacred lists of fame.
Ib. c. 12.

Where I am not understood, it shall be concluded that something very useful and profound is couched underneath.

Tale of a Tub (1704). Preface.

I have somewhere heard it is a maxim that those to whom everybody allows the second place, have an undoubted title to the first.

Ib. The Bookseller's Dedication.

" Bread," says he, " dear brothers, is the staff of life." Sec. 4.

This is the sublime and refined point of felicity, called the possession of being well deceived ; the serene peaceful state of being a fool among knaves. Sec. 9.

Satire is a sort of glass wherein beholders do generally discover everybody's face but their own.

Battle of the Books (1704). Preface.

Instead of dirt and poison we have rather chosen to fill our hives with honey and wax ;
thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light. Ib.

If a man had the art of the second sight for seeing lies, as they have in Scotland for seeing spirits, how admirably he might entertain himself in this town by observing the different shapes, sizes and colours of those swarms of lies which buzz about the heads of some people.

The Examiner. No. 15. Nov. 9, 1710.

Falsehood flies and truth comes limping after it, so that when men come to be un-deceived it is too late. Ib.

He is without the sense of shame or glory,
as some men are without the sense of smelling.
Character of Lord Wharton (1710).

It is the folly of too many to mistake the echo of a London coffee-house for the voice of the kingdom.

The Conduct of the Allies (1711).

Truth is eternal, and the son of heaven.
Ode Dr. Wm. Sancroft (1689). c. 1.

Each line shall stab, shall blast, like daggers and like fire. Ib., c. 5.

But zeal is weak and ignorant, though wondrous proud,
Though very turbulent and very loud. Ib., c 7.

Nothing is fixed, that mortals see or know,
Unless perhaps some stars be so. Ib.

Necessity, thou tyrant conscience of the great !
Ib., c. 9.

Humour is odd, grotesque, and wild,
Only by affectation spoiled ;
'Tis never by invention got ;
Men have it when they know it not.

349b

And when with grief you see your brother
stray,

Or in a night of error lose his way,
Direct his wandering and restore the day.
To guide his steps afford your kindest aid,
And gently pity whom ye can't persuade ;
Leave to avenging Heaven his stubborn will,
For, O, remember, he's your brother still. Ib.

Ye may say I am hot ;
I say I am not,—
Only warm, as the subject on which I am got.
The Famous Speechmaker (April, 1710).

I've often wished that I had clear,
For life, six hundred pounds a year ;
A handsome house to lodge a friend ;
A river at my garden's end.

Imitation of Horace (1714).

Removed from kind Arbuthnot's aid,
Who knows his art but not his trade,
Preferring his regard for me
Before his credit or his fee.

In Sickness. Oct., 1714.

Now hear an allusion :—A mitre, you know,
Is divided above, but united below.
If this you consider, our emblem is right ;
The bishops divide, but the clergy unite.

On the Irish Bishops (1731).

Many valiant chiefs of old
Greatly lived and died before
Agamemnon, Grecian bold,
Waged the ten years' famous war.
But their names, unsung, unwept,
Unrecorded, lost and gone,
Long in endless night have slept,
And shall now no more be known.

Horace. Book 4, Ode 19.

Most of the players, who had very little faith before, were now desirous of having as much as they could, and therefore embraced the Roman Catholic religion.

A True and Faithful Narrative.

I have heard of a man who had a mind to sell his house, and therefore carried a piece of brick in his pocket, which he showed as a pattern to encourage purchasers.

holy maxim, "That some men should be ruined for the good of others."

Essay on English Bubbles (1720).

There are not many things cheaper than supposing and laughing.

Sermon 10. On Sleeping in Church.

The want of belief is a defect that ought to be concealed when it cannot be overcome.

Thoughts on Religion.

I never saw, heard, nor read that the clergy were beloved in any nation where Christianity was the religion of the country. Nothing can render them popular but some degree of persecution. Ib.

A footman may swear, but he cannot swear like a lord. He can swear as often, but can he swear with equal delicacy, propriety and judgment?

Polite Conversation (c. 1731). Introduction.

Ib. Dialogue 1.

Lady Smart. Will you eat any oysters before dinner?—Colonel Atwit. With all my heart. He was a bold man that first ate an oyster.—Lady S. They say oysters are a cruel meat, because we eat them alive; then they are an uncharitable meat, for we leave nothing to the poor; and they are an ungodly meat, because we never say grace.†

Ib. Dialogue 2.

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.

Thoughts on Various Subjects. (Ascribed to Pope but included in Swift's Works.)

Few are qualified to shine in company, but it is in most men's power to be agreeable. Ib.

We have just enough religion to make us hate, but not enough to make us love one another. Ib.

Party is the madness of the many, for the gain of a few. Ib.

There is nothing wanting to make all rational and disinterested people in the world of one religion, but that they should walk together every day. Ib.

The Scripture, in time of disputes, is like an open town in time of war, which serves indifferently the occasions of both parties. Ib.

Flowers of rhetoric, in sermons and serious discourses, are like the blue and red flowers in corn, pleasing to them who come only for amusement, but prejudicial to him who would reap the profit. Ib.

The most positive men are the most credulous. Ib.

An excuse is a lie guarded. Ib.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday. Ib.

A nice man is a man of nasty ideas. Ib.

A wise man is never less alone than when he is alone.‡

Essay on the Faculties of the Mind.

There is nothing in this world constant but inconstancy. Ib.

We were to do more business after dinner; but after dinner is after dinner—an old saying and a true, Much drinking, little thinking. Letters. To Mrs. Johnson (Stella), Feb. 26, 1711-2.

* This is given as a proverbial expression current in Queen Anne's time.

† All these presumably were proverbial expressions.

‡ See Rogers: "Never less alone than when alone."

Monday is parson's holiday.

Ib., March 3, 1711-2.

People will pretend to grieve more than they really do, and that takes off from their true grief. To Mrs. Dingley, Jan. 14, 1712-3.

What a foolish thing is time! And how foolish is man, who would be as angry if time stopped, as if it passed!

To Miss Vanhomrigh (Vanessa), Aug. 7, 1722.

I am weary of friends, and friendships are all monsters. To Stella, Oct. 23, 1710.

Method is good in all things. Order governs the world. The Devil is the author of confusion. Ib., Oct. 26, 1710.

Plaguy twelve-penny weather.* Ib.

'Tis very warm weather when one's in bed. Ib., Nov. 8, 1710.

As I hope to live, I despise the credit of it, out of an excess of pride. Ib., Nov. 24, 1710.

In war opinion is nine parts in ten. Ib., Jan. 7, 1710-1.

We are so fond of each other, because our ailments are the same. Ib., Feb. 1, 1710-1.

We con ailments, which makes us very fond of each other. Ib., Feb. 14, 1710-1.

I love good creditable acquaintance; I love to be the worst of the company. Ib., April 17, 1710-1.

Opinion is a mighty matter in war. Ib., Jan. 1, 1711.

He was a fiddler, and consequently a rogue. Ib., July 25, 1711.

He showed me his bill of fare to tempt me to dine with him. "Foh," said I, "I value not your bill of fare, give me your bill of company." Ib., Sept. 2, 1711.

When you have done a fault, be always pert and insolent, and behave yourself as if you were the injured person.

Directions to Servants.

SWINBURNE, Algernon Charles
(1837-1909)

Some dead lute-player
That in dead years had done delicious things.
Ballad of Life.

The last was Fear, that is akin to Death;
He is Shame's friend, and always as Shame
saith,

Fear answers him again. Ib.

With nerve and bone she weaves and multiplies
Exceeding pleasure out of extreme pain.

Laus Veneris.

* An expression frequently used by Swift. Gay, in a letter to Swift, speaks of "shilling weather." The allusion is to weather when chair-hire or coach-hire was necessary.

351a

For I was of Christ's choosing, I God's knight,
No blinkard heathen stumbling for scant light.

Ib.

I have put my days and dreams out of mind,
Days that are over, dreams that are done.

The Triumph of Time. St. 7.

Out of the world's way, out of the light,
Out of the ages of worldly weather,
Forgotten of all men altogether.

Ib., st. 15.

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than death.

Ib., st. 20.

But you, had you chosen, had you stretched hand,

Had you seen good such a thing were done,
I too might have stood with the souls that stand

In the sun's sight, clothed with the light of the sun.

Ib., st. 22.

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.

Ib., st. 33.

I shall never be friends again with roses;
I shall loathe sweet tunes, where a note grown strong

Relents and recoils, and climbs and closes.

Ib., st. 45.

I shall hate sweet music my whole life long.

Ib.

Marvellous mercies and infinite love.

Les Noyades.

And though she saw all heaven in flower above,
She would not love.

A Leave-taking.

But thought and faith are mightier things than time

Can wrong,

Made splendid once with speech, or made sublime

With song.

The Interpreters (1885). St. 4.

Bind fast her home-born foes with links of shame,

More strong than iron and more keen than flame;

Seal up their lips for shame's sake.

New Year's Day (1889).

Let life burn down, and dream it is not death.

Anactoria.

I would my love could kill thee; I am satiated

With seeing thee live, and fain would have thee dead.

Ib.

I would find grievous ways to have thee slain,
Intense device, and superflux of pain.

Ib.

The world is not sweet in the end;

For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.

Hymn to Proserpine.

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean.* Ib.

* See page 456a: "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean."

351b

The end is come of pleasant places,
The end of tender words and faces,
The end of all, the popped sleep.

Illicit. St. 1.

Good-night, good sleep, good rest from sorrow,

To these that shall not have good morrow;
The gods be gentle to all these! Ib., st. 8.

A little sorrow, a little pleasure,
Fate metes us from the dusty measure

That holds the date of all of us;
We are born with travail and strong crying,

And from the birth-day to the dying
The likeness of our life is thus. Ib., st. 18.

I turn to thee as some green afternoon
Turns toward sunset, and is loth to die;

Ah God, ah God, that day should be so soon!

In the Orchard.

Forget that I remember,
And dream that I forget.

Rococo.

Yet leave me not; yet, if thou wilt, be free;
Love me no more, but love my love of thee.

Erotion (c. 1865).

I shall remember while the light lives yet,
And in the night-time I shall not forget. Ib.

And those high songs of thine
That stung the sense like wine,

Or fell more soft than dew or snow by night,
Or wailed as in some flooded cave

Sobs the strong broken spirit of a wave.

To Victor Hugo.

Delight, the rootless flower,
And love, the bloomless bower;

Delight that lives an hour,
And love that lives a day.

Before Dawn. St. 1.

To say of shame—what is it?
Of virtue—we can miss it;

Of sin—we can but kiss it,
And it's no longer sin. Ib., st. 5.

But love so lightly plighted,
Our love with torch unlighted,

Paused near us unafrighted,
Who found and left him free. Ib., st. 7.

We shift and bedeck and bedrape us,
Thou art noble and nude and antique.

Dolores. St. 7.

Men touch them, and change in a trice
The lilies and languors of virtue

For the raptures and roses of vice.

Ib., st. 9.

Ah, beautiful passionate body
That never has ached with a heart!

Ib., st. 11.

But sweet as the rind was the core is;
We are fain of thee still, we are fain,

O sanguine and subtle Dolores,
Our Lady of Pain. Ib., st. 13.

Despair the twin-born of devotion. Ib., st. 14.

The delight that consumes the desire,
The desire that outruns the delight. Ib.

352*a*

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,
And Venus rose red out of wine. Ib., st. 39.

O daughter of Death and Priapus,
Our Lady of Pain. Ib., st. 53.

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be
That no life lives for ever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.

The Garden of Proserpine. St. 11.

Too soon did I love it, and lost love's rose;
And I cared not for glory's:
Only the blossoms of sleep and of pleasure were mixed in my hair. Hesperia.

Christian, what of the night?—
I cannot tell; I am blind.
I halt and hearken behind
If haply the hours will go back
And return to the dear dead light,
To the watchfires and stars that on old
Shone where the sky now is black,
Glowed where the earth now is cold.

Songs of Sunrise. Watch in the Night.

Land me, she says, where love
Shows but one shaft, one dove,
One heart, one hand.
A shore like that, my dear,
Lies where no man will steer,
No maiden land.

Love at Sea. (Imitated from Theophile Gautier.)

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey. Félice.

I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted,
And knew we should both forget.

An Interlude.

And the best and the worst of this is
That neither is most to blame,
If you've forgotten my kisses,
And I've forgotten your name. Ib.

For thou, if ever godlike foot there trod
These fields of ours, wert surely like a god.
In the Bay. St. 18.

The shadow stayed not, but the splendour stays,
Our brother, till the last of English days.

St. 19.

Who cannot hate, can love not. St. 31.

Nor can belief touch, kindle, smite, relieve
His heart who has not heart to disbelieve. Ib.

Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon;
If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to live;

And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.
Ave atque Vale.

352*b*

The old dew still falls on the old sweet flowers,
The old sun revives the new-fledged hours,
The old summer rears the new-born roses.
Age and Song.

Old thanks, old thoughts, old aspirations,
Outlive men's lives and lives of nations. Ib.

Time takes them home that we loved, fair names and famous,
To the soft long sleep, to the broad sweet bosom of death;
But the flower of their souls he shall not take away to shame us,
Nor the lips lack song for ever that now
lack breath.
For with us shall the music and perfume that die not, dwell,
Though the dead to our dead bid welcome,
and we farewell.

In Memory of Barry Cornwall. St. 6.

Not a kindlier life or sweeter
Time, that lights and quenches men,
Now may quench or light again.

Epicæde. (J. L. Graham, died 1876.)

Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire;
A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire;
Shame soiled thy song, and song assailed thy shame.
But from thy feet now death hath washed the mire,
Love reads out first, at head of all our choir,
Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's
name.*

A Ballad of François Villon. Envoi.

And sweet red splendid kissing mouth.
Translation of Villon. Complaint of the Fair Armouress.

Change lays not her hand upon truth.
Dedication. 1865.

And song is as foam that the sea-winds fret,
Though the thought at his heart should be deep as the sea.

Dedication to Poems and Ballads (1878).
Second Series.

Man is a beast when shame stands off from him. Phædra. Hippolytus.

Thy works and mine are ripples on the sea.
Take heart, I say: we know not yet their end. Lochrine.

Your song
Tastes sharp of sea and the sea's bitterness.
Chastelard (1865). Act i. 1.

They have eaten poisonous words;
They are mad and have no shame. Ib., v. 2.

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With lip of leaves and ripple of rain.

Atalanta in Calydon (1865). Chorus.

SWINBURNE

353a

Small praise man gets dispraising the high gods. Chorus.

His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep. Ib.

But the gods hear men's hands before their lips. Althæa.

The sweet wise death of old men honourable.
Ib.

And, best beloved of best men, liberty,
Free lives and lips, free hands of men free-born.
Ib.

A child and weak,
Mine, a delight to no man, sweet to me. Ib.

What ailed thee then to be born ? Chorus.

Peace and be wise ; no gods love idle speech.
Meleager.

Have all thy will of words ; talk out thine heart. Ib.

A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon. Chorus.

But ye, keep ye on earth
Your lips from over-speech,
Loud words and longing are so little worth ;
And the end is hard to reach.

For silence after grievous things is good,
And reverence, and the fear that makes men whole,

And shame, and righteous governance of
blood,

And lordship of the soul.

But from sharp words and wits men pluck
no fruit,

And gathering thorns they shake the tree at root ;

For words divide and rend ;
But silence is most noble till the end. Ib.

No man doth well but God hath part in him.
Ib.

A name to be washed out with all men's tears,
Althæa.

What shall be said ? for words are thorns to grief. Chorus.

Thy cradled brows and loveliest loving lips,
The floral hair, the little lightening eyes,
And all thy goodly glory. Althæa.

Mother, thou sole and only, thou not these,
Keep me in mind a little when I die,

Because I was thy first-born.

Forget not, nor think shame ; I was thy son.
Time was I did not shame thee ; and time was

I thought to live and make thee honourable.
Meleager.

Ay, not yet may the land forget that bore and loved thee and praised and wept,

Sidney, lord of the stainless sword, the name of names that her heart's love kept.

Astrophel. 2, l. 4.

To be mis-spoken and mis-seen of men,
Which is not for high-seated hearts to fear.

Bothwell (1874). Act i. 1.

England : An Ode. 1, st. 3.

All our past proclaims our future : Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand,

Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless land,

Bear us witness : come the world against her,
England yet shall stand. 2, st. 5.

No man ever spake as he that bade our
England be but true,

Keep but faith with England fast and firm,
and none should bid her rue ;

None may speak as he : but all may know the sign that Shakespeare knew. 2, st. 7.

Hope knows not if fear speak truth, nor fear whether hope be not blind as she :

But the sun is in heaven that beholds her immortal, and girdled with life by the sea.

Peace, rest, and sleep are all we know of death,
And all we dream of comfort.

In Memory of John Wm. Inchbold.

A man beloved, a man elect of men.

Ib.

For if, beyond the shadow and the sleep,

A place there be for souls without a stain,
Where peace is perfect, and delight more deep
Than seas or skies that change and shine
again,

There none of all unsullied souls that live
May hold a surer station.

In hawthorn-time the heart grows light.

The Tale of Balen (1896). 1, st. 1.

In linden-time the heart is high,
For pride of summer passing by
With lordly laughter in her eye.

2, st. 1.

A true man, pure as faith's own vow,
Whose honour knows not rust.

3, st. 18.

A castle girt about and bound
With sorrow, like a spell.

6, st. 25.

Strong summer, dumb with rapture, bound
With golden calm the woodlands round.

7, st. 14.

God's blood ! is law for man's sake made, or
man

For law's sake only, to be held in bonds ?

Mary Stuart (1881). i. 1.

Wise men may think, what hardly fools would say.

iv. 2.

Where might is, the right is :

Long purses make strong swords.

Let weakness learn meekness :

God save the House of Lords !

A Word for the Country. St. 1.

Not with dreams, but with blood and with iron,

Shall a nation be moulded at last. St. 13.

With a hero at head, and a nation

Well gagged and well drilled and well cowed,

And a gospel of war and damnation,

Has not Empire a right to be proud ?

St. 14.

He is master and lord of his brothers

Who is worthier and wiser than they.

St. 18.

Silence, uttering love that all things understand.

The Cliffside Path. St. 2.

The world has no such flower in any land,

And no such pearl in any gulf the sea,

As any babe on any mother's knee.

Pelagius. 2.

Make bare the poor dead secrets of his heart,
Strip the stark-naked soul, that all may

SYMONS, Arthur (b. 1865)

The aim of criticism is to distinguish what is essential in the work of a writer. It is the delight of a critic to praise; but praise is scarcely a part of his duty. . . . What we ask of him is that he should find out for us more than we can find out for ourselves.

Introd. to Coleridge's "Biographia Literaria" (1906).

No perfect thing is too small for eternal recollection.

So his life has flowed
From its mysterious urn, a sacred stream,
In whose calm depth the beautiful and pure
Alone are mirrored.

Ion (1835). Act i. 1.

TATE, Nahum (1652-1715)

Tiger with tiger, bear with bear, you'll find
In leagues offensive and defensive joined;
But lawless man the anvil dares profane,
And forge that steel by which a man is slain.

Translation of Juvenal.

Friendship's the privilege

Of private men; for wretched greatness
knows

No blessing so substantial.

The Loyal General.

TAYLOR, Ann (Mrs. Gilbert) (1782-
1866), and Jane TAYLOR (1783-1824)

I thank the goodness and the grace,
Which on my birth have smiled,
And made me, in these Christian days,
A happy English child.‡

Infant Hymns for Infant Minds.

A Child's Hymn of Praise.

I was not born a little slave,
To labour in the sun,
And wish I were but in my grave,
And all my labour done.

But if they all should be denied,
Then you're too proud to own your Pride.

The Way to find out Pride.

So, while their bodies moulder here,
Their souls with God himself shall dwell,—
But always recollect, my dear,
That wicked people go to hell.

About Dying.

He went about, he was so kind,
To cure poor people who were blind;

355^b

And many who were sick and lame,
He pitied them and did the same.

TAYLOR, Bayard (1825-1878)

Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold.

Bedouin Song.

And broad-based under all
Is planted England's oaken-hearted mood,
As rich in fortitude
As e'er went worldward from the island-wall.

America.

To one strong race all races here unite. Ib.

They sang of love, and not of fame;
Forgot was Britain's glory;
Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang Annie Laurie.

TENNYSON, Alfred (Lord Tenny-son) (1809-1892)

Her court was pure; her life serene;
God gave her peace; her land reposed;
A thousand claims to reverence closed
In her as Mother, Wife, and Queen;

And statesmen at her council met
Who knew the seasons when to take Occasion by the hand, and make
The bounds of freedom wider yet.

To the Queen (1851).

Broad-based upon her people's will,
And compassed by the inviolate sea. Ib.

The world was never made.
It will change, but it will not fade.

O Death in Life, the days that are no more. l. 36.
O tell her, Swallow, thou that knowest each,
That bright and fierce and fickle is the South,
And dark and true and tender is the North.* l. 78.
O tell her, brief is life but love is long. l. 93.
And paint the gates of Hell with Paradise. l. 113.
These flashes on the surface are not he.
He has a solid base of temperament. l. 234.
A lidless watcher of the public weal. l. 306.
Man is the hunter ; woman is his game. Canto 5. l. 147.
A maiden moon that sparkles on a sty. l. 178.
Not like the piebald miscellany, man. l. 190.
We remember love ourself
In our sweet youth. l. 198.
The blind wildbeast of force. l. 256.
When the man wants weight, the woman takes it up,
And topples down the scales, but this is fixt
As are the roots of earth and base of all ;
Man for the field and woman for the hearth :
Man for the sword and for the needle she :
Man with the head and woman with the heart :
Man to command and woman to obey ;
All else confusion. l. 434.
The bearing and the training of a child
Is woman's wisdom. l. 455.
Home they brought her warrior dead. Canto 6. Song.

* There is an Arabic Proverb translated in a collection published 1623, as follows : "Cum errat eruditus, errat errore erudito," i.e. "When the learned man errs he errs with a learned error,"

* "As the northren men loveth fight, also the southren, falsness ; they trusteth to streynth, these to sleghtes ; they to staluartnesse, these to traysonne." —MS. Trin. Coll. Dublin (c. 1425) relating to the Conquest of Ireland by the English. The passage refers to the northern and southern Irish.

The woman is so hard
Upon the woman. l. 205.

With a voice, that like a bell
Tolled by an earthquake in a trembling tower,
Rang ruin. l. 311.

Ask me no more : the moon may draw the sea.
Canto 7. Song.

The moan of doves in immemorial elms,
And murmuring of innumerable bees. l. 206.

Through all the faultful Past. l. 232.

The woman's cause is man's ; they rise or sink
Together. l. 243.

Either sex alone
Is half itself, and in true marriage lies
Nor equal nor unequal. l. 233.

Happy he
With such a mother ! Faith in womankind
Beats with his blood, and trust in all things high
Comes easy to him, and though he trip and fall

He shall not blind his soul with clay. l. 308.

And so through those dark gates across the wild

That no man knows. l. 341.

For she was crammed with theories out of books. Conclusion.

God bless the narrow sea which keeps her off,
And keeps our Britain, whole within herself,
A nation yet, the rulers and the ruled. Ib.

Too comic for the solemn things they are.
Too solemn for the comic touches in them. Ib.

This fine old world of ours is but a child,
Yet in the go-cart. Patience ! Give it time
To learn its limbs : there is a hand that guides. Ib.

No little lily-handed Baronet he,
A great broad-shouldered genial Englishman. Ib.

The last great Englishman is low.
Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington (1852). St. 3.

Foremost captain of his time,
Rich in saving common-sense,
And, as the greatest only are,
In his simplicity sublime.
O good grey head which all men knew ! St. 4.

O fall'n at length that tower of strength
Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew ! Ib.

Under the cross of gold
That shines over city and river. St. 5.

Through the dome of the golden cross. Ib.

To such a name for ages long,
To such a name,
Preserve a broad approach of fame. Ib.

In that world-earthquake, Waterloo. St. 6.

Thank Him who isled us here, and roughly set His Briton* in blown seas and storming showers. St. 7.

O Statesmen, guard us, guard the eye, the soul
Of Europe, keep our noble England whole. Ib.

That sober freedom out of which there springs
Our loyal passion for our temperate kings. Ib.

Who never sold the truth to serve the hour,
Nor paltered with Eternal God for power. Ib.

Yea, all things good await
Him who cares not to be great,
But as he saves or serves the state.
Not once or twice in our rough island-story,
The path of duty was the way to glory. St. 8.

Speak no more of his renown,
Lay your earthly fancies down,
And in the vast cathedral leave him,
God accept him, Christ receive him. St. 9.

Wild War, who breaks the converse of the wise. The Third of February, 1852.

No little German state are we,
But the one voice in Europe ; we must speak. Ib.

We are not cotton-spinners all,
But some love England and her honour yet. Ib.

Someone had blundered. Ib.

Their's not to make reply,
Their's not to reason why,
Their's but to do and die. Ib.

Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them
Volleyed and thundered. Ib.

Into the jaws of Death,
Into the mouth of Hell. Ib.

All the world wondered. Ib.

When can their glory fade ? Ib.

Ah ! there's no fool like the old one.
The Grandmother.

For being of that honest few,
Who give the Fiend himself his due.
To the Rev. F. D. Maurice.

You'll have no scandal while you dine,
But honest talk and wholesome wine. Ib.

But when the wreath of March has blossomed,
Crocus, anemone, violet. Ib.

Oh well for him whose will is strong !
He suffers, but he will not suffer long !
He suffers, but he cannot suffer wrong. Will.

Most can raise the flowers now,
For all have got the seed. The Flower.

Wearing his wisdom lightly. A Dedication.
Believing where we cannot prove.
In Memoriam (1850). Introduction, st. 1.
Thou madest man, he knows not why;
He thinks he was not made to die. St. 3.
Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be. St. 5.
Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell;
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before. St. 7.
I held it truth, with him who sings*
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things. Canto 1.
Let Love clasp Grief lest both be drowned. Ib.
For words, like Nature, half reveal
And half conceal the Soul within. Canto 3.
Never morning wore
To evening, but some heart did break. Canto 6.
His heavy-shotted hammock-shroud
Drops in his vast and wandering grave. Ib.
He loves to make parade of pain. Canto 21.
I do but sing because I must,
And pipe but as the linnets sing. Ib.
The Shadow cloaked from head to foot,
Who keeps the keys of all the creeds. Canto 23.
And Thought leapt out to wed with Thought
Ere Thought could wed itself with Speech. Ib.
No lapse of moons can canker Love,
Whatever fickle tongues may say. Canto 26.
'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.† Canto 27.
Her eyes are homes of silent prayer. Canto 32.
Whose faith has centre everywhere,
Nor cares to fix itself to form. Canto 33.
Leave thou thy sister, when she prays,
Her early Heaven, her happy views;
Nor thou with shadowed hint confuse
A life that leads melodious days. Ib.
Half-dead to know that I shall die. Canto 35.
And doubtful joys the father move,
And tears are on the mother's face,
As parting with a long embrace
She enters other realms of love. Canto 40.
Short swallow-flights of song, that dip
Their wings in tears, and skim away. Canto 48.

Whose youth was full of foolish noise. Canto 53.
Hold thou the good: define it well:
For fear Divine Philosophy
Should push beyond her mark and be Procureess to the Lords of Hell. Ib.
Oh yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill. Canto 54.
That not a worm is cloven in vain,
That not a moth with vain desire
Is shrivelled in a fruitless fire,
Or but subserves another's gain. Ib.
But what am I?
An infant crying in the night:
An infant crying for the light:
And with no language but a cry. Ib.
So careful of the type she seems,
So careless of the single life. Canto 55.
Upon the great world's altar stairs
That slope through darkness up to God. Ib.
Who battled for the True, the Just. Canto 56.
Peace; come away: the song of woe
Is after all an earthly song:
Peace; come away: we do him wrong
To sing so wildly: let us go. Canto 57.
The passing of the sweetest soul
That ever looked with human eyes. Ib.
As some divinely-gifted man,
Whose life in low estate began,
And on a simple village green;
Who breaks his birth's invidious bar,
And grasps the skirts of happy chance,
And breasts the blows of circumstance,
And grapples with his evil star:
Who makes by force his merit known,
And lives to clutch the golden keys,
To mould a mighty state's decrees,
And shape the whisper of the throne. Canto 61.
The pillar of a people's hope,
The centre of a world's desire;
Yet feels, as in a pensive dream,
When all his active powers are still,
A distant dearness in the hill,
A secret sweetness in the stream. Ib.
Sleep, kinsman thou to death and trance
And madness, thou hast forged at last
A night-long Present of the Past. Canto 71.
So many worlds, so much to do,
So little done, such things to be. Canto 70.
And round thee with the breeze of song
To stir a little dust of praise. Canto 75.
I count it crime

363a

A thousand wants
Gnarr at the heels of men. Canto 98.
Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky. Canto 106.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow :
The year is going, let him go ;
Ring out the false, ring in the true. Ib.

Ring out the feud of rich and poor. Ib.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife ;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws. Ib.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
The faithless coldness of the times. Ib.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite ;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good. Ib.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease ;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold ;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace. Ib.

Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be. Ib.

'Tis held that sorrow makes us wise.
Canto 108.

Impassioned logic, which outran
The hearer in its fiery course. Canto 109.

By blood a king, at heart a clown. Canto 111.

And thus he bore without abuse
The grand old name of gentleman,
Defamed by every charlatan,
And soiled with all ignoble use. Ib.

But trust that those we call the dead
Are breathers of an ampler day
For ever nobler ends. Canto 118.

O earth, what changes hast thou seen !
Canto 123.

Wearing all that weight
Of learning lightly like a flower.*
Conclusion. St. 10.

The foaming grape of eastern France. St. 20.

One God, one law, one element,
And one far-off divine event,
To which the whole creation moves. St. 36.

What profits now to understand
The merits of a spotless shirt—
A dapper boot—a little hand—
If half the little soul is dirt.

Lines in "Punch" : Feb. 28, 1846.
"The New Timon and the Poets."

The noblest answer, unto such,
Is kindly silence when they bawl.†
March 7, 1846. "The After Thought."

* See A Dedication : "Wearing his wisdom lightly"
(p. 362a).

† Altered in the published poems to : "Is perfect stillness when they brawl."

363b

Why do they prate of the blessings of Peace ?
we have made them a curse,
Pickpockets, each hand lusting for all that is not its own ;
And lust of gain, in the spirit of Cain, is it better or worse
Than the heart of the citizen hissing in war on his own hearthstone ?

Maud (1855). Part 1, 1, 6.

Below me, there is the village, and looks how quiet and small !
And yet bubbles o'er like a city, with gossip, scandal, and spite. Part 1, 4, 2.

We are puppets, Man in his pride, and Beauty fair in her flower ;

Do we move ourselves, or are moved by an unseen hand at a game
That pushes us off from the board, and others ever succeed ?

Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here
for an hour ;

We whisper, and hint, and chuckle, and grin
at a brother's shame ;
However we brave it out, we men are a little breed. Part 1, 4, 5.

The passionate heart of the poet is whirled into folly and vice. Part 1, 4, 7.

That jewelled mass of millinery,
That oiled and curled Assyrian Bull.
Part 1, 6, 6.

Did I hear it half in a doze
Long since, I know not where ?
Did I dream it an hour ago,
When asleep in this armchair ?
Part 1, 7, 1.

The snowy-banded dilettante,
Delicate-handed priest intone. Part 1, 8.

Ah, God, for a man with heart, head, hand,
Like some of the simple great ones gone
For ever and ever by,
One still strong man in a blatant land,
Whatever they call him, what care I ?
Aristocrat, democrat, autocrat—one
Who can rule, and dare not lie.
And ah for a man to arise in me,
That the man I am may cease to be !
Part 1, 10, 5 and 6.

Scorned, to be scorned by one that I scorn,
Is that a matter to make me fret ?
Part 1, 13, 1.

Gorgonised me from head to foot
With a stony British stare. Part 1, 13, 2.

Roses are her cheeks,
And a rose her mouth. Part 1, 17.

Come into the garden, Maud,
For the black bat, night, hath flown.
Part 1, 1, 22.

The Christless code,
That must have life for a blow.
Part 2, 1, 1.

What is it ? a learned man
Could give it a clumsy name.
Let him name it who can,
The beauty would be the same. Part 2, 2, 2.

364a

Ah Christ, that it were possible
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be. Part 2, 4, 3.
But the churchmen fain would kill their church,
As the churches have killed their Christ.
Part 2, 5, 2.

And indeed he seems to me
Scarce other than my own ideal knight,
"Who revered his conscience as his king;
Whose glory was, redressing human wrong;
Who spake no slander, no, nor listened to it."
*Idylls of the King (pub. 1859).
Dedication (1861), l. 7.*

The shadow of his loss drew like eclipse, Darkening the world. We have lost him; he is gone:
We know him now: all narrow jealousies
Are silent; and we see him as he moved,
How modest, kindly, all-accomplished, wise,
With what sublime repression of himself,
And in what limits, and how tenderly;
Not swaying to this faction or to that;
Not making his high place the lawless perch
Of winged ambitions, nor a vantage-ground
For pleasure; but through all this tract of years
Wearing the white flower of a blameless life,
Before a thousand peering littlenesses,
In that fierce light which beats upon a throne,
And blackens every blot. l. 13.

Man's word is God in man:
Let chance what will, I trust thee to the death.

To love one maiden only, cleave to her,
And worship her by years of noble deeds,
Until they won her. l. 471.

I am thine husband—not a smaller soul,
Nor Lancelot, nor another. l. 562.

He never mocks,
For mockery is the fume of little hearts.
l. 626.

I thought I could not breathe in that fine air,
That pure severity of perfect light—
I wanted warmth and colour, which I found In Lancelot. Ib.

Ah, my God,
What might I not have made of thy fair world,
Had I but loved thy highest creature here ?
It was my duty to have loved the highest :
It surely was my profit had I known :
It would have been my pleasure had I seen.
We needs must love the highest when we see it,
Not Lancelot, nor another. l. 648.

Fifty years of ever-brightening Science !
Fifty years of ever-widening Empire !
On the Jubilee of Queen Victoria (1887).

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me !
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea,

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark !
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark ;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place

The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face,
When I have crost the bar. Ib.

Troops he to Oxford sent, well knowing why,—

That learned body wanted loyalty;

But books to Cambridge sent, as well discerning

That that right loyal body wanted learning."

Another version (which has been attributed to Thos.

Warton, sen., Professor of Poetry at Oxford) runs:

"Our royal master saw with heedful eyes

The state of his two universities;

To one he sends a regiment, for why?

That learned body wanted loyalty.

To the other books he gave, as well discerning,

How much that loyal body wanted learning."

Letter. To Joseph Benson, Oct. 5, 1770.

"Cleanliness is indeed next to godliness."

Sermon 93. On Dress. (Not apparently originated by John Wesley, as he enclosed the words in inverted commas.)

That execrable sum of all villainies commonly called A Slave Trade.

Journal. Feb. 12, 1792.

* The first two lines were altered in the hymns at the end of Tate and Brady's New Version of the Psalms to:

"Hark the herald angels sing,
Glory to the new-born king."

O what a monument of glorious worth,
When in a new edition he comes forth,
Without erratas may we think he'll be,
In leaves and covers of eternity! †

Lines on John Cotton (1652).

WORDSWORTH, William (1770-1850)

Kind Nature's charities his steps attend;
In every babbling brook he finds a friend;
While chastening thoughts, of sweetest use, bestowed

By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.

Poems written in Youth.

Descriptive Sketches (1795).

Still have I found, where Tyranny prevails,
That virtue languishes, and pleasure fails. Ib.

Know that pride,
Howe'er disguised in its own majesty,
Is littleness. Ib. No. 7 (1795).

The man whose eye
Is ever on himself doth look on one,
The least of Nature's works. Ib.

* An early instance, if not the origin, of the term
"pot-boiler."

No mate, no comrade Lucy knew ;
She dwelt on a wild moor—
The sweetest thing that ever grew
Beside a human door ! Lucy Gray (1799).

A simple child,
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What should it know of death ?
We are Seven (1796).

O dearest, dearest boy ! my heart
For better lore would seldom yearn,
Could I but teach the hundredth part
Of what from thee I learn.
Anecdote for Fathers (1798).

The dew was falling fast, the stars began to blink ;
I heard a voice ; it said, " Drink, pretty creature, drink ! " The Pet Lamb (1800).

God for his service needeth not proud work of human skill ;
They please Him best who labour most in peace to do His will. The Poet's Dream.

Sweet childish days, that were as long
As twenty days are now. To a Butterfly.

A noticeable man with large grey eyes.
Stanzas written in Thomson's
" Castle of Indolence. "

Glasses he had, that little things display,
The beetle panoplied in gems and gold,
A mailed angel on a battle day ;
The mysteries that cups of flowers infold,
And all the gorgeous sights which fairies do behold. Ib.

A maid whom there were none to praise,
And very few to love.
She dwelt among the untrodden ways.

A violet, by a mossy stone
Half hidden from the eye !
Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky. Ib.

But she is in her grave, and oh !
The difference to me ! Ib.

I travelled among unknown men
In lands beyond the sea ;
Nor, England ! did I know till then
What love I bore to thee.
I travelled among unknown men (1799).

Minds that have nothing to confer
Find little to perceive. Yes ! thou art fair.

A Briton, even in love, should be
A subject, not a slave !
Ere with cold beads of midnight dew.

Let other bards of angels sing,
Bright suns without a spot :
But thou art no such perfect thing :
Rejoice that thou art not ! To — (1824).

Years to a mother bring distress,
But do not make her love the less.
The Affliction of Margaret.

And as her mind grew worse and worse,
Her body it grew better. The Idiot Boy.

392b

I was yet a boy
Careless of books, yet having felt the power
Of nature. Michael.

A pleasurable feeling of blind love,
The pleasure which there is in life itself. Ib.

Feelings and emanations—things which were Light to the sun, and music to the wind. Ib.

Thou art indeed by many a claim
The poet's darling. To the Daisy (1802).

The homely sympathy that heeds
The common life, our nature breeds ;
A wisdom fitted to the needs
Of hearts at leisure. Ib.

An instinct call it, a blind sense ;
A happy, genial influence,
Coming one knows not how, nor whence,
Nor whither going. Ib.

My heart leaps up when I behold
A rainbow in the sky.
My Heart Leaps up (1804).

The Child is father of the Man ;*
And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each by natural piety. Ib.

Thou unassuming common-place
Of Nature, with that homely face,
And yet with something of a grace.
Which Love makes for thee.
To the same Flower (1805).

There's a flower that shall be mine,
'Tis the little celandine.
To the Small Celandine (1803).

Sighed to think I read a book,
Only read, perhaps, by me.
To the same Flower (1803).

Disasters, do the best we can,
Will reach both great and small ;
And he is oft the wisest man
Who is not wise at all.
The Oak and the Broom (1800).

Fancy, who leads the pastimes of the glad,
Full oft is pleased a wayward dart to throw,
Sending sad shadows after things not sad,
Peopling the harmless fields with signs of woe.
A Morning Exercise (1828).

But he is risen, a later star of dawn,
Glittering and twinkling near yon rosy cloud ;
Bright gem, instinct with music, vocal spark ;
The happiest bird that sprang out of the ark !
Ib. (The lark.)

The bird whom man loves best,
The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
Our little English robin.
The Redbreast Chasing the Butterfly (1806).

Art thou the Peter of Norway Boors ?
Their Thomas in Finland,
And Russia far inland ?
The bird, whom, by some name or other,
All men who know thee call their brother. Ib.

* See Milton (p. 223a) : " The childhood shows the man."

WORDSWORTH

393a

Offt on the dappled turf at ease
I sit, and play with similes.

Ib.

O blithe new-comer ! I have heard,
I hear thee and rejoice.
O Cuckoo ! Shall I call thee bird,
Or but a wandering voice ? To the Cuckoo.

There is a spirit in the woods. Nutting.

One of those heavenly days that cannot die.
Ib.

She was a phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight.
She was a phantom of delight (1804).
A dancing shape, an image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and waylay. Ib.

A spirit, yet a woman too !
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin liberty ;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet ;
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food. Ib.

A perfect woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort, and command. Ib.

Then nature said, " A lovelier flower
On earth was never sown ;
This child I to myself will take,
She shall be mine, and I will make
A lady of my own." Three years she grew.

She seemed a thing that could not feel
The touch of earthly years.
A slumber did my spirit seal (1799).

And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.
I wandered lonely as a cloud.

That inward eye,
Which is the bliss of solitude. Ib.

The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising ;
There are forty feeding like one !
Written in March (1801).

A youth to whom was given
So much of earth, so much of heaven,
And such impetuous blood. Ruth (1799).

Vain is the glory of the sky,
The beauty vain of field and grove,
Unless, while with admiring eye
We gaze, we also learn to love.
Glad sight wherever new with old.

And a single small cottage, a nest like a dove's,
The only one dwelling on earth that she loves.
Reverie of Poor Susan (1797).

As high as we have mounted in delight,
In our dejection do we sink as low.
Resolution and Independence (1807).

But how can he expect that others should Build for him, sow for him, and at his call Love him, who for himself will take no heed at all ? Ib.

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous boy,
The sleepless soul, that perished in his pride ;

393b

Of him who walked in glory and in joy,
Following his plough, along the mountain side. Ib.

We poets in our youth begin in gladness ;
But thereof comes in the end despondency and madness. Ib.

The oldest man he seemed that ever wore grey hairs. Ib.

Choice words, and measured phrase, above
the reach
Of ordinary men. A stately speech ;
Such as grave livers do in Scotland use. Ib.

The moving accident is not my trade ;
To freeze the blood I have no ready arts ;
'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade,
To pipe a simple song for thinking hearts.
Hart-leap Well (1800). Part 2 (1800).

" A jolly place," said he, " in times of old,
But something ails it now ; the spot is cursed." Ib.

You might as well
Hunt half a day for a forgotten dream. Ib.

Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels. Ib.

Love had he found in huts where poor men lie ;

His daily teachers had been woods and rills ;
The silence that is in the starry sky,
The sleep that is among the lonely hills.
Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle (1807).

Ethereal minstrel ! pilgrim of the sky !
To a Skylark (1825).

Type of the wise who soar, but never roam ;
True to the kindred points of heaven and home ! Ib.

Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
But to be young was very heaven !
French Revolution (1805).

Not in Utopia, subterranean fields,
Or some secreted island, Heaven knows
where !

But in the very world, which is the world
Of all of us,—the place where in the end
We find our happiness, or not at all ! Ib.

That best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love.
Lines above Tintern Abbey (July 13, 1798).

We are laid asleep
In body, and become a living soul :
While with an eye made quiet by the power
Of harmony, and the deep power of joy,
We see into the life of things. Ib.

The fretful stir
Unprofitable, and the fever of the world. Ib.

The sounding cataract
Haunted me like a passion : the tall rock,
The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
Their colours and their forms, were then to
me

An appetite ; a feeling and a love. Ib.

394^a

I have learned
To look on nature, not as in the hour
Of thoughtless youth; but hearing oftentimes

The still, sad music of humanity,
Nor harsh nor grating, though of ample power
To chasten and subdue. Ib.

A lover of the meadows and the woods
And mountains; and of all that we behold
From this green earth. Ib.

Nature never did betray
The heart that loved her. Ib.

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life. Ib.

There's something in a flying horse,
There's something in a huge balloon.

Peter Bell (1819). Prologue.

Back to earth, the dear green earth. Ib.

Look, where clothed in brightest green
Is a sweet isle, of isles the queen;
Ye fairies, from all evil keep her! Ib.

The common growth of Mother Earth
Suffices me—her tears, her mirth,
Her humblest mirth and tears. Ib.

Full twenty times was Peter feared,
For once that Peter was respected. Part 1.

He travelled here, he travelled there;
But not the value of a hair
Was head or heart the better. Ib.

A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more. Ib.

In vain through water, earth, and air,
The soul of happy sound was spread. Ib.

The soft blue sky did never melt
Into his heart,—he never felt
The witchery of the soft blue sky! Ib.

But chancing to espy a path
That promised to cut short the way,
As many a wiser man hath done,
He left a trusty guide for one
That might his steps betray. Ib.

He gave a groan, and then another,
Of that which went before the brother,
And then he gave a third. Ib.

He looks, he cannot choose but look. Ib.

I am not one who oft or much delight
To season my fireside with personal talk.

Personal Talk (c. 1800). No. 1.

Maidens withering on the stalk. Ib.

Dreams, books, are each a world; and books,
we know,

Are a substantial world, both pure and good. No. 3.

The gentle lady married to the Moor;
And Heavenly Una with her milk-white lamb. Ib.

The poets, who on earth have made us heirs
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays. Ib., No. 4.

The weight of too much liberty.
Miscellaneous Sonnets. Part 1, 1.

The very flowers are sacred to the poor.
Ib., Part 1, 2.

The immortal spirit of one happy day.
Part 1, 6.

I surely not a man ungently made. Pt. 1, 13.

Still last to come where thou art wanted most.
(Sleep.) Ib.

'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true love,
That kills the soul: love betters what is best,
Even here below, but more in heaven above.
Pt. 1, 25. (From Michael Angelo.)

The holy time is quiet as a nun,
Breathless with adoration. Part 1, 30.

The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers.
Part 1, 33.

Great God! I'd rather be
A pagan suckled in a creed outworn,
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn! Ib.

To the solid ground
Of nature trusts the mind that builds for aye.
Part 1, 34.

Scorn not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,
Mindless of its just honours; with this key Shakespeare unlocked his heart. Ib. Pt. 2, 1.

High is our calling, friend! Creative Art
Demands the service of a mind and heart.
Ib. Part 2, 3. (To B. R. Haydon.)

Yet a rich guerdon waits on minds that dare,
If aught be in them of immortal seed.
Ib. Part 2, 4.

A cheerful life is what the Muses love,
A soaring spirit is their prime delight. Ib.
Soft is the music that would charm for ever;
The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly.
Ib., Part 2, 9.

But we felt the while
We should forget them; they are of the sky,
And from our earthly memory fade away.
(Sunsets.) Ib., Part 2, 11.

The sure relief of prayer. Part 2, 15.
Chaste Snowdrop, venturous harbinger of Spring,
And pensive monitor of fleeting years.
Ib., Part 2, 16.

With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st
the sky,
"How silently and with how wan a face!"
Part 2, 23.

Unhappy nuns, whose common breath's a sigh
Which they would stifle. Ib.

395^a

Earth has not anything to show more fair :
Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty.

Part 2, 36. (Composed upon Westminster Bridge, Sept. 3, 1802.)

Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep !
The river glideth at his own sweet will ;
Dear God ! the very houses seem asleep ;
And all that mighty heart is lying still ! Ib.

Yet, O ye spires of Oxford ! domes and towers !

Gardens, and groves ! your presence over-powers

The soberness of reason. *Part 3, 2.
Oxford. May 30, 1820.*

How Providence educeth, from the spring
Of lawless will, unlooked-for streams of good,
Which neither force shall check nor time abate.

Part 3, 4. (On Henry VIII.)

Its twin notes inseparably paired.
Part 3, 14. (To the Cuckoo.)

As pensive evening deepens into night.
Part 3, 17. To —, in her 70th year.

Miserrimus ! and neither name nor date,
Prayer, text, or symbol, graven upon the stone.
Part 3, 19.

Though I beheld at first with blank surprise
This Work, I now have gazed on it so long,
I see its truth with unreluctant eyes.
Part 3, 33. (On a Portrait.)

If in this book Fancy and Truth agree,
If simple Nature trained by careful Art
Through it have won a passage to thy heart,
Grant me thy love,—I crave no other fee.
Part 3, 39. Valeictory Sonnet, 1808.

True it is Nature hides
Her treasures less and less. Man now presides
In power, where once he trembled in his weakness ;
Science advances with gigantic strides ;
But are we aught enriched in love and meekness ? Part 3, 41 (1838).

All seem to feel the spirit of the place,
And by the general reverence God is praised ;
Profane Despoilers, stand ye not reproved,
While thus these simple-hearted men are moved ?
*Part 3, 48. At Furness Abbey (in reference to the railway in construction near by,
June 21, 1845).*

I mourned with thousands, but as one
More deeply grieved, for he was gone
Whose light I hailed when first it shone,
And showed my youth
How Verse may build a princely throne
On humble truth.

The good old rule
Sufficeth them, the simple plan,
That they should take who have the power,
And they should keep who can. Ib.

The Eagle he was lord above,
And Rob was lord below. Ib.

Of old things all are over old,
Of good things none are good enough ;
We'll show that we can help to frame
A world of other stuff. Ib.

For thou wert still the poor man's stay,
The poor man's heart, the poor man's hand ;
And all the oppressed, who wanted strength,
Had thine at their command. *Ib.

Ib.

The freshness, the eternal youth,
Of admiration sprung from truth;
From beauty infinitely growing
Upon a mind with love o'erflowing.

Ib., No. 3.

But thou, that didst appear so fair
To fond imagination,
Dost rival in the light of day
Her delicate creation:
Meek loveliness is round thee spread,
A softness still and holy;
The grace of forest charms decayed,
And pastoral melancholy.

Ib., No. 4. Yarrow Visited, Sept., 1814.

She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me.

There is an eminence (1800).

He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel
In worlds whose course is equable and pure;
No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
The past unsighed for, and the future sure.

Laodamia (1814). St. 16.

Of all that is most beauteous—imaged there
In happier beauty; more pellucid streams,
An ampler ether, a diviner air,
And fields invested with purpureal gleams.

Ib., st. 17.

Yet tears to human suffering are due;
And mortal hopes defeated and o'erthrown
Are mourned by man, and not by man alone.

Ib., st. 27.

Be thankful, even though tired and faint,
For the rich bounties of constraint.

The Pass of Kirkstone (1817). St. 3.

But thou, O Goddess!* in thy favourite Isle (Freedom's impregnable redoubt,
The wide earth's storehouse, fenced about
With breakers roaring to the gales
That stretch a thousand thousand sails)
Quickened the slothful and exalt the vile!
Thy impulse is the life of Fame;
Glad Hope would almost cease to be,
If torn from thy society.

To Enterprise (c. 1817).

Thou hast left behind
Powers that will work for thee, air, earth,
and skies:
There's not a breathing of the common wind
That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;
Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable mind.
Part 1, No. 8. To Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Thou art free,
My country! and 'tis joy enough and pride
For one hour's perfect bliss, to tread the grass
Of England once again.

The wealthiest man among us is the best.
Pt. 1, No. 13. Written in London, Sept., 1802.

Plain living and high thinking are no more;
The homely beauty of the good old cause
Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence,
And pure religion breathing household laws. Ib.

Milton! thou shouldst be living at this hour:
England hath need of thee: she is a fen
Of stagnant waters.
Part 1, No. 14. London, 1802.

Thy soul was like a star, and dwelt apart. Ib.
So didst thou travel on a common way
In cheerful godliness. Ib.

397a

Perpetual emptiness! unceasing change!
No single volume paramount, no code;
No master spirit, no determined road:
But equally a want of books and men.

Part 1, No. 15.

We must be free or die, who speak the tongue
That Shakespeare spake; the faith and morals hold

Which Milton held. In everything we are sprung
Of Earth's first blood, have titles manifold.

That every gift of noble origin
Is breathed upon by hope's perpetual breath;
That virtue and the faculties within
Are vital,—and that riches are akin
To fear, to change, to cowardice and death!

Ib., Part 1, No. 20.

The great events with which old story rings
Seem vain and hollow. I find nothing great;
Nothing is left which I can venerate;
So that almost a doubt within me springs
Of Providence, such emptiness at length
Seems at the heart of all things.

Ib., Part 1, No. 22.

We all are with you now from shore to shore.

Ib., Part 1, No. 23.

We shall exult if they who rule the land
Be men who hold its many blessings dear,
Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band
Who are to judge of danger which they fear,

In what alone is ours, the living Now.

Ib., No. 10.

* Suppressed by Wordsworth in later editions, in which the lines appear:

"But Man is thy most awful instrument,

In working out a pure intent;

Thou cloth'st the wicked in their dazzling mail,

And for thy righteous purpose they prevail."

O weakness of the Great! O folly of the Wise!
Where now the haughty Empire that was spread

With such fond hope? Her very speech is dead. Ib., No. 27. Pillar of Trajan.

Translation of St. Bernard's (Latin) sentence
"usually inscribed in some conspicuous part of the Cistercian houses."

"As thou these ashes, little Brook, wilt bear
Into the Avon, Avon to the tide
Of Severn, Severn to the narrow seas,
Into main ocean they, this deed accurst
An emblem yields to friends and enemies,
How the bold teacher's doctrine, sanctified
By truth, shall spread, throughout the world dispersed."† Part 2, No. 17. Wicliffe.

Alas, of fearful things
'Tis the most fearful when the people's eye
Abuse hath cleared from vain imaginings;
And taught the general voice to prophesy
Of Justice armed, and Pride to be laid low.

That they were born for immortality. Ib.

They dreamt not of a perishable home
Who thus could build. Part 3, No. 45.

A warrior, with his shield of pride
Cleaving humbly to his side,
And hands in resignation pressed,
Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast.

The White Doe of Rylstone (1807). Canto 1.

A soul, by force of sorrows high
Uplifted to the purest sky
Of undisturbed humanity !

Ib., Canto 2.

In deep and awful channel runs
This sympathy of Sire and Sons.

Ib.

The monumental pomp of age
Was with this goodly Personage ;
A stature undepressed in size,
Unbent, which rather seemed to rise,
In open victory, o'er the weight
Of seventy years, to loftier height.

Ib., Canto 3.

On him and on his high endeavour
The light of praise shall shine for ever.

Ib., Canto 5.

Who swerves from innocence, who makes divorce

Of that serene companion—a good name,
Recovers not his loss ; but walks with shame,
With doubt, with fear, and haply with remorse.

The River Duddon (pub. 1820), 30.

Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower,

We feel that we are greater than we know.

Ib., 34. After-Thought.

Would that the little Flowers were born to live

Conscious of half the pleasure which they give ;

That to this mountain daisy's self were known
The beauty of its star-shaped shadow, thrown
On the smooth surface of this naked stone !

Sonnets and Stanzas.

Up ! up ! my friend, and quit your books ;
Or surely you'll grow double :

Up ! up ! my friend, and clear your looks ;
Why all this toil and trouble ?

The Tables Turned (1798). St. 1.

Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher. St. 4.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

St. 6.

Enough of science and of art ;
Close up these barren leaves ;
Come forth, and bring with you a heart
That watches and receives.

St. 8.

Who is the happy Warrior ? Who is he
That every man in arms should wish to be ?
It is the generous spirit, who, when brought
Among the tasks of real life, hath wrought
Upon the plan that pleased his childish
thought :

Whose high endeavours are an inward light
That makes the path before him always
bright :

Who with a natural instinct to discern What knowledge can perform, is diligent to learn.

Character of the Happy Warrior (1806).

Who, doomed to go in company with Pain,
And Fear, and Bloodshed, miserable train !
Turns his necessity to glorious gain. Ib.

More skilful in self-knowledge, even more pure

As tempted more ; more able to endure,
As more exposed to suffering and distress :
Thence also, more alive to tenderness. Ib.

And therefore does not stoop, nor lie in wait
For wealth, or honours, or for worldly state. Ib.

Who if he be called upon to face
Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined

Great issues, good or bad for human kind,
Is happy as a lover ; and attired
With sudden brightness, like a man inspired. Ib.

Thou, while thy babes around thee cling,
Shalt show us how divine a thing
A woman may be made.

To a Young Lady (1803).

But an old age, serene and bright,
And lovely as a Lapland night,
Shall lead thee to thy grave. Ib.

In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

Lines Written in Early Spring (1798).

And much it grieved my heart to think
What man has made of man. Ib.

And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes. Ib.

O reader ! had you in your mind
Such stores as silent thought can bring,
O gentle reader ! you would find
A tale in every thing.

Simon Lee, the Old Huntsman (1798).

I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
With coldness still returning ;
Alas ! the gratitude of men
Hath oftener left me mourning. Ib.

One that would peep and botanize
Upon his mother's grave.

A Poet's Epitaph (1799). St. 5.

A reasoning, self-sufficing thing,
An intellectual All-in-all. St. 8

400a

He murmurs near the running brooks
A music sweeter than their own. St. 10.

He is retired as noontide dew,
Or fountain in a noon-day grove ;
And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love. St. 11.

Impulses of deeper birth
Have come to him in solitude. St. 12.

The harvest of a quiet eye
That broods and sleeps on his own heart. St. 13.

Contented if he might enjoy
The things which others understand. St. 14.

My eyes are dim with childish tears,
My heart is idly stirred,
For the same sound is in my ears
Which in those days I heard.

The Fountain (1799).

The wiser mind
Mourns less for what age takes away
Than what it leaves behind. Ib.

But we are pressed by heavy laws,
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because
We have been glad of yore. Ib.

Sad fancies do we then affect,
In luxury of disrespect
To our own prodigal excess
Of too familiar happiness.

Ode to Lycoris (1817).

Passing sweet
Are the domains of tender memory.
To the Same (1817.)

Shipwrecked, kindles on the coast
False fires, that others may be lost.
To the Lady Fleming (1823).

But shapes that come not at an earthly call
Will not depart when mortal voices bid.
Dion (1816). St. 5.

Him only pleasure leads, and peace attends,
Him, only him, the shield of Jove defends,
Whose means are fair and spotless as his ends.
Ib., st. 6.

Stern daughter of the voice of God !
O Duty ! if that name thou love,
Who art a light to guide, a rod
To check the erring and reprove.

Ode to Duty (1805).

Me this unchartered freedom tires :
I feel the weight of chance-desires ;
My hopes no more must change their name,
I long for a repose that ever is the same. Ib.

Give unto me, made lowly wise,
The spirit of self-sacrifice ;
The confidence of reason give ;
And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live ! Ib.

Hearts which lapse of years,
And that half-wisdom half-experience gives,
Make slow to feel.

The Old Cumberland Beggar (1798).

400b

That sweet taste of pleasure unpursued. Ib.

Men who can hear the decalogue, and feel
No self-reproach. Ib.

As in the eye of nature he has lived,
So in the eye of nature let him die ! Ib.

One by whom
All effort seems forgotten ; one to whom Long patience hath such mild composure given,
That patience now doth seem a thing of which
He hath no need.

Animal Tranquillity and Decay (1798).

A power is passing from the earth.
Lines on the expected Dissolution of Mr. Fox (1806).

But when the great and good depart,
What is it more than this—
That Man, who is from God sent forth,
Doth yet again to God return ?—
Such ebb and flow must ever be,
Then wherefore should we mourn ? Ib.

The light that never was on sea or land,
The consecration, and the poet's dream.
Elegiac Stanzas (1805). Suggested by a Picture of Peele Castle in a Storm.

No motion but the moving tide, a breeze,
Or merely silent nature's breathing life. Ib.
A deep distress hath humanized my soul. Ib.

Not for a moment could I now behold
A smiling sea, and be what I have been :
The feeling of my loss will ne'er be old ;
This, which I know, I speak with mind serene. Ib.

Not without hope we suffer and we mourn. Ib.

But hushed be every thought that springs
From out the bitterness of things.
Elegiac Stanzas (1824).

Whose life was like the violet sweet,
As climbing jasmine pure. Ib.

The glory and the freshness of a dream.
*Ode. Intimations of Immortality (1803-6).
Canto 1.*

It is not now as it hath been of yore ;—
Turn wheresoe'er I may,
By night or day,
The things which I have seen I now can see no more. Ib.

The rainbow comes and goes,
And lovely is the rose. Canto 2.

Waters on a starry night
Are beautiful and fair ;
The sunshine is a glorious birth :
But yet I know, where'er I go,
That there hath passed away a glory from the earth. Ib.

Whither is fled the visionary gleam ?
Where is it now, the glory and the dream ?
Canto 4.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting :
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar :
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home :
Heaven lies about us in our infancy !
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
Upon the growing boy. Canto 5.

At length the man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day. Ib.

As if his whole vocation
Were endless imitation. Canto 7.

O joy ! that in our embers
Is something that doth live,
That nature yet remembers
What was so fugitive !
The thought of our past years in me doth breed
Perpetual benediction. Canto 9.

But for those obstinate questionings
Of sense and outward things,
Fallings from us, vanishings ;
Blank misgivings of a creature
Moving about in worlds not realised. Ib.

Truths that wake,
To perish never. Ib.

Though inland far we be,
Our souls have sight of that immortal sea
Which brought us hither. Ib.

In years that bring the philosophic mind. Canto 10.

The innocent brightness of a new-born Day
Is lovely yet ;
The clouds that gather round the setting sun
Do take a sober colouring from an eye
That hath kept watch o'er man's mortality. Canto 11.

To me the meanest flower that blows can give Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears. Ib.

Abstrusest matter, reasonings of the mind
Turned inward.

The Excursion (1814). Book 1.

Men endowed with highest gifts,
The vision and the faculty divine ;
Yet wanting the accomplishment of verse. Ib.

The keen, the wholesome air of poverty. Ib.

The imperfect offices of prayer and praise. Ib.

That mighty orb of song
The divine Milton. Ib.

Surely never did there live on earth
A man of kindlier nature. Ib.

The good die first,
And they whose hearts are dry as summer dust
Burn to the socket.* Ib.

* The body is the socket of the soul.—Given by Ray as a proverb.—Cf. also lines "On the death of the late Countess of Pembroke" (Tottel's Collection, 1557) :

"Therefore a heaven's gift she was,
Because the best are soonest hence bereft."

This dull product of a scoffer's pen. Bk. 2.

Fabric it seemed of diamond and of gold,
With alabaster domes, and silver spires,
And blazing terrace upon terrace, high
Uplifted ; here, serene pavilions bright
In avenues disposed : there towers begirt
With battlements that on their restless fronts Bore stars. Ib.

Methinks

Wisdom is oft-times nearer when we stoop
Than when we soar. Book 3.

Here are we, in a bright and breathing world :
Our origin, what matters it ? Ib.

Compass'd round by pleasure, sigh'd
For independent happiness. Ib.

Yet would I not be of such wintry bareness
But that some leaf of your regard should hang Upon my naked branches. Ib.

The intellectual power, through words and things,
Went sounding on, a dim and perilous way ! * Ib.

Society became my glittering bride,
And airy hopes my children. Ib.

'Tis a thing impossible, to frame
Conceptions equal to the soul's desires. Bk. 4.

Conscience revered and obeyed
As God's most intimate presence in the soul. Ib.

The vacillating, inconsistent good. Ib.

There is a luxury in self-dispraise. Ib.

You have seen,
Have acted, suffered, travelled far, observed
With no incurious eye ; and books are yours,
Within whose silent chambers treasure lies
Preserved from age to age. Ib.

We live by admiration, hope, and love ;
And even as these are well and wisely fixed,
In dignity of being we ascend. Ib.

Stately Edinburgh throned on crags. Ib.

A curious child, who dwelt upon a tract
Of inland ground, applying to his ear
The convolutions of a smooth-lipp'd shell ;
To which, in silence hushed, his very soul
Listened intently. From within were heard Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed Mysterious union with its native sea. Ib.

One in whom persuasion and belief
Had ripened into faith, and faith become A passionate intuition. Ib.

To tired limbs and over-busy thoughts
Inviting sleep and soft forgetfulness. Ib.

If to be weak is to be wretched—miserable,
As the lost angel by a human voice
Hath mournfully pronounced.† Book 5.

far. Ib.

They whom death has hidden from our sight
Are worthiest of the mind's regard. Ib.

Life, I repeat, is energy of love,
Divine or human. Ib.

Hail to the crown by Freedom shaped—to gird
An English sovereign's brow! and to the throne

Whereon he sits! whose deep foundations lie
In veneration and the people's love.* Book 6.

Memories, images, and precious thoughts
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed. Ib.

Wisdom married to immortal verse.‡ Ib.

A man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
And confident to-morrows. Ib.

A man of hope and forward-looking mind. Ib.

We see by the glad light
And breathe the sweet air of futurity;
And so we live, or else we have no life. Bk. 9.

A clear sonorous voice, inaudible
To the vast multitude. Ib.

The primal duties shine aloft like stars;
The charities that soothe, and heal, and bless,
Are scattered at the feet of man, like flowers. Ib.

There's not a nook within this solemn pass,
But were an apt confessional.

The Daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the sun. Ib.

402b

Myriads of daisies have shone forth in flower
Near the lark's nest, and in their natural hour
Have passed away, less happy than the one That by the unwilling ploughshare died to prove
The tender charm of Poetry and Love.

*Poems suggested during a Tour (1833).
No. 37.*

Motions and Means, on land and sea at war
With old poetic feeling, not for this Shall ye, by Poets even, be judged amiss;
Nor shall your presence, howsoever it mar
The loveliness of Nature, prove a bar
To the Mind's gaining that prophetic sense
Of future change, that point of vision, whence
May be discovered what in soul ye are.

Of an eye where feeling plays,
In ten thousand dewy rays;
A face o'er which a thousand shadows go.
The Triad (1828).

Hope rules a land for ever green:
All powers that serve the bright-eyed Queen
Are confident and gay;
Clouds at her bidding disappear;
Points she to aught?—the bliss draws near,
And Fancy smooths the way.
The Wishing Gate (1828). St. 1.

Romantic Ireland's dead and gone.

Responsibilities (1914).

But I, being poor, have only my dreams.
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly, because you tread on my dreams.

*Wind among the Reeds.YOUNG, Arthur (1741–1820)

The magic of property turns sand into gold.

*Travels in France (1792).YOUNG, Rev. Edward, LL.D. (1683–1765)

Fond man! the vision of a moment made!
Dream of a dream, and shadow of a shade!

Paraphrase of Book of Job. l. 187.

Others are fond of Fame, but Fame of you.

Love of Fame (1725). Sat. 1.

When the Law shows her teeth, but dares not bite. Ib.

The love of praise, howe'er concealed by art,
Reigns, more or less, and glows, in every heart. Ib.

Some for renown, on scraps of learning dote,
And think they grow immortal as they quote. Ib.

They that on glorious ancestors enlarge,
Produce their debt, instead of their discharge. Ib.

The man who builds and wants wherewith to pay
Provides a home from which to run away. Ib.

The court affordsMuch food for satire;—it abounds in lords. *Ib.None think the great unhappy, but the great. *Ib.*Splendid poverty. *Ib.*For though he is a wit, he is no fool. Sat. 2.

As in smooth oil the razor best is whet,
So wit is by politeness sharpest set:
Their want of edge from their offence is seen;
Both pain us least when exquisitely keen. Ib.

Where Nature's end of language is declined,
And men talk only to conceal the mind. Ib.

But Fate ordains that dearest friends must part. Ib.

A fool at forty is a fool indeed.
And what so foolish as the chase of fame? Ib.

404b

O fruitful Britain! doubtless thou wast meant
A nurse of fools, to stock the continent. Sat. 3.

But who in heat of blood was ever wise? Ib.

What most we wish, with ease we fancy near. Ib.

For who does nothing with a better grace? Sat. 4.

Britannia's daughters, much more fair than nice. Sat. 5.

Man's rich with little, were his judgment true;
Nature is frugal, and her wants are few. Ib.

Good-breeding is the blossom of good-sense. Ib.

Whate'er she is, she'll not appear a saint. Sat. 6.

Some might suspect the nymph not over-good—
Nor would they be mistaken, if they should. Ib.

With skill she vibrates her eternal tongue,
For ever most divinely in the wrong. Ib.

Think nought a trifle, though it small appear;
Small sands the mountain, moments make the year,
And trifles life. Ib.

Women were made to give our eyes delight;
A female sloven is an odious sight. Ib.

When most the world applauds you, most beware;

'Tis often less a blessing, than a snare.
Distrust mankind; with your own heart confer;

And dread even there to find a flatterer. *Ib.*The happy only are the truly great. *Ib.*Scandal's the sweetener of a female feast. Ib.

One to destroy, is murder by the law;
And gibbets keep the lifted hand in awe;
To murder thousands, takes a specious name,
War's glorious art, and gives immortal fame. Sat. 7.

How commentators each dark passage shun,
And hold their farthing candle to the Sun. Ib.

Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy Sleep. Ib.

The Complaint; or, Night Thoughts on Life, Death, and Immortality (1742).
Night 1.

Night, sable goddess! from her ebon throne
In rayless majesty, now stretches forth
Her leaden sceptre o'er a slumbering world,
Silence, how dead! and darkness, how profound! Ib.

Creation sleeps. 'Tis, as the general pulse
Of life stood still, and Nature made a pause;
An awful pause! prophetic of her end. Ib.

The bell strikes one. We take no note of time
But from its loss. Ib.

How poor, how rich, how abject, how august,
How complicate, how wonderful, is man! Ib.

* See Rowe (p. 266b).

Oh what a miracle to man is man ! Ib.
 Thought, busy thought ! too busy for my
 peace ! Ib.
 The selfish heart deserves the pains it feels. Ib.
 How sad a sight is human happiness,
 To those whose thought can pierce beyond an hour ! Ib.
 Beware what Earth calls happiness ; beware
 All joys, but joys that never can expire. Ib.
 Be wise to-day ; 'tis madness to defer. Ib.
Procrastination is the thief of time. Ib.
 At thirty man suspects himself a fool ;
Knows it at forty, and reforms his plan ;
 At fifty chides his infamous delay,
 Pushes his prudent purpose to resolve ;
 In all the magnanimity of thought Resolves ; and re-resolves ; then dies the same. Ib.
 All men think all men mortal, but themselves. Ib.
 He mourns the dead who lives as they desire.
Night 2.
 And what its* worth, ask death-beds ; they can tell. Ib.
 Will toys amuse, when medicines cannot cure ?
Ib.
 Who does the best his circumstance allows,
 Does well, acts nobly ; angels could no more. Ib.
 Time wasted is existence, used is life. Ib.
 We push Time from us, and we wish him back. Ib.
 The spirit walks of every day deceased ;
 And smiles an angel, or a fury frowns. Ib.
 O ye Lorenzos of our age ! who deem
 One moment unamused, a misery. Ib.
 Each night we die,
 Each morn are born anew : each day, a life !
Ib.
 Time flies, Death urges, knells call, Heaven invites,
 Hell threatens. Ib.
 O for yesterdays to come ! Ib.
 Who venerate themselves, the world despise.
Ib.
 'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours ;
 And ask them what report they bore to Heaven. Ib.
 Whose yesterdays look backward with a smile.
Ib.
 Thoughts shut up want air,
 And spoil, like bales unopened to the Sun. Ib.
 All like the purchase ; few the price will pay ;
 And this makes figures such miracles below.
Ib.

But since friends grow not thick on every bough,
 Nor every friend unrotten at the core. Ib.
 A friend is worth all hazards we can run. Ib.
Friendship's the wine of life. Ib.
 How blessings brighten as they take their flight ! Ib.
 A death-bed's a detector of the heart ;
Here tired dissimulation drops her mask. Ib.
 From dreams, where thought in fancy's maze runs mad. Night 3.
 O ! lost to virtue, lost to manly thought,
 Lost to the noble sallies of the soul !
 Who think it solitude to be alone. Ib.
 Woes cluster ; Rare are solitary woes ;
 They love a train, they tread each other's heel.* Ib.
 Sweet harmonist ! and beautiful as sweet !
 And young as beautiful ! and soft as young !
 And gay as soft ! and innocent as gay ! Ib.
 Lovely in death the beauteous ruin lay ;
 And if in death still lovely, lovelier there,
 Far lovelier ! pity swells the tide of love. Ib.
 Scorn the proud man that is ashamed to weep.
Ib.
 And anguish, after rapture, how severe ! Ib.
 Lean not on Earth ; 'twill pierce thee to the heart ;
 A broken reed at best ; but oft, a spear ;
 On its sharp point peace bleeds, and hope expires. Ib.
 Denied the charity of dust, to spread O'er dust. Ib.
 Sacred is the dust
 Of this Heaven-laboured form, erect, divine !
 This Heaven-assumed majestic robe of Earth.
Ib.
 Heaven's Sovereign saves all beings, but himself,
 That hideous sight, a naked human heart. Ib.
 Each friend by fate snatched from us, is a plume
 Plucked from the wing of human vanity,
 Which makes us stoop from our aerial heights.
Ib.
 Shocking thought !
 So shocking, they who wish disown it too ;
 Disown from shame what they from folly crave. Ib.
 To climb life's worn, heavy wheel
 Which draws up nothing new.† Ib.
 A languid, leaden iteration reigns,
 And ever must, o'er those, whose joys are joys
 Of sight, smell, taste. Ib.

* Shakespeare : " One woe doth tread upon another's heel," etc. (p. 296b).

† See Cowper : The Garden, 189 (p. 100a).

* A moment.

406a

A truth it is, few doubt, but fewer trust,
 "He sins against this life who slights the next." Ib.

Death is the crown of life. Ib.

Life is most enjoyed,
 When courted least; most worth, when dis-esteemed. Ib.

Vain is the world, but only to the vain. Ib.

Death but entombs the body; life the soul. Ib.

Life is much flattered, Death is much traduced. Ib.

Death, of all pain the period, not of joy. Ib.

Were death denied, to live would not be life;
 Were death denied, e'en fools would wish to die. Night 4.

Death gives us more than was in Eden lost.
 This king of terrors is the prince of peace. Ib.

The knell, the shroud, the mattock, and the grave;

The deep damp vault, the darkness, and the worm;

These are the bugbears of a winter's eve,
 The terrors of the living, not the dead. Ib.

Man makes a death, which Nature never made;

Then on the point of his own fancy falls;
 And feels a thousand deaths in fearing one. Ib.

Wishing, of all employments, is the worst. Ib.

Wishing, that constant hectic of a fool. Ib.

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
 What though we wade in wealth, or soar in fame?

Earth's highest station ends in, "Here he lies,"

And "dust to dust" concludes her noblest song. Ib.

Man wants but little; nor that little long.* Ib.

A God all mercy is a God unjust. Ib.

Oh love of gold! thou meanest of amours!
Ib.

Could angels envy, they had envied here. Ib.

A truth so strange! 'twere bold to think it true;

If not far bolder still to disbelieve! Ib.

Angels are men of a superior kind;

Angels are men in lighter habit clad. Ib.

Eternity, too short to speak thy praise. Ib.

'Tis impious in a good man to be sad. Ib.

Read Nature; Nature is a friend to truth;
 Nature is Christian; preaches to mankind;

And bids dead matter aid us in our creed. Ib.

And then, exulting in their taper, cry,
 "Behold the Sun;" and, Indian-like, adore.† Ib.

406b

A Christian is the highest style of man. Ib.

How swift the shuttle flies that weaves thy shroud!

Where is the fable of thy former years? Ib.

Men may live fools, but fools they cannot die. Ib.

And thy dark pencil, midnight! darker still
 In melancholy dipt, embrowns the whole. Night 5.

By night an atheist half-believes a God. Ib.

What are we? How unequal! Now we soar,
 And now we sink. Ib.

Emerging from the shadows of the grave. Ib.

How wretched is the man who never mourned!
Ib.

"Oh let me die his death!" all Nature cries.
 "Then live his life."—All Nature falters there. Ib.

Less base the fear of death than fear of life.
 O Britain, infamous for suicide! Ib.

Our funeral tears from different causes rise.
Ib.

Early, bright, transient, chaste, as morning
 dew

She sparkled, was exhaled, and went to Heaven.* Ib.

We see Time's furrows on another's brow,
 And Death entrenched, preparing his assault.

How few themselves in that just mirror see!
Ib.

Like our shadows,
 Our wishes lengthen, as our sun declines. Ib.

And gently slope our passage to the grave.
Ib.

While man is growing life is in decrease;
 And cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.

Our birth is nothing but our death begun.† Ib.

Sinking in virtue, as you rise in fame. Ib.

That life is long which answers life's great end.
Ib.

The man of wisdom is the man of years. Ib.

Not simple conquest, triumph is his aim. Ib.

Sure as night follows day,
 Death treads in pleasure's footsteps round the world,

When pleasure treads the paths which reason
 shuns,

When, against reason, riot shuts the door. Ib.

Soon, not surprising, Death his visit paid:

Her thought went forth to meet him on his way. Ib.

Yet peace begins just where ambition ends.
Ib.

* See Goldsmith: "Man wants but little" (p. 149b).
 † See Crabbe: "And hold their glimmering tapers to the sun" (p. 103a).

* See Dryden (p. 125b).

† Cf. Manilius: "Nascentes morimur, finisque ab origine pendet."

Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow.* Ib.

Nothing is dead, but that which wished to die;
Nothing is dead, but wretchedness and pain.

Night 6.

Fear shakes the pencil; Fancy loves excess;
Dark Ignorance is lavish of her shades;
And these the formidable picture draw. Ib.

A genius bright, and base,
Of towering talents, and terrestrial aims. Ib.

Plain sense but rarely leads us far astray. Ib.

If wrong our hearts, our heads are right in vain. Ib.

Pygmies are pygmies still, though perched on Alps;

And pyramids are pyramids in vales.
Each man makes his own stature, builds himself:

Virtue alone outbuilds the pyramids:
Her monuments shall last, when Egypt's fall.
Ib.

Ambition! powerful source of good and ill!
Ib.

So great, so mean, is man! Ib.

A competence is vital to content.
Much wealth is corpulence, if not disease. Ib.

A competence is all we can enjoy. Ib.

Much learning shows how little mortals know.
Ib.

And all may do what has by man been done.
Ib.

Nature revolves, but man advances. Ib.

The world's a prophecy of worlds to come.
Night 7.

Of restless hope for ever on the wing. Ib.

Swift Instinct leaps; slow Reason feebly climbs. Ib.

The man that blushes is not quite a brute. Ib.

And, round us, Death's inexorable hand Draws the dark curtain close; undrawn no more. Ib.

Amazing pomp! redouble this amaze;
Ten thousand add; add twice ten thousand
more;

Then weigh the whole; one soul outweighs them all. Ib.

Patrons of pleasure, posting into pain! Ib.

Heaven wills our happiness, allows our doom.
Ib.

What ardently we wish, we soon believe. Ib.

We nothing know, but what is marvellous;
Yet what is marvellous, we can't believe. Ib.

Hope, of all passions, most befriends us here.
Ib.

* See Quarles (p. 261b):

"Death aims with fouler spite
At fairer marks."

Man of the world (for such wouldst thou be called);

And art thou proud of that inglorious style?
Night 8.

All the wild trash of sleep, without the rest.
Ib.

Confiding though confounded; hoping on,
Untaught by trial, unconvinced by proof,
And ever looking for the never seen. Ib.

And suffering more from folly, than from fate.
Ib.

One Cæsar lives; a thousand are forgot. Ib.

Too low they build who build beneath the stars. Ib.

Men, that would blush at being thought sincere.
Ib.

'Tis great, 'tis manly, to disdain disguise. Ib.

The world, well-known, will give our hearts to Heaven,

Or make us demons, long before we die. Ib.

That man greatly lives,
Whate'er his fate, or fame, who greatly dies.
Ib.

Th' Almighty, from his throne, on Earth surveys

Nought greater, than an honest, humble heart.
Ib.

Where boasting ends, there dignity begins.
Ib.

The blind Lorenzo's proud—of being proud;
And dreams himself ascending in his fall.
An eminence, though fancied, turns the brain.
Ib.

Truth never was indebted to a lie. Ib.

Wealth may seek us; but wisdom must be sought. Ib.

Prayer ardent opens Heaven. Ib.

A man triumphant is a monstrous sight;
A man dejected is a sight as mean. Ib.

A man of pleasure is a man of pains. Ib.

Imagination wanders far afield. Ib.

Thy fickle wish is ever on the wing. Ib.

Pleasure, we both agree, is man's chief good;
Or only contest what deserves the name. Ib.

To frown at pleasure, and to smile in pain. Ib.

Some angel guide my pencil, while I draw,
What nothing less than angel can exceed. Ib.

Where they
Behold a sun, he spies a Deity:
What makes them only smile, makes him adore.
Where they see mountains, he but atoms sees.
Ib.

And wit talks most, when least she has to sav.
Ib.

Sense is our helmet, wit is but the plume. Ib.

Let not the coolings-of the world allure thee ;
Which of her lovers ever found her true ? Ib.

To know the world, not love her, is thy point.
She gives but little, nor that little, long. Ib.

Th' inverted pyramid can never stand. Ib.

Thy wisdom all can do, but—make thee wise.
Ib.

Where night, death, age, care, crime, and sorrow cease. Night 9.

The melancholy ghosts of dead renown,
Whispering faint echoes of the world's applause. Ib.

Final ruin fiercely drives
Her ploughshare o'er creation.* Ib.

O majestic Night !
Nature's great ancestor ! Day's elder-born !
Ib.

'Tis Nature's system of divinity,
And every student of the night inspires.
'Tis elder scripture, writ by God's own hand :
Scripture authentic ! uncorrupt by man. Ib.

Eternity is written in the skies. Ib.

My heart, at once, it humbles, and exalts ;
Lays it in dust, and calls it to the skies. Ib.

Devotion ! daughter of astronomy !
An undevout astronomer is mad. Ib.

Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds ;
Nothing, but what astonishes, is true. Ib.

Confusion unconfused. Ib.

O let me gaze !—Of gazing there's no end.
O let me think !—Thought too is wildered
here ;

In mid-way flight imagination tires ;
Yet soon re-prunes her wing to soar anew,
Her point unable to forbear or gain. Ib.

The course of Nature is the art of God.† Ib.

A God alone can comprehend a God. Ib.

In every storm that either frowns, or falls,
What an asylum has the soul in prayer ! Ib.

The mind that would be happy, must be great.
Ib.

Take God from Nature, nothing great is left !
Ib.

Hard are those questions ;—answer harder still. Ib.

Born in an age more curious than devout. Ib.

Who worship God, shall find him. Humble love,

And not proud reason, keeps the door of Heaven ;
Love finds admission, where proud science fails.
Ib.

Nature's refuse, and the dregs of men,
Compose the black militia of the pen.

Let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it be not altered.
Esther. 1, 19.

One that feared God, and eschewed evil.
Job. 1, 1.

From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. 1, 7.

The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.
1, 21.

Skin for skin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life. 2, 4.

There the wicked cease from troubling;
and there the weary be at rest. 3, 17.

Which long for death, but it cometh not;
and dig for it more than for hid treasures.
3, 21.

In thoughts from the visions of the night,
when deep sleep falleth on men. 4, 13; 33, 15.

Shall a man be more pure than his Maker?
4, 17.

Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward. 5, 7.

He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.
5, 13.

Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season. 5, 26.

[. . . its season.—R.V.]

How forcible are right words! 6, 25.

[How forcible are words of uprightness!—
R.V.]

The king of terrors. 18, 14.

I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.
19, 20.

I know that my redeemer liveth. 19, 25.

And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.
19, 26.

[And after my skin hath been thus destroyed, yet from my flesh shall I see God.—
R.V.]

Lo, these are parts of his ways: but how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?
26, 14.

[Lo, these are but the outskirts of his ways: and how small a whisper do we hear of him! But the thunder of his power who can understand?—R.V.]

My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit. 27, 4.

[Surely my lips shall not speak unrighteousness, neither shall my tongue utter deceit.—
R.V.]

The price of wisdom is above rubies.
28, 18.

When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me. 29, 11.

Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest. 55, 6.

[Oh that I had wings like a dove: then would I, etc.—R.V.]

We took sweet counsel together. 55, 14.

The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart; his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords. 55, 21.

[His mouth was smooth as butter, but his heart was war: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.—R.V.]

They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear; which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely.
58, 4 and 5.

[... which hearkeneth not to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely.—
R.V.]

Vain is the help of man. 60, 11.

If riches increase, set not your heart upon them. 62, 10.

[... set not your heart thereon.—R.V.]

His enemies shall lick the dust. 72, 9.

For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south.

OLD TESTAMENT

413a

But God is the judge : he putteth down one, and setteth up another. 75, 6 and 7.

[For neither from the east, nor from the west, nor yet from the south, cometh lifting up. But God is the judge : he putteth down one, and lifteth up another.—R.V.]

They go from strength to strength. 84, 7.

He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap. 11, 4.

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun. 11, 7.

Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth. 11, 9.

Childhood and youth are vanity. 11, 10.
[Youth and the prime of life are vanity.—R.V.]

Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not. 12, 1.

[Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth, or ever the evil days come.—R.V.]

And the grinders cease because they are few. 12, 3.

And the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. 12, 5.

[And the grasshopper shall be a burden and the caper-berry shall fail: because, etc.—R.V.]

Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. 12, 6.

Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it. 12, 7.

[... or the wheel broken at the cistern; and the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit return unto God who gave it.—R.V.]

He gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs. 12, 9.

[He pondered, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.—R.V.]

The words of the wise are as goads. 12, 11.

Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh. 12, 12.

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. 12, 13.

[This is the end of the matter; all hath been heard: fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of men.—R.V.]

For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. 12, 14.

[... every hidden thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.—R.V.]

As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters. 12, 15.

Song of Solomon.* 2, 2.

[As a lily among thorns, etc.—R.V.]

For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. 2, 11 and 12.

The little foxes, that spoil the vines. 2, 15.
[... spoil the vineyards.—R.V.]

I sleep, but my heart waketh. 5, 2.
[I was asleep, but my heart waked.—R.V.]

Love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave. 8, 6.

Many waters cannot quench love. 8, 7.

The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib. Isaiah. 1, 3.

The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. 1, 5.

From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment. 1, 6.

[... and festering sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with oil.—R.V.]

Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me. 1, 13.

And the strong shall be as tow, and the maker of it as a spark, and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them. 1, 31.

[And the strong shall be as tow, and his work as a spark; and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them.—R.V.]

They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. (See Joel 3, 10, and Micah 4, 3.) 2, 4.

418b

Who hath believed our report? 53, 1.
When we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. 53, 2.
[When we see him, etc.—R.V.]

A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. 53, 3.

He was despised, and we esteemed him not. 1b.

He was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. 53, 7.

[He was oppressed yet he humbled himself and opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before her shearers is dumb; yea, he opened not his mouth.—R.V.]

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. 53, 11.

Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters. 55, 1.

Without money and without price. 1b.

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? 55, 2.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts,
neither are your ways my ways. 55, 8.

I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. 56, 5.

They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark. 56, 10.

Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood. 59, 7.

We roar all like bears, and mourn sore like doves.* 59, 11.

Beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. 61, 3.

[A garland for ashes . . .—R.V.]

I have trodden the wine-press alone. 63, 3.

I looked, and there was none to help. 63, 5.

All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags;
and we all do fade as a leaf. 64, 6.

[All our righteousnesses are as a polluted garment; and we all do fade as a leaf.—R.V.]

The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye

The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. 17, 9.
[. . . and it is desperately sick.—R.V.]

They have digged a pit for my soul. 18, 20.

Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him: but weep sore for him that goeth away:
for he shall return no more, nor see his native
country. 22, 10.

O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord. 22, 29.

The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.* 31, 29.
[The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge.—R.V.]

And seekest thou great things for thyself?
seek them not. 45, 5.

She that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary! Lamentations. 1, 1.

Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?
behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me. 1, 12.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. 3, 22.

It is good for a man that he bear the yoke
in his youth. 3, 27.

He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth
him. 3, 30.

[Let him give his cheek to him that smiteth him.—R.V.]

As if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel. Ezekiel. 10, 10.

[As if a wheel had been within a wheel.—

Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.* Habakkuk. 2, 2.

* "He that runs may read." The inverted form of this text is from Cowper's "Tirocinium." The Septuagint text is:

ὅπως διώκῃ ὁ ἀναγινώσκων αὐτά.
This has been alleged to mean "That he that reads may make haste to escape." But Jerome interpreted the passage as meaning that the writing was to be so plain that the reader might run and not be impeded from reading by his speed. Grotius considered it to mean "that it was to be so written that the reader should be quick in comprehending it"; or able to

spirit.—R.V.]

Given to hospitality.

12, 13.

Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

12, 15.

[Rejoice with them that rejoice; weep with them that weep.—R.V.]

Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.

12, 16.

[Set not your mind on high things, but conscend to things that are lowly. Be not wise in your own conceits.—R.V.]

Live peaceably with all men.

12, 18.

Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

12, 19.

[Vengeance belongeth unto me; I will recompense, saith the Lord.—R.V.]

In so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. (See Proverbs 25, 22.)

12, 20.

[. . . upon his head.—R.V.]

427b

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

12, 21.

.The powers that be are ordained of God.

13, 1.

Render therefore to all their dues.

13, 7.

[Render to all their dues.—R.V.]

Owe no man anything.

13, 8.

Love is the fulfilling of the law.

13, 10.

[Love therefore is the fulfilment of the law. R.V.]

The night is far spent, the day is at hand:
let us therefore cast off the works of darkness,
and let us put on the armour of light.

13, 12.

[The night is far spent, and the day is at hand . . . —R.V.]

Doubtful disputations.

14, 1.

Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

14, 5.

[Let each man be fully assured in his own mind.—R.V.]

That no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

14, 13.

[That no man put a stumbling-block in his brother's way, or an occasion of falling.—
R.V.]

The foolishness of preaching.

[The foolishness of the preaching.—R.V.]

Enticing words of man's wisdom.

2, 4.

[Persuasive words of wisdom.—R.V.]

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

2, 9.

[Things which eye saw not, and ear heard not, And which entered not into the heart of man. Whatsoever things God prepared for them that love him.—R.V.]

I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase.

3, 6.

[I planted . . . —R.V.]

Every man's work shall be made manifest.

3, 13.

[Each man's work . . . —R.V.]

Ye are the temple of God.

3, 16.

[Ye are a temple of God.—R.V.]

The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God.

3, 19.

Ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.

4, 1.

That ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written.*

4, 6.

[That in us ye might learn not to go beyond the things which are written.—R.V.]

A spectacle unto the world, and to angels.

4, 9.

Absent in body, but present in spirit.

5, 3.

A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

5, 6.

* This is often quoted, "not to be wise above that which is written," and is so translated by Prof. Scholefield in his Hints for an Improved Translation of the New Testament.

NEW TESTAMENT

428a

I speak this by permission, and not of commandment. 7, 6.

[. . . by way of permission . . .—R.V.]

It is better to marry than to burn. 7, 9.

The fashion of this world passeth away. 7, 31.

Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth. 8, 1.

[. . . but love edifieth.—R.V.]

If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend. 8, 13.

[If meat maketh my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, that I make not my brother to stumble.—R.V.]

Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. (See Deut. 25, 4; 1 Tim. 5, 18.) 9, 9.

[Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn.—R.V.]

I am made all things to all men. 9, 22.

[I am become all things to all men.—R.V.]

They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible. 9, 25.

[. . . to receive a corruptible crown; . . .—R.V.]

So fight I, not as one that beateth the air. 9, 26.

[So fight I, as not beating the air.—R.V.]

But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway. 9, 27.

[But I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage: lest by any means, after that I have preached to others. . . .—R.V.]

Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. 10, 12.

I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say. 10, 15.

All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient. 10, 23.

[All things are lawful; but all things are not expedient.—R.V.]

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof. 10, 26 and 28.

Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. 10, 31.

Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. 12, 4.

But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way. 12, 31.

[But desire earnestly the greater gifts. And a still more excellent way shew I unto you.—R.V.]

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. 13, 1.

[If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal.—R.V.]

428b

Charity suffereth long, and is kind. 13, 4.
[Love suffereth long, . . .—R.V.]

Charity never faileth. 13, 8.
[Love never faileth.—R.V.]

When I became a man, I put away childish things. 13, 11.

[Now that I am become a man, I have put away childish things.—R.V.]

For now we see through a glass, darkly. 13, 12.

[For now we see in a mirror, darkly.—R.V.]

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity. 13, 13.

[But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.—R.V.]

Let your women keep silence in the churches. 14, 34.

[Let the women keep silence in the churches.—R.V.]

Let all things be done decently, and in order. 14, 40.

I laboured more abundantly than they all. 15, 10.

Fallen asleep in Christ. 15, 18.

Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die. 15, 32.

Evil communications corrupt good manners.* 15, 33.

[Evil company doth corrupt good manners.—R.V.]

There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial. 15, 40.

The first man is of the earth, earthy. 15, 47.

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. 15, 52.

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? 15, 55.

[O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?—R.V.]

Let him be Anathema Maran-atha. 16, 22.

[Let him be Anathema. Maran atha.†—R.V.]

The letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive.

Second Epistle to the Corinthians. 3, 6.

[The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.—R.V.]

But we have this treasure in earthen vessels.‡ 4, 7.

For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. 4, 17.

[For our light affliction, which is for the moment, worketh for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory.—R.V.]

* See Θεῖποναι (Greek Quotations).

He is a banished man.

The Nut-Brown Maid. (Published in “Arnold's Chronicle,” 1521, as “an Old Ballad.”)

I saw the new moon late yestreen,
With the au'd moon in her arm.

Ballad, “Sir Patrick Spens.” (Supposed to date from 15th Century.)

Late, late, yestreen, I saw the new moone,
Wi' the auld moone in hir arme ;
And, if we gang to sea, master,
I fear we'll come to harm.

Ib. (Later Version.)

Itt's pride that putts this cuntrye downe ;
Man, take thine old cloake about thee.

Old Ballad, supposed to have been of Scottish origin ; see “Percy's Reliques,” Book 2, 7. (Quoted in “Othello,” ii. 2.)

He had one only daughter and no mo'.

The which he loved passing well.

Jephthah, Judge of Israel. (Old Ballad, quoted in “Hamlet,” ii. 2.)

“War begets Poverty,” or “The World's Whirligig.”

Plenty breeds Pride ; Pride, Envy, Envy,
Warre,

Warre, Poverty, Poverty humble Care ;

Humility breeds Peace, and Peace breeds
Plenty ;

Thus round the World doth rowle alternatly.

“The World's Whirligigge,” by Robert Hayman (d. 1631 ?). Published (1625) in “Quodlibets, lately come over from New Britaniola, Old Newfoundland, by R. H., sometimes Governour of the Plantation there.”

Found in Welsh in The Myvrian Archaeology of Wales (c. 1870) and there ascribed to St. Cadoc (6th Century). The translation of the Welsh version is : Poverty begets Effort ; Effort begets Success ; Success begets Wealth ; Wealth begets
Pride ; Pride begets Strife ; Strife begets War ;
War begets Poverty ; Poverty begets Peace ;
Peace, born of Poverty, begets Effort ; Effort again begets Success and the round continues as before.”

There are many other old versions. One of the oldest, said to be derived from a 15th Century MS., reads :

Peace maketh Plenty, Plenty maketh Pride,
Pride maketh Plee [pleasure], Plee maketh Poverty,
Poverty maketh Peace.

Bryng us in no befe, for there is many bonys,
But bryng us in good ale, for that goth down
at onys.

From a song of the 15th or late 14th Century.
See “Songs and Carols,” Thos. Wright.

The heading of the song is :

Bryng us in good ale, and bryng us in good ale ;
For our blysyd lady sak, bryng us in good ale.

WAIFS AND STRAYS—MEDIEVAL AND 16TH CENTURY

435a

My love he loves another love ;
Alas, sweetheart, why does he so ?
The Mourning Maiden. (Scottish Poem,
c. 1550.

Yf that thou wolte speke aryght,
Sx thynggys thou moste observe then :
What thou spekyst, and of what wyght,
Whare, to wham, whye and whanne.
Whatever thou sey, avyse thee welles. MS.
Trin. Coll., Cambridge (c. 1530).

A Latin version of the "six things to be observed" is as follows :

Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva quæ tibi mando,
Quid dicas, et ubi, de quo, cui, quomodo, quando.
See N. & Q., Dec. 23 (p. 516), 1911.

W. E. Norris in Thirby Hall (1884) has a modern metric version, making the number of things five :

If you your lips would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care :
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how and when and where.
St. Ambrose, De Officiis Ministrorum, Bk. I, ch. 10, sec. 35, enumerates four things for the wise man to consider before speaking : "Sapiens, ut loquatur, multa prius considerat, quid dicat, aut cui dicat, quo in loco, et tempore."

Fyghte ye, my merry men, whylls ye may,
For my lyff days ben gan.
Ancient Ballad of Chevy Chase. (Said to be by Richard Sheale, and probably written c. 1450-1500.) Fytte 2, st. 13.

The chylde may rue that ys unborne,
It was the more pitté.* St. 27.

For Wetharryngton my harte was wo
That ever he slayne shulde be ;
For when both his leggis wear hewyne in to,
Yet he knyled and fought on hys knee.
St. 30.

The later and more commonly received version, supposed to have been written about a century later, gives these lines as follows :

For Witherington needs must I wayle,
As one in doleful dumes ;
For when his legges were smitten off,
He fought upon his stumps.

Fight on, my men, Sir Andrew says,
A little I'm hurt, but yet not slain ;
I'll but lie down and bleed awhile,
And then I'll rise and fight again.
Ballad of Sir Andrew Barton. (16th Century.)

Fight on, fight on, my merry men all,
A little I am hurt, yet not slain ;
I'll but lie down and bleed awhile,
And come and fight with you again.
Ballad of Sir Andrew Barton. (Another Version.)

Said John, "Fight on, my merry men all,
I am a little wounded, but am not slain ;
I will lay me down for to bleed awhile,
Then I'll rise and fight with you again."
Johnny Armstrong's Last Good-night. (Found in "Wit Restored," 1658.)

Rearing himselfe thereatt.
King Estmere. (Old Ballad, 15th Century.) St. 44.

And up and spak' the young bride's mother,
Who never was heard to speak so free.
Lord Beichan. Old Border Ballad. Traditional. (Taken from J. H. Dixon's version, Percy Society publication.)

I'm going, my Lady Nancy Belle,
Strange countries for to see.
Lord Lovel. (Old Ballad.)

Lady Nancy she died out of pure, pure grief,
Lord Lovel he died out of sorrow, sorrow.
Id.

When it was grown to dark midnight,
And all were fast asleep,
In came Margaret's grimly ghost,
And stood at William's feet.
Ballad quoted in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Knight of the Burning Pestle," Act ii.

Yet one of them, more hard of heart,
Did vow to do his charge,
Because the wretch, that hired him,
Had paid him very large.
The Children in the Wood. Black-letter ballad, Pepys collection. St. 12.

And he that was of mildest mood
Did slaye the other there. St. 13.

And I wish his soul in heaven may dwell,
Who first invented this leathern bottel !
The Leathern Bottel. Somersetshire version.

* In the more modern version :—

"The child may rue that is unborn,
The hunting of that day."

* Supposed to refer to Islington in Norfolk, near Lynn, now Tilney-cum-Islington.

 Of all foolys that ever was, stultus stultorum.
The Epitaph of Love, the Kings' Foole. Bodl. MSS., c. temp. Henry VIII.

Come, give us your plain-dealing fellows,
 Who never from honesty shrink,
 Not thinking of all they should tell us,
 But telling us all that they think.
The Broderer's Song. Ancient song, said to have been repeated or sung at the dinner of the Broderers' (Embroiderers') Company.

My mind to me a kingdom is;
 Such perfect joy therein I find
 As far exceeds all earthly bliss
 That God or Nature hath assigned.*
Printed about 1585 in Byrd's "Psalmes, Sonets, and Songs of Sadnes and Pietie."

I laugh not at another's loss,
 I grudge not at another's gain. Ib.

I think Nature hath lost the mould
 Where she her shape did take;
 Or else I doubt if Nature could
 So fair a creature make.

A Praise of his Lady. Tottel's "Miscellany," 1557.

Similar lines appear in "A Praise of his Love," by the Earl of Surrey, d. 1547; and in many other poets, the origin being Italian.

A ship is sooner rigged by far than a gentlewoman made ready.

Lingua; or, The Five Senses.† iv. 5.

A ship is ever in need of repairing.—John Taylor (Water Poet), "A Navy of Landships." [Proverbial expression derived from Plautus. See "Negotii sibi," etc., under Latin.]

And all she said, when there she came,
 Young man, I think y'are dying.
Barbara Allen's Cruelty. (Old Ballad.)

He that is below envieth him that riseth,
 And he that is above, him that's below
 despiseth.

Song, "Hallo, my fancy!" c. 1600.

Whatever turn the matter takes,
 I deem it all but ducks and drakes.
Careless Content. (Anon.)

He sighed in his singing and after each grone,
 Come willow, willow, willow!
 I'm dead to all pleasure, my true love is gone;
 Oh willow, willow, willow!
Willow, Willow, Willow. (Old Ballad.)
See "Othello," iv. 3 (p. 302b).

Shepherd, be advised by me,
 Cast off grief and willow-tree:
 For thy grief brings her content;
 She is pleased if thou lament.
The Willow Tree. (Ancient Black-letter Ballad.)

And he loved keeping company.
The Heir of Linne, St. 2. (Old Ballad, supposed to be of Scottish origin.)

Seas have their source, and so have shallow springs;
 And love is love, in beggars as in kings.
"A. W.," in Davison's "Rhapsody." (16th Century.)

Come gentle death, the ebb of care,
 The ebb of care, the flood of life.
Upon consideration of the state of this life. Tottel's Collection, 1557.

Women be forgetful, children be unkind,
 Executors be covetous and take what they find;
 If anybody ask where the dead's goods became,
 They answer, So God help me and holy dome,
 he died a poor man.

Quoted as "the old proverb" in Stow's "Survey of London," 1603.

And from the top of all my trust
 Mishap hath thrown me in the dust.
The Lover that once disdained Love. (Tottel's Collection, pub. 1557.) Possibly by John Harington (fl. 1550). See "Notes and Queries," June 3, 1911.

These lines are said to have been written by Mary Queen of Scots, with a diamond, on a window in Fotheringay Castle.

Digest me no digestions.
The Earl of Essex to Sir Robert Cecil, 1594.

Thirtie daies hath November,
 Aprill, June, and September;
 Twenty and eight hath Februarie alone,
 And all the rest have thirty-one.

2. 17TH CENTURY.

All our pride is but a jest;
None are worst and none are best;
Grief and joy and hope and fear
Play their pageants everywhere.
Vain opinion all doth sway;
And the world is but a play.

Song, "Whether men do laugh or weep," set to music by Philip Rosseter (1575 ?- 1623).

A degenerate nobleman, or one that is proud of his birth, is like a turnip. There is nothing good of him but that which is underground.

"Characters." A Degenerate Nobleman.
Saml. Butler (1612-1680).

Often quoted: "is like a potato; the only good part of him is underground."

Three merry men,

Inscription on Title-page of R. Lovelace's Posthumous Poems, 1659. Tr. of Martial, Book 1, Epigram 26. (See
"Cineri gloria" under Latin, 502b.)

Reason, thou vain impertinence,
Deluding hypocrite, begone!
And go and plague your men of sense,
But let my love and me alone.

At best thou'rt but a glimmering light,
Which serves not to direct our way;
But, like the moon, confounds our sight,
And only shows it is not day.

Reason. (From "Miscellany Poems and Translations by Oxford Hands." Printed, 1685.)

Britons, strike home, revenge your country's

St. David, you know, loves leeks and toasted cheese,

And Jason was the man brought home the Golden Fleece;

St. Patrick, you know, he was St. George's boy;

Seven years he kept his horse, and then stole him away;

For which knavish act a slave he doth remain,

But St. George, St. George, he hath the dragon slain.

St. George he was for England, St. Dennis was for France;

Sing, Honi soit qui mal y pense. Ib.

But all's to no end, for the times will not mend
Till the king enjoys his own again.

Upon Defacing of White-Hall. ("The Loyal Garland," 5th Edition, 1686.)

He that is drunk is as great as a king.

Old Song, said to have been quoted by Charles II. to Sir R. Viner, Lord Mayor of London, in 1674.

And when the pipe is foul within,

Think how the soul's defiled with sin;

To purge with fire it does require,

Thus think, and drink tobacco.

From a MS. of early part of 17th century, signed "G. W." and sometimes attributed to George Wither. The song is in Dursley's "Pills to Purge Melancholy" (1699). There are many later versions.

God rest you, merry gentlemen! let nothing you dismay;

Remember Christ our Saviour, who was born on Christmas Day.

Carol, printed c. 1672, Roxburghe Collection.

He that drinks well, does sleep well; he that sleeps well, doth think well;

He that drinks well, doth do well; he that does well, must drink well.

The Loyal Garland. Song 65 (1686).

Commit thy ship unto the wind,

But not to faith of womankind;

For there's more credit in a wave

Than any faith that women have.

Anon. MS., c. 1693.

The trappings of a monarchy would set up an ordinary republic.—Samuel Johnson, in his Life of Milton, gives this passage in italics as though a quotation, but the words are not found in Milton's works. They are apparently Johnson's paraphrase of Milton's arguments in A Ready and Easy Way (1660), with perhaps a reminiscence of Goldsmith's remark: "The nakedness of the indigent world may be clothed from the trimmings of the vain."

Praise undeserved is satire in disguise.

The Celebrated Beauties, by Mr. Br—st, published 1709. Anon. (Quoted by Pope and others: "Praise undeserved is scandal in disguise." See Paul Whitehead (p. 386a).

I prized every hour that passed by

Beyond all that had pleased me before;

But now they are gone, and I sigh

And I grieve that I prized them no more.

Lines quoted by Fanny Burney in letter to Mrs. Phillips, Oct. 3, 1783.

We do not love people so much for the good they have done us, as for the good we have done them.

Tolstoy in "War and Peace," Part I (ad fin.), quoted this sentence (in Russian) as being a quotation from Laurence Sterne. Its source has not been identified.

Envy! eldest born of hell!

Cease in human breast to dwell.

Libretto to Handel's "Saul" (1738).

Attributed to Chas. Jennings, of Gosport.

I will drive a coach and six through an Act of Parliament.

Quoted by Macaulay, "Hist. of Eng.," ch. 12, as by Sir Stephen Rice, Irish Judge (1637-1715).

Men have many faults;

Poor women have but two:

There's nothing good they say,

And nothing right they do. Anon.

It's a very good world that we live in,

To lend, or to spend, or to give in;

But to beg, or to borrow, or come by your own,

It's the very worst world that ever was known. Anon.

WAIFS AND STRAYS—18TH CENTURY

439^a

Usually quoted in this form. An older form appears in A Collection of Epigrams, 12mo, London, 1737 :

This is the best world, that we live in,
To lend and to spend and to give in :
But to borrow, or beg, or to get a man's own,
It is the worst world that ever was known.

Our enemies will tell the rest with pleasure.
Fleetwood (Bishop of St. Asaph, 1706–1714, Bishop of Ely, 1714–1723).

From a preface to four sermons published 1712. This preface, which dwelt on the outbreak of the "spirit of discord" and the disappointment of the hopes of peace, was burned by order of the majority of the House of Commons.

It is best to be off wi' the old love,
Before you be on wi' the new.

Quoted as "the end of the old song" in Sir W. Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor," ch. 29.

Oh, waly, waly, gin love be bonny,
A little while, when it is new ;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.
Old Scottish Song. (Quoted by Burns.)

They steal my thunder.

Remark attributed to John Dennis, critic, and dramatist (1657–1733), when stage thunder, invented by him for his play of Appius, was used in "Macbeth." "They will not let my play run," he said, "and yet they steal my thunder."—Biog. Britannica.

He that will make a pun will pick a pocket.

The critic [Dennis] immediately started up and left the room, swearing that any man who could make such an execrable pun would pick his pocket.—Public Advertiser, January 12, 1779. See Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. 2, p. 324, which also ascribes this saying to Dennis.

This is the Jew

That Shakespeare drew.

Exclamation of a gentleman on witnessing Macklin's performance of Shylock, 1741. It has been ascribed to Pope and also to Johnson.

To Nature and yourself appeal,
Nor learn of others what to feel.

Anon. Quoted in "An Epistle to a Friend" by William Hogarth, 1761.

As Statues moulder into Worth.

Attributed to Paul Whitehead (1709–1774).

Begin low, speak slow ;
Take fire, rise higher ;
When most impressed
Be self-possessed ;
At the end wax warm,
And sit down in a storm.

Lines on Public Speaking attributed to Rev. Dr. Leifchild, Nonconformist Preacher, 18th Century.

A dying man can do nothing easy.

Last words of Franklin (d. 1790).

Had you seen this road before it was made,
You would lift both your hands and bless
General Wade.

In reference to General (afterwards Field-Marshal) Wade (d. 1748), who employed 500 soldiers in road-making in the Highlands, 1726–1729. The lines are said to be by "an Irish ensign," and are quoted in James Pettit Andrew's "Anecdotes," 1789.

They who drink beer will think beer.

Attributed to Warburton. (It has been parodied, "They who drink water will think water.")

O what a parish, what a terrible parish,

O what a parish is Little Dunkel !

They hae hangit the minister, drowned the Old Song. (Dryden's Collection, 1716.)

The law doth punish man or woman

That steals the goose from off the common,

But lets the greater felon loose,

That steals the common from the goose.

Anon. See Notes and Queries, 7 Ser. vi. 469 ; vii. 98 ; 8 Ser. x. 273 ; also Feb. 17, 1912.

For in heaven there's a lodge, and St. Peter keeps the door,

And none can enter in but those that are pure.

The Masonic Hymn. Stated by J. H. Dixon (Ancient Poems, Percy Society, 1846) to be "a very ancient production."

His friends would praise him, I believed 'em,

His foes would blame him, and I scorned
'em ;

His friends—as Angels I received 'em ;

His foes—the Devil had suborned 'em.

Old Song.

Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs
to bite 'em,

And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.

And the great fleas themselves in turn have greater fleas to go on,

While these again have greater still, and greater still, and so on.

Quoted in Prof. Augustus De Morgan's (1806–1871) "Budget of Paradoxes" (c. 1850).

So naturalists observe, a flea
Has smaller fleas that on him prey ;
And these have smaller still to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.

Swift : Poetry, a Rhapsody.

Once I guessed right,

And I got credit by 't ;

Thrice I guessed wrong,

And I kept my credit on.

Quoted as "an odd saying" by Dean
Swift, 1710.

The Rule of the Road—and Path :

The rule of the road is a paradox quite,

Both in riding and driving along ;

If you keep to the left, you are sure to be right,

If you keep to the right you are wrong ;

But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,

To the right it is right you should bear ;

Whereas to the left should be left enough space
For those whom you chance to meet there.
Old Rhyme, ascribed to Henry Erskine (1746-1817). See Notes and Queries, Aug. 27, 1910, and July 28, 1866.

The Rev. J. Wood gives a different version of the rule of the footway:
The rule of the footway is clear as the light,
And none can its reason withstand:
On each side of the way you must keep to the right,
And leave those you meet the left hand.

This Gate hangs high,
And hinders none;
Refresh and pay,
And travel on.

Inscription on the Sign of a Gate. (Sometimes the name of the Sign is different, and the third line runs "Come in and buy.")

Gin a body meet a body, coming thro' the rye;
Gin a body kiss a body need a body cry?

Song, "Gin a Body Meet a Body," published in "Charms of Melody," No. 30, Dublin, n.d. (c. 1810). Probably 18th Century.

There's some say that we wan, some say that they wan,

Some say that nane wan at a', man,
But one thing I'm sure, that at Sheriff-Muir,
A battle there was, which I saw, man.
And we ran, and they ran, and they ran, and we ran.

And we ran, and they ran awa', man.

Sheriff-Muir. By Murdoch McLennan of Craithie. The inconclusive action known as "The Bob [i.e. dance] of Dunblane" was fought in the valley of Sheriffmuir, near Stirling, Nov. 12, 1715.

The wee wee German Lairdie.

Jacobite Song. Attributed to Allan Cunningham, but said to have been a traditional Scottish song before his time.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of the morrow;
But a Sabbath profaned, whatsoe'er may be gained,

Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.

Traditional. Sometimes called "Sir Matthew Hale's Golden Maxim," and said to be "a poetical rendering of a passage in his letter to his children 'On Keeping the Lord's Day.'" (Possibly 17th Century.)

A lady after performing with the most brilliant execution a sonata on the pianoforte in the presence of Dr. Johnson, took the liberty of asking him if he was fond of music. "No, madam," replied the Doctor, "but of all noises I think music the least disagreeable."

Morning Chronicle, August 16, 1816.

Poor John was a gallant captain,
In battles much delighting;

He fled full soon

On the first of June—

But he bade the rest keep fighting.

Anti-Jacobin, May 14, 1790. Elegy or Dirge on the death of Jean Bon Saint André [beheaded at Algiers by the Dey's orders for forming a Revolutionary Club there]. Joint composition of Canning, Ellis and Frere.

So she went into the garden to cut a cabbage leaf, to make an apple-pie; and at the same time a great she-bear, coming up the street, pops its head into the shop. "What! no soap?" So he died, and she very imprudently married the barber; and there were present the Picinnies, and the Joblillies, and the Garylukes, and the grand Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top; and they all fell to playing the game of catch as catch can, till the gunpowder ran out at the heels of their boots.

Printed in this form in Miss Edgeworth's "Harry and Lucy, Concluded," Vol. 2, p. 155 (1825). According to Miss Edgeworth, the story was by "Mr. Foote."

A writer on "Samuel Foote" in the Quarterly Review, No. 190, Sept. 1854, states that these lines were produced by Samuel Foote (1720-1777) at a lecture by Chas. Macklin (1697?-1797), in which he stated that he had brought his own memory to such perfection that he could learn anything by rote on once hearing it. Foote's sentences were handed to Macklin at the end of the lecture with a request that he would read them and afterwards repeat them from memory. Macklin's lectures were given in 1754.

The memoirs of Foote and the various books of witticisms and anecdotes connected with him, contain no reference to the story.

According to a correspondent of Notes and Queries (Nov. 16, 1850), the author of "The Incoherent Story" was James Quin, the actor (1693-1766) who is said to have laid Foote a wager that he could speak some nonsense which Foote could not repeat off-hand after him. The version given differs in some particulars from the above. The various memoirs of Quin have no allusion to "The Incoherent Story," nor is it mentioned in the Memoirs of Macklin.

An older and longer story, said to be "an old Irish tradition," and entitled "Sir Gammer Vans," may have partly suggested the "Incoherent Story." "Sir Gammer Vans" ends: "I killed thirty-six [partridges], besides a dead salmon, which was flying over the bridge, of which I made the best apple-pie I ever tasted."

"Rewards and Fairies." Title of Book by Rudyard Kipling.

Farewell, rewards and fairies!

Good housewives now may say;

For now foul sluts in dairies

From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and a waste of seas;
Yet still the blood is warm, the heart is Highland,

And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

Canadian Boat Song published in "Blackwood's Magazine," 1829. Believed to be by John Galt (1779-1839), who was in Canada 1824-1829.

The above version is as usually quoted. The correct version is said to be:

From the shieling on the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas,
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

("Shieling" or "Shieling" = a hut.)

Some things that you have said are true,
And some things you have said are new;
But what are true, alas! they are not new,
And what are new, they are, alas! not true.

Said to be founded on a criticism of Voltaire by Lessing.

Man is immortal till his work is done.

This line appears in Ethandune (1892) (James Williams, D.C.L., d. Nov., 1911, aged 60), but is of earlier origin. Fuller (Church Hist. of Britain, 1655, Book 2, century 8, 18) has: "God's children are immortal while their Father has anything for them to do on earth."

Title of Song, popular about 1830.

O! for a booke and a shadie nooke,
Eyther indooore or out;
With the grene leaves whispering overheade,
Or the streete cryes all about.

Referred to by Lord Avebury in "Pleasures of Life" (1887) as "an old English song," but probably modern. It is said to have been written by John Wilson, London bookseller (d. 1889) as a "Motto" for his second-hand catalogue, c. 1887, but Wilson may have taken it from Lord Avebury's book.

Said to have been a favourite maxim of Mrs. John Day, wife of a famous jockey, and mother of William Day (1823-1908), trainer, and of the Rev. Henry Day, LL.D.

The Scotch are a nation of gentlemen.

Saying used by George IV., according to Sir Walter Scott. See "Noctes Ambrosianae," Nov., 1830.

Heavenly Father, bless us,
And keep us all alive,
There's ten of us to dinner
And not enough for five."

Anon. Hodge's Grace.

Life let us cherish, while yet the taper glows,

Why are we fond of toil and care?

Why choose the rankling thorn to wear?

Song, "Life let us Cherish," published in "Charms of Melody," No. 86 (Dublin, n.d., ? c. 1810); translated from the German:

Freut euch des Lebens,
Weil noch das Lämpchen glüht.

The German words were by Johann Martin Usteri (1763-1827), and appeared in 1793. They were set to music by Nägeli and published in 1795 in his Freemasons' Song with Tunes (Berlin).

His throat they cut from ear to ear,
His brains they battered in;

His name was Mr. William Weare;
He lived at Lincoln's Inn.

Lines referring to the murder of William Weare by John Thurtell in 1823; ascribed by Lord William Lennox ("Sporting Review," 1839) to William Webb, alias "Hoppy Webb," a London linkman. Lockhart ascribed the lines to Theodore Hook.

He that prigs what isn't his'n,

Two men wrote a Lexicon, Liddell and Scott.

Which part was by Scott and which part by Liddell?

Epigram said to have been written by a Westminster boy when Dr. Liddell (1811-1898) was Headmaster (between 1846 and 1855). The Liddell and Scott Lexicon was published in 1843. (There are many variants of the epigram.)

To play billiards well is the sign of a mispent youth.

A saying used by Herbert Spencer who played billiards not too well. He, however, stated that he quoted it from someone else [see Life and Letters of Herbert Spencer (Dr. Duncan) 1908]. (A similar remark is in "Noctes Ambrosianæ," March, 1827.)

We are none of us infallible, not even the youngest.

William Hepworth Thompson (1810-1886), Master of Trinity Coll., Cambridge, as recorded by James Stuart ("Reminiscences," 1912), made use of this saying and addressed it to Gerald Balfour. Another form of the saying is: "We are all fallible, even the youngest."

'Twas whispered in heaven, 'twas muttered in hell.

Enigma on the letter H, by Miss Catherine Fanshawe (1764-1834), altered by James Smith, one of the authors of "Rejected Addresses."

The original line was "'Twas in Heaven pronounced; it was muttered in Hell."

This road is not passable,

A wise old owl lived in an oak;
The more he saw the less he spoke;
The less he spoke the more he heard:
Why can't we all be like that bird?

Said to have been quoted by the American Millionaire, Rockefeller, Sept., 1915, when questioned about a War Loan from America to the Entente Allies.

If all the good people were clever,
And all clever people were good,
The world would be nicer than ever
We thought that it possibly could.

But somehow, 'tis seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should;
The good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good!

I expect to pass through this world but once.
Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

Every effort to identify the author of this much-quoted saying has failed. It has been attributed to Stephen Grellet, an American quaker of French birth (b. 1773, d. 1855); R. W. Emerson; Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon (this being, however, a mistake, due to a partial resemblance of the Earl's epitaph; see p. 444a); John Wesley; Sir Rowland Hill (1744-1833); Marcus Aurelius*; Miss A. B. Hageman; Addison; Wm. Penn; Thos. Carlyle; H. Drummond; and others; and it is also said that the germ of it is to be found in the writings of a Chinese philosopher. There seems to be some authority in favour of Stephen Grellet being the author, but the passage does not occur in any of his printed works.

In "Blessed be Drudgery," by Wm. C. Gannett (Bryce, Glasgow), the saying is thus recorded: "The old Quaker was right: I expect to pass through life but once. If there is any kindness, or any good thing I can do to my fellow beings, let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once."

* The nearest approach to the saying in Marcus Aurelius is: "No man remember, can lose another life than that which he now loses. The present is the same for all; what we now lose or win is just the flying moment." Seneca has many parallel passages.

Albertano of Brescia's Liber Consolationis et Consilii (completed A.D. 1246) has:

Semper audiui dici, Quod bene potes facere noli differre ("Often have I heard it said, What good thing you can do, do not defer it.")

Chaucer, Meubens, sec. 71, translates this:

There is an old proverbe, quod she [Dame Prudence] seith: that the goodnesse that thou mayst do this day, do it; and abyde nat ne delaye it nat til to-morwe.

John Wesley (Pref. to Explanatory Notes upon the New Testament) wrote (Jan. 4, 1754):

"Having lately had a loud call from God to arise and go hence, I am convinced that if I attempt any thing of this kind at all I must not delay any longer."

Lord Chesterfield (letter to Bishop of Waterford, Jan. 22, 1760) wrote:

"While I can crawl upon this planet I think myself obliged to do what good I can, in my narrow domestic spheres, to my fellow creatures, and to wish them all the good I cannot do."

For every ill beneath the sun
There is some remedy or none;
If there be one, resolve to find it;
If not, submit, and never mind it.

These lines appeared anonymously in a book of "Maxims, Morals, etc.," published 1843. It appears to be founded on a Castilian proverb:

Si hay remedio porqui te apuras?
Si no hay remedio porqui te apuras?

For the Lord Jesus Christ's sake,
Do all the good you can,
To all the people you can,
In all the ways you can,
As long as ever you can.
Said to be from a tombstone at Shrewsbury. (Quoted by D. L. Moody, American Evangelist.)

There is so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it ill behoves any one of us,
To find any fault with the rest of us.

Anon.

These lines have been ascribed wrongly to R. L. Stevenson; to Governor Hoch of Kansas (who disclaimed them); to Ellen Thornycroft Fowler (who also disclaimed the authorship); to Elbert Hubbard; and to Joaquin Miller (1841-1913), American poet, the last mentioned probably on the strength of a similar passage:

In men whom men condemn as ill
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I hesitate to draw a line
Between the two, where God has not.

Though lost to sight, to memory dear.
This occurs in a song by Geo. Linley (c. 1835), but it is found as an "axiom" in the Monthly Magazine, Jan., 1827, and is probably of much earlier date. Horace F. Cutter (pseudonym Ruthven Jenkyns) uses the expression in the Greenwich Magazine for Mariners, 1707, but this date is fictitious. A German form is, "Dem Augen fern; dem Hertenzen ewig nap." It is stated that Sir David Dundas went through life offering £5 to anyone who could tell him the origin of the lines:
Though lost to sight, to memory dear;
The absent claim a sigh, the dead a tear.

In the years fled,
Lips that are dead
Sang me that song.

WAIFS AND STRAYS—EPITAPHS

445^a

Stranger, to Lacedæmon go, and tell
That here, obedient to her words, we fell.
Tr. by Geo. Burges (1786?-1864) of the famous Greek epitaph by Simonides.

Life's pleasure hath he lost—escaped life's pain,
Nor wedded joys nor wedded sorrows knew.
Tr. by Goldwin Smith of Greek epitaph by Julianus "On a Youth."

Rest, gentle Shade, await thy Master's will ;
Then rise unchanged and be an angel still.
At Chirk Church (N. Wales) in memory of Richard Jebb (d. 1845), aged 8.

Here rests a man who never rested here.
Ravenna Cathedral. On a Bishop.

We that survive perchance may end our days
In some employment meriting no praise ;
They have outlived this fear, and their brave ends
Will ever be an honour to their friends.
Epitaph by Phineas James, ship master, "to his stricken comrades," 1633.

Between the stirrup and the ground,
Mercy I askt, me-cy I found.
Quoted in Camden's "Remaines" (1636) as made by a good friend of the author. It is a free translation of St. Augustine's phrase, "Misericordia Domini inter phontem et fontem."

Bland, passionate, and deeply religious, she also painted in water-colours, and sent several pictures to the Exhibition. She was first cousin to Lady Jones, and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Epitaph alleged to have been "in Pewsey Church," to the memory of "Lady O'Looney," "great-niece of Burke." (Audrey Stewart's "Epigrams and Epitaphs," 1897.)

Here lies one whose name was written in water.
Epitaph on John Keats's Tomb, 1820.

Circles though small are yet complete.
Inscribed on a monument to two children (family, Musgrave), Northleigh Church, Oxon (c. 1800).

And if there be no meeting past the grave,
If all is darkness, silence, yet 'tis rest.
Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep.
Lines on the grave of Prof. Huxley, 1825-95, stated to be written by his wife, with two additional lines :
For still He giveth His beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills, 'tis best.

Here lies a poor woman, who always was tired ;
She lived in a house where help was not hired.
Her last words on earth were : "Dear friends, I am going Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing ;
But everything there is exact to my wishes ;
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.

445^b

I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But, having no voice, I'll be clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now ; don't mourn for me never—
I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

The Tired Woman's Epitaph. Quoted before 1850. (Authorship unknown.)

Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead ;
Had it been his father
I had much rather ;
Had it been his brother,
Still better than the other ;
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her ;
Had it been the whole generation,
All the better for the nation ;
But since 'tis only Fred,
That was alive and is dead,
Why, there's no more to be said.

Epitaph on Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III. (d. 1751). Anon.

In Vol. 2 of Hist. Comm. Report on Egmont MSS. (1909) is a letter of July 9, 1667, from Robt. Bowyers to Robt. Southwell stating :
"It is said these verses were written over the grave of one of the sons of the Lord Chancellor of England—

Here lies Tom Hyde ;
It's a pity that he died ;
We had rather
It had been his father ;
If it had been his sister
We had not missed her ;
If the whole generation,
It had been better for the nation."

Pray for the soul of Gabriel John,
Who died in the year eighteen-hundred and

Old Rhyme.

Here sleeps in peace a Hampshire grenadier,
Who caught his death by drinking cold small beer.
Soldiers, take heed from his untimely fall,
And when you're hot, drink strong, or not at all.

Winchester churchyard. Epitaph on a Grenadier, N. Hants Militia, 1764.

Beneath this stone old Abra'm lies ;
Nobody laughs and nobody cries :
Where he's gone, or how he fares,
Nobody knows, and no one cares.

Epitaph on Abraham Newland, Chief Cashier of the Bank of England (d. 1807). Said to be written by himself.

Lie heavy on him, earth ! for he Laid many heavy loads on thee.

Epitaph on Sir J. Vanbrugh, architect (1664-1726) ; by Dr. Evans. (See Latin, "Sui terra levis.")

WAIFS AND STRAYS—NURSERY SONGS AND RHYMES

446a

Here lies Thomas Dudley, that trusty old stud—
A bargain's a bargain, and must be made good.

Epitaph on Governor Dudley. (Said to be written by Governor Belcher.)

Good frend, for Jesus sake forbear,
To digg the dust enclosed heare;
Blest be the man that spares thes stones,
And curst be he that moves my bones.
*Shakespeare's Epitaph, Stratford-on-Avon.

Stay, Passenger, why goest thou by so fast?
Read, if thou canst, whom envious Death hath plast
Within this monument, Shakspeare: with whome
Quick nature dide: whose name doth deck
this Tombe

* Early tradition states that these lines were selected by the poet for his epitaph; it is not thought that they were his own composition.

6. NURSERY SONGS AND RHYMES.

Three children sliding on the ice,
Upon a summer's day,
As it fell out, they all fell in,
The rest they ran away.
Founded on a Ballad "The Lamentation of a Bad Market; or The Drowning of Three Children in the Thames," 1653.

This isn't the time for grass to grow.
Consider, good cow, consider.
This is said to be part of "The Tune the Old Cow Died of." (See "Notes and Queries," 2nd Series, Vol. 2, p. 39.)

All in a row,
Bend the bow,
Shoot at the pigeon and kill the crow.
Old Nursery Ryhme.

The children in Holland take pleasure in making
What the children in England take pleasure in breaking. Nursery Proverb.

Then the little maid she said, "Your fire may warm the bed,
But what shall we do for to eat?
Will the flames you're only rich in make a fire in the kitchen,
And the little God of Love turn the spit?"
*Version of old Nursery Rhyme, from a broadside printed at Strawberry Hill,
18th Century.*

The little maid replied, some say a little sighed,
"But what shall we have for to eat, eat, eat?"
Will the love that you're so rich in make a fire in the kitchen,
Or the little God of Love turn the spit—spit, spit?"

*Another Version. (Halliwell's Nursery Rhymes.)
In Mrs. Centlivre's Artifice, printed 1724, Olivia is made to say: "When the glowing of passion's*

446b

Fare more then cost: sieth [since] all that he hath writt
Leaves living art but page to serve his witt.
Epitaph on the Monument in Stratford Church (erected before 1623). Authorship unknown.

Man's life is like unto a summer's day
Some break their fast and so away;
Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed:
O reader then behold and see:
As we are now, so must you be.

*Found with variations in many churches.
Attributed to Jos. Henshaw, Bishop of Peterborough (d. 1678).*

Horses be loved, and laughter, and the sun,
A song, wide spaces and the open air;
The trust of all dumb living things he won,
And never knew the luck too good to share:
Now, though he will not ride with us again,
His merry spirit seems our comrade yet,
Freud from the power of weariness and pain,
Forbidding us to mourn or to forget.

Anon: Quoted, 1916.

over, and pinching winter comes, will amorous sighs supply the want of fire, or kind looks and kisses keep off hunger?"

Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went,
The lamb was sure to go.
"Mary's Little Lamb," by Sarah Josepha Hale (1788-1879). The lines were published in "Poems for our Children" (Boston, U.S., 1830).

A man of words and not of deeds
Is like a garden full of weeds.
Old Song. (See Halliwell's "Nursery Rhymes," No. 166.)

Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a man marries his trouble begins.
Old Nursery Rhyme.

If all the world were paper
And all the sea were inke,
If all the trees were bread and cheese,
How should we do for drinke?
Wit's Recreations (1640). Interrogation Cantilena.

If all the seas were beans and pease,
How should we do for oysters? Ib.

The King of France went up the hill,
With twenty thousand men;
The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.
Old Tarlton's Song. (Quoted 1642.)

In a letter from James Howell, at Paris, to Sir James Croft, dated May 12, 1620, it is alleged that "the song 'The King of France with forty thousand men'" had reference to the raising of 40,000 men by Henry IV., of France, in 1609-10.

Now you're married I wish you joy,
First a girl and then a boy,
Seven years after a son and daughter;
Pray young couple, now kiss together.

Old Song, "Kiss-in-the-ring."

There was a little girl, and she had a little curl

Right in the middle of her forehead;
When she was good, she was very very good,
But when she was bad she was horrid.

Nursery Song. (Not in the older collections.) The lines are attributed to

Sayings of THEMISTOCLES

(B.C. c. 512-c. 449.)

The day after the fair.

This seems connected with the fable of Themistocles, who silenced an officer who desired to claim superior fame for his exploits, by telling a fable of a dispute between the Feast and the Day after the Feast. The latter claimed to be more important as being "full of bustle and trouble."
"You say right," said the Feast, "but if it had not been for me where would you have been?"

The wildest colts make the best horses.

Plutarch: Life of Themistocles.

Teach me the art of forgetting; for I often remember what I would not, and cannot forget what I would.

Saying of Themistocles, as recorded by Cicero.

I never learned how to tune a harp, or play upon a lute; but I know how to raise a small and inconsiderable city to glory and greatness.

On being taunted with his want of social accomplishments. (Plutarch's Life.)

Themistocles told the Adrians that he brought two gods with him, Persuasion and Force. They replied: "We also, have two gods on our side, Poverty and Despair."

Herodotus.

We should have been undone, but for our undoing.

*Saying, when in exile, to his children.
(Plutarch's Life.)*

Strike, but hear.

Saying of Themistocles when Eurybiades, commander of the Spartan fleet, raised his staff to strike him. (Ib.)

Wooden walls.

Themistocles, in explanation of an oracle, received by the Athenian deputies, declared that by "wooden walls" nothing could be meant but ships.—Cornelius Nepos: Themistocles.

"Tu certe Ligneis Muris Britanniam munivisti." (You truly have fortified Britain with wooden walls).—*Latin Address sent to S. Pepys by the

The advice of Socrates, when asked whether it was better to marry or not to marry.

Thales, one of the Greek sages, when young, and desired by his mother to marry, replied, "it was not yet time"; when he had come to full age, "that it was no longer time."—Montaigne, Book 2, ch. 8.

Much knowledge of things divine escapes us through want of faith.

Saying of Heraclitus, Greek philosopher, c. B.C. 500 (quoted by Plutarch: Life of Coriolanus).

Words will build no walls.

Cratinus (B.C. 528–431) (quoted by Plutarch in his "Life of Pericles") ridiculing the long wall proposed to be built by Pericles.

The first requisite to happiness is that a man be born in a famous city.

Plutarch (Life of Demosthenes) states this was the remark of "Euripides (B.C. 480–B.C. 406) or some other" in his encomium on Alcibiades (B.C. 449–B.C. 404).

A bridge for a retreating enemy.

Saying of Aristides.

Plutarch, in his Life of Themistocles, states that in order to sound Aristides, after the battle of Salamis, Themistocles pretended to think it advisable to go to the Hellespont and break down Xerxes' bridge of ships. To which Aristides replied: "Instead of breaking that bridge, we should, if possible, provide another, that he may retire the sooner out of Europe." (See "Proverbs," "Build a bridge of silver," etc.)

The Athenians will not sell their liberties for all the gold either above or under ground.

Reply of Aristides (d. B.C. 467) to the Lacedæmonians. (Plutarch: Life of Aristides.)

A general should have clean hands.

Saying of Aristides (d. B.C. 467). (Plutarch's Life).

He would soon be delivered from all his troubles.

Enigmatic prophecy of the spirit of Cleonice (B.C. 448) to Cimon, foretelling his death. (Plutarch: Life of Cimon.)

Zeus hates busybodies and those who do too much. Euripides. As quoted by Emerson.

Nothing becomes a king so much as the distribution of justice. War is a tyrant, as Timotheus (c. B.C. 500) expresses it, but Pin-dar (B.C. 518–439) says, Justice is the rightful sovereign of the world.

451b

Plutarch: Life of Demetrius.

True he can talk, and yet he is no speaker.

Eupolus (Greek poet, c. B.C. 435) in reference to a garrulous person who was no orator. (Cited by Plutarch: Life of Alcibiades.)

They love, they hate, but cannot do without him.*

Aristophanes, Greek poet, B.C. 434 (as cited by Plutarch: Life of Alcibiades.—Langhorne's trans.)

Mistress of the seas.

Lysander (d. B.C. 395), when handing over the command of the fleet to Callicratidas the Spartan (c. B.C. 406) said to him, "I deliver you a fleet that is mistress of the seas."—Plutarch: Life of Lysander.

Where the lion's skin falls short it must be eked out with the fox's.

Lysander's remark upon being told that he resorted too much to craft. (Plutarch: Life of Lysander.)

This saying is a proverb in several modern languages.

Children are to be cheated with knuckle bones [substitutes for dice], and men with oaths.

Sayings of Lysander. Ib.

Appealing from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

This is founded on a passage in Valerius Maximus (fl. A.D. 14), who states that a certain woman of foreign origin, having been wrongly condemned by Philip when he was drunk, exclaimed, "Provocarem ad Philippum, sed sobrium" (I would appeal to Philip, but when he is sober).—Book 6, 2.

Not Philip, but Philip's gold, took the cities of Greece.

Plutarch (Life of Paulus Emilius) quotes this as "a common saying." It refers to Philip II. of Macedon (c. B.C. 382–B.C. 336).

If I were not Alexander, I should wish to be Diogenes.

Remark of Alexander (B.C. 355–323) after Diogenes had made his request that the monarch "would stand a little out of his sunshine."—Plutarch: Life of Alexander.

I will not steal a victory.

Plutarch describes this as "that celebrated answer" by Alexander, when advised to surprise the Persian army in the darkness.—Ib.

Great geniuses are generally melancholy.

Aristotle (B.C. 384–322). (Problem, sect. 30.)

Seneca ("De tranquillitate animi") quotes, "Aristoteli, nullum magnum ingenium sine mixtura dementiæ fuit." (The saying of Aristotle—no great genius was without an admixture of madness.)

"I have heard, madam, your greatest wits have ever a touch of madness and extravagance in them."—Sir Martin Mar-All, v. 1 (1667) (By Dryden and W. Cavendish, Duke of Newcastle.)

* See Latin Quotations: "Difficilis, facilis" etc.; also Addison (p. 25): "There is no living with' thee of without thee."

Shame is an ornament to the young ; a disgrace to the old.

Aristotle. (B.C. 384-322.)

Abstruse questions must have abstruse answers.

Saying of the Gymnosophist philosopher, when Alexander had questioned him and had received an enigmatic reply.—Plutarch : Life of Alexander.

Have I inadvertently said some evil thing ?

Remark of Phocion (d. B.C. 317) to a friend, upon one of his sentences, in a public debate, being received with universal applause.—Plutarch : Life of Phocion.

A hoarseness caused by swallowing gold and silver.

Remark made when Demosthenes (B.C. 382-322), who had been bribed not to speak against Harpalus, pretended to have lost his voice.—Plutarch's Lives.

Elsewhere Plutarch describes Demosthenes' throat complaint as "the silver quinsy." (See Ἀργυράχην πάσχει, under Greek.)

To smell of the lamp.

Demosthenes when taunted by Pytheas that all his arguments "smelled of the lamp," replied, "Yes, but your lamp and mine, my friend, do not witness the same labours."—Plutarch : Life of Demosthenes.

In his Life of Timoleon, Plutarch quotes the expression as applying to over-finished paintings as well as to laboured compositions.

It is said of Horace that his odes smell more of wine than of oil.

While I am master of my sword, I shall never think any man greater than myself.

Saying of Eumenes (d. B.C. 315) to Antigonus. (Plutarch : Life of Eumenes.)

I have heard the nightingale itself.

Reply of King Agesilaus (B.C. c. 440-362), when asked to go to hear a man who imitated the nightingale to great perfection.—Plutarch : Life of Agesilaus.

The Kings of Epirus were sworn "to govern according to law," and the people "to defend the crown according to law."

Plutarch : Life of Pyrrhus, King of Epirus.

It being reported to Pyrrhus (B.C. 318 c.—B.C. 272), that certain young men had spoken disrespectfully of him, he asked them, "Did you really say these things?" "We did, sir," replied one, "and we should have said a good deal more, if we had had more wine." Whereupon he laughed and dismissed them.

Plutarch : Life of Pyrrhus.

He who has the sharpest sword.

Reply of Pyrrhus to one of the princes who asked which of them should be his heir.—Plutarch : Life of Pyrrhus.

A Pyrrhic victory.

Pyrrhus, after the battle of Asculum (B.C. 279), where, according to his own account, he lost 3,500 men, was congratulated on his victory. He replied : "Another such victory and we are undone."

Ib.
(See a Cadmean Victory under "Greek Quotations," p. 473a)

Feast of the Lapithæ.

The promised feast became a Feast of the Lapithæ.—Carlyle : French Revolution, Part 2, Book 1, ch. 5.

The chief of the Lapithæ gave a feast to celebrate the wedding of Pirithous and Hippodamia. The feast ended in blows and "very great slaughter," owing to the Centaurs, who had been invited, offering violence to Hippodamia (Ovid. Metam., Book 12.)

The whole is greater than the part ; we are capable of wisdom, and we are part of the world. Therefore the world is wise.

Saying of Zeno (d. B.C. 264).

See the Greek ἡμέων ἡμισὺν παντός. "The half is greater than the whole."

A wise and good man can suffer no disgrace.

Saying of Fabius Maximus (d. B.C. 205). (Plutarch.)

Hannibal knows how to gain a victory, but not how to use it.

Remark of Barca, a Carthaginian, to Hannibal. (Plutarch : Life of Fabius Maximus.)

The last of the Greeks.

Plutarch says that Philopœmen, a Greek general, who died c. B.C. 181, was so called by "a certain Roman."

This Jupiter of Phidias is the very Jupiter of Homer.

A "celebrated saying" uttered (according to Plutarch) by Paulus Æmilius (d. B.C. 168) on seeing the statue of Jupiter at Olympia.

See "This is the Jew that Shakespeare drew," page 439a.

Fortune hath so favoured me in this war that I feared, the rather, that some tempest would follow so favourable a gale.

Remark ascribed by Plutarch to Paulus Æmilius.

Where the shoe pinches.

The story of "a certain Roman" who put away his wife without apparent cause, but told his friends, who expostulated, that only the wearer of the shoe knows where it wrings him, is told by Plutarch, in the Life of Paulus Æmilius. The Roman has been wrongly assumed to be Paulus Æmilius, but the context shows that this was not so.

A sardonic laugh.

"Your laugh is of the sardonic kind," Caius Gracchus [d. B.C. 121], when his adversaries laughed at his defeat—by unfair means—when applying for a third tribuneship.—Plutarch : Life of Caius Gracchus.

(The sardonic laugh was an involuntary distension of the muscles of the mouth, occasioned by a poisonous plant ; therefore a forced or unnatural laugh.)

Feasts of Lucullus (c. B.C. 115—c. B.C. 48).

Lucullus prided himself upon the luxury of his feasts. On one occasion, when he happened to sup alone, the meal being less magnificent than usual, he rebuked his servant, saying : "Did you not know that this evening Lucullus sups with Lucullus?"—Plutarch : Life of Lucullus.

WAIFS & STRAYS—NATURALISED PHRASES & QUOTATIONS

453^a

The father of his country.

Title bestowed on Cicero (B.C. 64) after his consulship,—“a mark of distinction which none ever gained before.”—Plutarch: Life of Cicero.

Cæsar's wife must be above suspicion.

Julius Cæsar (B.C. 100-44) divorced his wife Pompeia, but declared at the trial that he knew nothing of what was alleged against her and Clodius. When asked why, in that case, he had divorced her, he replied: “Because I would have the chastity of my wife clear even of suspicion.”—Plutarch: Life of Julius Cæsar.

As to Cæsar, when he was called upon, he gave no testimony against Clodius, nor did he affirm that he was certain of any injury done to his bed. He only said, “He had divorced Pompeia because the wife of Cæsar ought not only to be clear of such a crime, but of the very suspicion of it.”—Plutarch: Life of Cicero.

Passing the Rubicon.

When he arrived at the banks of the Rubicon, which divides Cisalpine Gaul from the rest of Italy . . . he stopped to deliberate. . . . At last he cried out “The die is cast” and immediately passed the river.—Plutarch: Life of Julius Cæsar.

We shall meet at Philippi.

“Thou shalt see me at Philippi,” was the remark of the spectre which appeared to Brutus in his tent at Abydos [B.C. 42]. Brutus answered boldly: “I will meet thee there.” At Philippi the spectre reappeared, and Brutus, after being defeated, died upon his own sword.—Plutarch: Life of Cæsar.

Killed by physicians.

Adrian the Emperor (A.D. 76-117) exclaimed incessantly, when dying, “That the crowd of physicians had killed him.” (See Montaigne, Book 2, ch. 37. Montaigne also cites the statement of a Lacedæmonian, when asked how he had preserved his life so long: “By my ignorance of medicine.”)

See how these Christians love one another.

This saying appears first in Tertullian, “Apol. adv. Gent.” c. 29: “Vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant.”

Take, O boatman, thrice thy fee
Take,—I give it willingly;

For, invisible to thee,

Spirits twain have crossed with me.

Translation (anon.) of John Louis Upland.

Iron hand in a velvet glove.

Attributed to Charles V., and used also by Napoleon. (See Carlyle's Latter Day Pamphlets, No. 2.)

Architecture is frozen music.

Translation from Schelling, Philosophie der Kunst.

Let me die to the sounds of delicious music.

Said to be the last words of Mirabeau.

The more the marble wastes,

The more the statue grows.

Translation from Michael Angelo by Mrs. Henry Roscoe.

Beauty is the purgation of superfluities.

Michael Angelo.

* Also in Plutarch's Life of Marcus Brutus.

453^b

The greatest virtues are only splendid sins.

Ascribed to St. Augustine.

Whose words were half battles.

Saying in reference to Luther.

The artist is the son of his time; but pity him if he is its pupil or even its favourite.

Schiller.

It is neither safe nor prudent to do aught against conscience.

Luther.

The eternal feminine. From the French.

“L'éternel féminin,” expression used by H. Blaze de Bury, 1847, in a translation of Goethe's Faust, the German being “Das Ewig-Weibliche.”

To sleep the sleep of the just.

See French Quotations, “Elle s'endormit,” etc.

Every man has his own style, like his own nose.

Lessing (as quoted by Carlyle).

The style is the man.

From the French. “Le style est l'homme même.”—Comte de Buffon. Remark made in his discourse on taking his seat in the Academy, Aug. 25, 1753. (The style is the very man.)

Defects of his qualities. From the French.

Heureux l'homme quand il n'a pas les défauts de ses qualités!—Bishop Dupanloup. (Happy the man when he has not the defects of his qualities.)

His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities.—Washington Irving: The Sketch Book, John Bull (1820).

The key of the street.

In French, “La clef des champs.” (The key of the fields.) The French expression has a different meaning from the English, and refers to giving a man freedom to go where he pleases.

It was worse than a crime; it was a blunder.

From the French: C'estoit pire qu'un crime, c'estoit une faute.—(See p. 690a).

War ought to be the only study of a prince.

Machiavelli.

Edmund Burke, quoting this saying (A vindication of Natural Society, 1756), adds: “and by a prince he means every sort of state, however constituted.” *

A good man struggling with adversity.

Ecce spectaculum dignum, ad quod respiciat intentus operi suo Deus. Ecce par Deo dignum, vir fortis cum mala fortuna compositus.—Seneca. “Lib. de Divina providentia.” (Behold a worthy sight, to which the God, turning his attention to his own work, may direct his gaze. Behold an equal thing, worthy of a God, a brave man matched in conflict with evil fortune.)

Better than a play.

Plus capio voluptatis inde quam spectandis in theatro ludis.—Pietro Aretino (1492-1557). (I obtain more of pleasure thence than from seeing plays in theatres.)

* See also Disraeli, Coningsby: “I worship the Lord of Hosts,” p. 117a.

WAIFS & STRAYS—PHRASES & HOUSEHOLD WORDS

454^a

We are near awakening when we dream that we dream.

Novalis (Fragments) as translated by Carlyle.

To become properly acquainted with a truth we must first have disbelieved it, and disputed against it. Ib.

The true poet is all-knowing ! he is an actual world in miniature. Ib.

My opinion, my conviction, gains infinitely in strength and success, the moment a second mind has adopted it. Ib.

The present day has no value for me except as the eve of to-morrow ; it is with the morrow that my spirit wrestles.

Metternich (translated).

Think of living. (Gedenke zu leben.)

Goethe (translated by Carlyle).

454^b

Man is perennially interesting to man ; nay, if we look strictly to it, there is nothing else interesting. Ib.

The three things to be repented of.

Portius Cato said that he had only three things of which he repented, namely, when he had revealed a secret to his wife, when he had passed a day in idleness, and when he had journeyed by sea to any place accessible by land.—Rabelais : Pantagruel, Book 4, ch. 24.

"I must live," said the man [in excuse for his evil manner of gaining a livelihood]. "I do not see the necessity," replied the Comte d'Argenson (1696–1764) [Secretary of State]. [The person to whom the reply was made is said to have been the Abbé Guyot Desfontaines ; described as a "libeller."]

See Voltaire, Discours Préliminaire to Alzire (1736). Carlyle has several allusions to the phrase.

8. PHRASES AND HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

All the world and his wife.

Quoted in "Noctes Ambrosianæ," Nov., 1832.

"Gigmania," a term used by Carlyle and others in allusion to a celebrated passage at the trial of Thurtell (1823) :—

Q. What sort of a person was Mr. Weare ?

A. He was always a respectable person.

Q. What do you mean by respectable ?

A. He kept a gig.

"Thus does society naturally divide itself into four classes : Noblemen, Gentlemen, Gignen, and Men."—Carlyle's article on Boswell (Note), 1832.

That blessed word "Mesopotamia."

It was said of George Whitefield that he could reduce his hearers to tears by uttering this word. According to Mr. Francis Jacox, Garrick gave currency to the saying. The usual story is that an old woman once told her pastor that "she found great support in that comfortable word 'Mesopotamia.'"

A mess of pottage.

This expression seems to have been derived from the heading of Genesis 25 in Matthew's Bible, 1537—"Esau selleth his byrthright for a messe of potage." The expression does not occur in the Authorised Version of the Bible. An early example of its use is in The Historie of Jacob and Esau, licensed to be printed 1557 ; printed 1568—viz. : "Better a messe of pottage than nothing, pardy."

Counsels of perfection.

A theological term of great antiquity applying to works of supererogation.

The false Southron.

This expression occurs in Blind Harry's Death of Wallace, supposed to have been written in the 15th century.

Sent to Coventry.

Said to have originated during the Civil War from the habit of the Parliamentarians of sending doubtful or useless officers or soldiers to the garrison at Coventry. The expression is used also in America :—"Send them into everlasting Coventry."—Emerson's Essay : Manners.

"The Republic of Letters" is a very common expression among the Europeans.

Oliver Goldsmith : Citizen of the World. 20 (1760). See note on p. 135a ; also under French Quotations (Molière).

That man has an axe to grind.

This expression occurs in Essays from the Desk of Poor Robert the Scribe, by Chas. Miner (1780–1863), and first appeared in the Wilkes-barre Gleaner (1811).

To mix with brains.

John Opie (1761–1807) when asked with what he mixed his colours, replied "I mix them with my brains, sir." (See Smiles : Self Help, ch. 5.)

Sleepy Hollow.

"The legend of Sleepy Hollow," by Washington Irving, was published in 1820.

A woman with a past.

Title of a novel by Mrs. Berens, published 1886.

Billingsgate compliments.

Used as a proverbial expression in Richard Brome's play "The New Academy" printed, 1658. Brome died 1652.

A nation of shopkeepers.

A project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers.—Adam Smith : Wealth of Nations (1775), Vol. 2, book 4, chap. 7, pt. 3.

Also attributed to Samuel Adams, American statesman (1776).

What is true of a shopkeeper is true of a shop-keeping nation.—Dean Tucker (1766).

We are, indeed, a nation of shopkeepers.—B. Disraeli : The Young Duke (1831), book 1, ch. 11.

Hearts of oak.

Yonkers that have hearts of oake at fourscore yeares.—Old Meg of Herefordshire, 1609.

"Where are the rough brave Britons to be found With Hearts of Oak, so much of old renowned ?"—Epilogue to Mrs. Centlivre's "Cruel Gift", 1717.

455a
Chop and change.

From boy to man, from man to boy, would chop and change degree.—Earl of Surrey: How no Age is Content (c. 1540).

Petticoat government.

There was one species of despotism under which he had long groaned, and that was petticoat government.—Washington Irving: Rip Van Winkle (1820).

Our friend the enemy.

This perhaps originated with the French expression often used when the allies entered Paris (1814): "Nos amis, nos ennemis."

"English as she is spoke."

Title of a reprint of the English version of P. Carolino's "Guide of the Conversation in Portuguese and English," 1882. The title was due to the publisher, Mr. Tuer.

"The spoils to the victors."

The "watchword of corruption," attributed to Andrew Jackson.

Bag and baggage.

Richard Huloet's "Abecedarium Anglicano-Latinum pro Tyrunculis," (1552).

The Vicar of Bray will be Vicar of Bray still. "Fuller's Collection of Proverbs," 1732.

According to Fuller's Worthies of Berkshire, a Vicar of Bray in that county was alternately Romish and Protestant under Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. The centenary Parr had similar principles. "He held it safer to be of the religion of the King or Queen that were in being, for he knew that he came raw into the world, and accounted it no point of wisdom to be broiled out of it."—John Taylor (Water poet): The Old, Old, very Old Man, 1635.

The Man in the Street.

Expression used by Emerson, "Conduct of Life—Worship," and elsewhere.

A proverb describes proverbs as being "the wisdom of the street."

Going the whole hog.

(Hence in more recent times "whole-hoggers.") Said to be connected with the slang "hog," a word meaning at different periods one shilling and five shillings. "Hoger" is Jewish-German for ducat. A correspondent of Notes and Queries (Sept. 27, 1851) ascribes an Irish origin to the expression, stating that in Ireland a shilling was called a hog.

Let them stew in their own grease.

A saying in use at the time of the Franco-German War, imported from Germany.

The lungs of London (i.e. the parks).

Said to have been used by Mr. Windham in a speech delivered before 1814. See also Chas. Dickens (p. 111a).

"Bang went saxpence."

Peebles Body (to Townsman supposed to be in London): E-eh, Mac! ye're sune hume again.—Mac: E-eh, it's just a ruinous place that! Mun, a had na' been there a bune twa hoours, when—Bang!—went—Saxpence.

Punch joke, illustrated by Chas. Keene, Dec. 5, 1868. Said to have been communicated to Keene by Birket Foster, who had the story from Sir John Gilbert.

Fortune of war.

This bene bot chance of Armes.—Sir D. Lyndesay: William Meldrum (l. 577). It was bot chance of Weir.—Id. l. 1832.

Masterly inactivity.

According to a correspondent in Notes and Queries (Nov. 29, 1879) this phrase was coined by Sir James Mackintosh (1765–1832), Vindiciæ Gallicæ (1791). It is a parallel phrase with Horace's "strenua inertia" (x Epl. 11, 28).

Human documents.

"Documents humains" (Fr.) was an expression first used by Edmond de Goncourt in 1876. He claimed the authorship of it in his Preface to La Faustin (1882).

Present company excepted.

This expression occurs in "The London Hermit" (by O'Keefe) (1793). Probably of earlier occurrence.

Good manners to except my Lord Mayor of London.—Ray's Proverbs.

A draught on Aldgate Pump.

Sated by Fielding in his "Essay on the Character of Men," to be, "a mercantile phrase for a bad note."

The girl I left behind me.

Song ascribed to the year 1759. As published (c. 1810) in The Charms of Melody. No. 72 (Dublin, n.d.) the song begins:—
I'm lonesome since I crossed the hills,
And o'er the moor that's sedgy;
With heavy thought my mind is filled
Since I parted with Naggy;
Whene'er I return to view the place
The tears doth fall and blind me,
When I think on the charming grace
Of the girl I left behind me.

The roaring forties.

The rough part of the Atlantic between 40° and 50° N. latitude. Sometimes called "the rolling forties," and also applied to that part of the Southern Ocean between 40° and 50° S.

I heard the little bird say so.

Swift: Letter to Stella, May 23, 1711.

"A good bedside manner."

This phrase originated in Punch, March 15, 1884, in the letterpress accompanying a drawing by G. Du Maurier: "What sort of a doctor is he?" "Well, I don't know much about his ability; but he's got a very good bedside manner."

Lying like gas-meters.

Said to have originated in Dec., 1897, in a case at Southwark Police Court.

Not lost but gone before.

Title of a song published in Smith's "Edinburgh Harmony", 1829.

"Non amittuntur sed præmittuntur." (They are not lost but sent before.)—Seneca.

The quiet life.

Among good things, I prove and find
The quiet life doth most abound.

They of the mean estate are happiest.—Tottel's Collection, 1557.

Macaulay's Schoolboy.

The frequency of Macaulay's reference to somewhat abstruse matters as subjects which any public schoolboy would know, has led to his being credited with the phrase. It is to be found, however, in many earlier authors, e.g.: "Every schoolboy hath that famous testament of Grunnius Corcootta Porcellus at his fingers' ends."—R. Burton: Anat. Melan. (1621), Pt. 3, sec. 1, mem. x, i. See also Swift:

"Oh how our neighbour lifts his nose,
To tell what every schoolboy knows."

The Fourth Estate.

The "three estates of the realm" are the Lords Spiritual, The Lords Temporal, and the Commons. "Ane pleasant satyre of the Three Estatis" was a play by Sir David Lindsay, produced in 1535. The Newspaper Press, owing to its greatly enhanced influence and power, became known as "The Fourth Estate" about the end of the 18th century. Burke is credited with having invented the term, but it does not appear in his published works. It was a term applied to various other extra-constitutional powers or influences. The Gazetteer and New Daily Advertiser, Jan. 30, 1789, stated: "Mr. Fox's Board of Commissioners, which Mr. Pulteney and Mr. Pitt clamoured against as a Fourth Estate, was to be responsible to Parliament. Mr. Pitt's Fourth Estate, of the Queen and her Council, is to have no responsibility."

In Rabelais's Pantagruel, when Pantagruel visits the island of the Papimanes, he is met by four persons, a monk, a falconer, a lawyer, and a husbandman, and is told that they are "les quatre estatz de l'isle" (the four estates of the island.) (Book 4, ch. 48).

Our Place in the Sun.

C'est là ma place au soleil; voilà le commencement et l'image de l'usurpation de toute la terre.—Pascal.

(There is my place in the sun. Behold in this the beginning and the image of the usurpation of all the earth.)

9. HISTORICAL AND TRADITIONAL.

"Thou hast conquered, O Galilean!"
(Lat. "Vicisti, Galilæe!" Ammianus; from the Greek, first found in Theodoret, 3, 25.)

Ascribed to Julian the Apostate, when at the point of death, in Persia, A.D. 363. (See Montaigne: Essais, 2, 19 [1580]; also Swinburne: "Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean," p. 351a.)

Thou shalt go thou shalt return never in battle shalt thou perish.

Utterance of the Oracle, favourable or otherwise according to punctuation.

There, but for the grace of God, goes John Bradford.

Tradition ascribes this to John Bradford (b. 1510; burnt at Smithfield 1555) on seeing some criminals going to execution. (See Dict. Nat. Biog.)

The English take their pleasures sadly.

"Ils s'amusaient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays," said Froissart.—Emerson: English Traits, ch. 8.

"They" [the English], says Froissart: "amused themselves sadly after the fashion of their country"—"ils se rejoissoient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays."—Hazlitt: Sketches and Essays: Merry England.

The Cock of the North.

O when the koke in the north halows (leaves) his nest,
And buskis his birdys and bunnys (begins) to flee,
Then shall fortune his frende the gattis (gates) up-caste

And Rychte shall have his Free entre.

—Ancient Scottish Prophecy (c. 1450) MS. Cambridge Univ. Lib. (E.E.T.S., No. 42, p. 18.)

London-over-the-Border.

A term applied to the Metropolitan district in Essex, derived from an article on that area in Household Words (Sept. 12, 1857), entitled "Londoners-Over-the-Border." The article has been attributed, without authority, to Charles Dickens.

The Ashes.

"Recovering the Ashes," a term applied to the English victory in test cricket matches with Australia. The expression arose through an epitaph (Sporting Times, London, 1882): "In Affectionate Remembrance of English Cricket, which died at the Oval on 29th August, 1882, deeply lamented . . . N.B. The body will be Cremated and the Ashes taken to Australia."

Yellow Press.

Twelve Spadassins were seen, by the yellow eye of Journalism, arriving recently out of Switzerland.—Carlyle: French Revolution (1837-9), Pt. 2, Bk. 3, ch. 3.

Going West.

This expression, particularly in vogue during the European War as a euphemism for dying, is of much antiquity: With the Greeks Plato was the "Western God." Sophocles, in Œdipus Tyrannus, referring to a calamity involving death throughout a wide district, says: "One after another thou mightest see speeding towards the shore of the Western God."

The passage is not found in Froissart, but it seems to be derived from the Duc de Sully's Memoirs, written c. 1630, as follows: "Les Anglais s'amusent tristement selon l'usage de leur pays." There is a mediæval Latin proverb, "Anglica gens est optima fens et pessima ridens." (The English race is the best at weeping and the worst at laughing.) On the other hand there is an early tribute to the jovial disposition of Englishmen: "The whole [English] nation, beyond all other mortal men, is most given to banquetting and feasts."—Trans. (by Burton: Anat. Melan., 1621) from Paulus Jovius (1483-1552), Hist., Book 11.

A certain man has called us, "of all peoples the wisest in action"; but he added, "the stupidest in speech."—Carlyle: "The Nigger Question" (1849).

Froth at top, dregs at bottom, but the middle excellent.

Description of the English Nation, attributed to Voltaire.

Paris fashions.

"As far as Paris to fetch over a fashion, and come back again."—Ben Jonson: Every Man out of his Humour, ii., 2 (1599).

The Man in the Moon.

The old notion was that the spots on the moon's

Quod Pandarus, thou hast a ful gret care Lest that the cherl [man] may falle out of the mone! Chaucer: Troilus, Bk. I, 1023.

A great leap in the dark.

Thomas Hobbes, b. 1588, d. 1679, author of Leviathan, when about to die, is reported to have said, "Now I am about to take my last voyage, a great leap in the dark." Hence the expression, "Hobbes' voyage," used by Vanbrugh in The Provoked Wife (1679), as referring to matrimony.

What has posterity done for us?

Erroneously attributed to Sir Boyle Roche (1743-1807) in a speech in the House of Commons; but the words occur in John Trumbull's McFingal, canto 2 (1776). Mrs. Elizabeth Montagu, in a letter dated Jan. 1, 1742, has this allusion: "The man was laughed at as a blunderer who said in a public business, 'We do much for posterity; I would fain see them do something for us.'"

And have they fixed the where, and when?

And shall Trelawny die?

Then twenty thousand Cornish men

Shall know the reason why!

Trelawny. (Song written at the time of the committal of Jonathan Trelawny, Bishop of Bristol, to the Tower, 1688.)

All my eye and Betty Martin.

The older form is said to be, "All my eye, Betty Martin." [The tradition that "Betty Martin" is a survival of a mediæval invocation, "Beate Martine," is discredited.]

The sun never sets in the Spanish dominions.

*Quoted, as a saying of Spanish soldiers, by Capt. John Smith, 1579-1631.

It may be well to wait a century for a reader, as God has waited six thousand years for an observer. John Kepler (1571-1630).

"If the Almighty God waited 6,000 years for one to see what he had made, I may surely wait 200 for one to understand what I have seen."—Carlyle (referring to Kepler): "Miscellanies" (Voltaire), 1829.

England expects every officer and man to do his duty this day.

Nelson's signal, Oct. 26, 1805, as published in "The Times," Dec. 26, 1805. Usually quoted as "England expects every man to do his duty."

Victory! or Westminster Abbey!

The Army and Navy for ever,

Three cheers for the Red, White, and Blue.

The Red, White, and Blue.

Song originating at the time of the Crimean war, and said to indicate the co-operation of redcoats and bluejackets.

No soldier can fight unless he is properly fed on beef and beer.

Attributed to the Duke of Marlborough.

A similar saying, "An army, like a serpent, goes on its belly," has been attributed to Frederick the Great.

"Soldiers, we must never be beat,—what will they say in England?"

Remark by the Duke of Wellington at Waterloo.

The thin red line.

Article in "The Times," describing the Highlanders drawn up at Balaclava or Inkerman.

"Up, Guards! and at 'em."

Ascribed to Wellington.

His real words, according to his biographer, Sir Herbert Maxwell, were, "Stand up, Guards."

In A. Tels' Guidebook, Excursions to the Lion of Waterloo, 2nd ed., 1904, a Belgian publication, this is improved as follows: "At nearly more than 50 yards from the english, Wellington cried —'Upright guards! prepare for battle.'"

Our only General.

Expression applied to Lord Wolseley (1833-1913), but of earlier origin. "He [Danton] stood between [General] Dumouriez and much censure, anxious not to exasperate our only General."—Carlyle: French Revolution (1837-1839), Bk. 3, ch. 3.

He never would believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world, ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.

Saying of Richard Rumbold, at his execution, 1685, as recorded by Lord Macaulay (History of England, Ch. 5).

Tommy Atkins.

This sobriquet of the British soldier comes from the imaginary name "Thomas Atkins," employed in 1815 in connection with The Soldier's Account Book, called into use by the War Office. "Thomas Atkins" appeared in the sample forms accompanying the official circular letter, August 31, 1815.

All quiet along the Potomac.

Proverbial saying in America. Supposed to have originated in a report by General G. B. McLellan, U.S. (1826-1885).

Be sure you are right. Then go ahead.

David Crockett, U.S. (1786-1836).

Hold the fort! I am coming!

Signal to General Corse, in Allatoona (Oct. 5, 1864), by William F. Sherman (1820-1891).

The religion of all men of sense.

The Earl of Shaftesbury said at last . . . "Men of sense are really but of one religion." Upon which says the lady, of a sudden, "Pray, my lord, what religion is that which men of sense agree in?" "Madam," says the earl, "men of sense never tell it."—*Note by Speaker Onslow, to Burnet's notice of the Earl of Shaftesbury, "History of his own Times," Vol. i.

A similar anecdote is told of Samuel Rogers in Froude's "Short Studies on Great Subjects"—"A plea for the Free Discussion of Theological Difficulties"—no doubt a confusion of memory on Froude's part.

Lord Chatham, with his sword undrawn,
Is waiting for Sir Richard Strachan;
Sir Richard, longing to be at 'em,
Is waiting for the Earl of Chatham.

Epigram said to have appeared in the "Morning Chronicle" (1809).

The reference is to the recriminations following the failure of the military operations of John Pitt, second Earl of Chatham, in the expedition to Walcheren, 1809. He attributed his own fatal delays to the dilatoriness of Admiral Sir Richard Strachan, who retaliated that the Earl was unpunctual in fulfilling his arrangements, and nicknamed him "the late Earl of Chatham." Another version (given in the Dict. Nat. Biog.) is:

Great Chatham, with his sabre drawn,
Stood waiting for Sir Richard Strachan;
Sir Richard, longing to be at 'em,
Stood waiting for the Earl of Chatham.

To Banbury came I, O profane one!
Where I saw a Puritane one
Hanging of his cat on Monday,
For killing of a mouse on Sunday.
Richd. Brathwaite's Barnabee's Journal, printed 1638.

Banbury is described by Mr. S. R. Gardiner (History of England, Vol. 8, p. 93), as "that most Puritan of all Puritan towns."

Here lie the bones of Robert Lowe:
Where he's gone to I don't know.
If to the realms of peace and love,
Farewell to happiness above.
If he's gone to a lower level,

From the "Owl" (about 1871). Attributed to E. Knatchbull-Hugessen (afterwards Lord Brabourne).

We don't want to fight,
But, by Jingo, if we do,
We've got the ships, we've got the men,
We've got the money too.
Music Hall Song, 1877. Hence came the term "Jingoes" as applied to fire-eating politicians.

Hops, Reformation, Bays, and Beer
Came into England all in one year.
Old Rhyme. Another version (probably more correct) is in the edition by Edmund Howes (fl. 1607-1631) of Stow's Annales

* Old Lord Shaftesbury, conferring with Major Wildman about the many sects of religion . . . came to this conclusion . . . All wise men are of the same religion. Whereupon a lady in the room . . . demanded what that religion was. To whom Lord Shaftesbury straight replied, "Madam, wise men never tell."—John Toland: Chidophorus (1720).

You may prove anything by figures.
Stated by Carlyle to be the saying of "a witty statesman." Chartism, No. 2.

All evil comes from Spain; all good from the north.

According to Sir T. Challoner, writing from Florence, 1597, this was then "a common proverb in every man's mouth." (Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., Vol. 2, 23.)

Never was Legate or Cardinal that did good in England.

Referred to by Hall ("Chronicle," 16th Century) as being an "olde sawe" in the time of Henry VIII.

With how little wisdom the world is governed!

"Thou little thinkest what a little foolery governs the whole world." A saying ascribed to "a wise Pope" in Selden's Table Talk (see p. 275b); also to the Swedish Chancellor Oxenstierna; also told in connection with Conrad van Benningen, the Dutch statesman (1643). Lord Chatham, in a letter to Lord Shelburne (Jan. 25, 1775), writes of the expression as "the saying of one of the Popes—Alexander VI., Jules, or Leo—to a son of his."

The world is governed too much.

Modesty is a very good thing, but a man in this country may get on very well without it.

Motto said to have been inscribed on a banner in a Western State.

O Athenians, what toil do I undergo to please you!
Alexander the Great. Quoted by Carlyle. (Essay on Voltaire, 1829.)

Drifting into war.
Expression used by the Earl of Clarendon, 1608-1674.

Every man has his price.
Ascribed to Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford (1676-1745). His nephew, Horace Walpole, in a letter dated August 26, 1785, says it was a maxim ascribed to Sir Robert "by his enemies." Mr. E. Latham (Famous Sayings and their Authors) states that the saying is said to have originated in Sir R. Walpole's remark to Mr. Leveson, "I know the price of every man in this house, except three."
"It is an old Maxim that every Man has his Price."—The Bee, 1733-4, Vol. 8, p. 97.

WAIFS & STRAYS—POLITICAL PHRASES & ALLUSIONS

459a

"Gentlemen, I say ditto to Mr. Burke!"
Speech by Mr. Cruger after being returned with Mr. Burke as member for Bristol.

459b

Truth—truth all round, clearness of vision, is the most fortifying thing in the world.
 Viscount Milner. Speech on War Censorship, Canterbury, Oct. 30, 1915.*

10. POLITICAL PHRASES AND ALLUSIONS.

Peace, Retrenchment, and Reform.

"No sooner does he hear any of his brothers mention reform or retrenchment, than up he jumps."—Washington Irving: The Sketch Book: John Bull (1820).

An H. B. cartoon of November 26, 1830, represents Earl Grey as informing William IV. that his conditions are "Retrenchment, Reform, and Peace."

I am for Peace, for Retrenchment, and for Reform—thirty years ago the great watchwords of the great Liberal party.—Speech by John Bright at Birmingham, April 28, 1859.

"The three F's."

"Fair rents, fixity of tenure, and freedom of sale." The three F's were the policy of the Irish land legislation of 1881.

"Educate your masters."

Phrase used by Robert Lowe (afterwards Viscount Sherbrooke) (1811–1892).

Poll early and often.

"Vote early and vote often" was an expression, according to a speech by W. P. Miles (S. Carolina) in the U.S. House of Representatives (March 31, 1858), "openly displayed" on the election banners "in one of our northern cities."

His Majesty's Opposition.

Term applied by John Cam Hobhouse (1786–1869) to the Opposition in the British House of Commons, April 10, 1826.

What Lancashire thinks to-day, England will think to-morrow.

Nineteenth century saying, found in various forms, "Manchester" (or Birmingham) being occasionally substituted for "Lancashire."

Peace with honour.

Expression used by Lord Beaconsfield on his return from the Berlin Congress on the Eastern Question, July, 1878.

He had rather spend £10,000 on Embassies to keep or procure peace with dishonour, than £10,000 on an army that would have forced peace with honour.—Sir Anthony Weldon: The Court and Character of King James, 1650.

Register! Register! Register!

From a speech by Sir Robt. Peel at a "civic festival" (c. 1835). "Ay, register, register, register!" said the Duke. "Those were immortal words." "I can tell your Grace three far better ones," said Mr. Tadpole, with a self-complacent air. "Object, object, object!"—B. Disraeli: Coningsby, Book 2, ch. 2.

Policy of pin-pricks.

From the French expression "coups d'épingle" which seems to have been classical as early as the middle of the 18th century.

Defence not defiance.

Motto of the Volunteer Movement (c. 1852).

Three acres and a cow.

An expression often attributed to the Right

Hon. Jesse Collings, M.P. (1831–1920), who carried the Small Holdings amendment against Lord Salisbury's Government in 1886.—John Stuart Mill (Principles of Political Economy, 1848, Book 2, ch. 6, sec. 5), referring to peasant-farming in Flanders, wrote: "When the land is cultivated entirely by the spade, and no horses are kept, a cow is kept for every three acres of land."

D. Defoe (1663–1731): Tour through the whole Islands of Great Britain (published posthumously?)—suggested a provision of three acres of ground for every man in a settlement, and a certain quantity of common-land where they should have a few sheep and cows.

"Ten acres and a mule."—American phrase indicating the expectations of emancipated slaves (1862).

Latchkey franchise.

Qualification of part of a tenement as an occupier (and not as a lodger) in virtue of right of possessing a latchkey. At North Hackney Revision, 1906, many claimants to votes signed papers stating that they had latchkeys. The votes were eventually disallowed.

"Too late."

In this war the footsteps of the Allied Forces have been dogged by the mocking spectre of "Too late."—D. Lloyd George, House of Commons, Dec. 20, 1915.

The unspeakable Turk.

Expression used by Carlyle. Article on Das Niebelungen Lied. 1831.

The only good Indians I ever saw were dead.

According to Edwd. M. Ellis, A.M., who stated that he was present on the occasion, General Sheridan used these words in January, 1869, at old Fort Cobb, Indian Territory, when (after a fight) an Indian Chief, named Old Touch-away, when presented to Sheridan, said, "Me good Indian."

All political parties die at last of swallowing their own lies.

Attributed to John Arbutnot, M.D. (1675–1735), in "Life of Emerson."

The classes and the masses.

A phrase used by Mr. Gladstone.

"This new rage for rhyming badly, Which late hath seized all ranks and classes, Down to that new estate 'the masses.'" T. Moore: The Fudges in England (1835). Letter 4.

Passive Resistance.

An old expression. In Scott's Heart of Midlothian (1818) (ch. 6) he speaks of "the passive resistance of the Tolbooth-gate" as being more effective than "the active interference of the magistrates."

The Duty of an Opposition is to oppose.

Quoted by Lord Randolph Churchill.

When I first came into Parliament, Mr. Tierney, a great Whig authority, used always to say that the duty of an Opposition was very simple—it was to oppose everything and propose nothing.—Lord Stanley: Hansard's Parliamentary Debates, June 4, 1841.

460a

Are we downhearted? No!

This expression, which came into vogue in England towards the close of the General Election of Jan. 1906, seems to have originated in a speech by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain at Smethwick, Jan. 15, 1906, in which he said: "We are not downhearted, but we cannot understand what is happening to our neighbours."

The lonely furrow.

"I must plough my lonely furrow alone."—Earl of Rosebery, July 19, 1901.

Terminological inexactitude.

"It [Chinese Labour in South Africa] could not, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude."—Mr. Winston Churchill in the British House of Commons, Feb. 22, 1906. ("Times" report.)

Wait and see.

A phrase frequently used by Mr. Asquith (Premier) in reply to questions in the House of Commons, in the Session of 1910, as to the policy and intentions of the Liberal Government. On Feb. 6, 1911, speaking in the House of Commons on the Address, he said: "Well, the Estimates are not yet produced. I do not like to use language that is becoming only too familiar, but I do venture to recommend the right hon. gentleman in this, as in other matters, to—what shall I say?—cultivate the faculty of patient expectation."

"To doubt is to decide."

A phrase used by Mr. Addington, British Premier in 1802—subjected to considerable ridicule at the time.

A scrap of paper.

"I found the [German] Chancellor [von Bethmann-Hollweg] very agitated. . . . He said the

460b

step taken by his Majesty's Government was terrible. . . . Just for a word, 'neutrality,' a word which in war-time had so often been disregarded—just for a scrap of paper, Great Britain was going to make war on a kindred nation."—Despatch by Sir Edward Goschen, British Ambassador at Berlin, Aug. 4, 1914.

The large thing to do is the only thing we can do.

Woodrow Wilson, President, U.S. Message to Congress, March 5, 1914.

Some Americans need hyphens in their names, because only part of them has come over.

Id. Speech at Washington, May 16, 1914.

There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right.

Id. Speech at Philadelphia, May 10, 1915. (After the sinking of the "Lusitania.")

The thing to do is to supply light and not heat.

Id. Speech, Pittsburgh, Jan. 29, 1916.

You will always be fools; we shall never be gentlemen.

Quoted as "a classic" by Lord Fisher in "The Times," June 16, 1919, and described as "the apposite words spoken by a German naval officer to his English confrère." "On the whole," commented Lord Fisher, "I think I prefer to be the fool—even as a matter of business!"

The British Army should be a projectile to be fired by the British Navy.

Viscount Grey of Falloden. Quoted by Lord Fisher ("Memories," 1919) as "the splendid words of Sir Edward Grey."

11. FORENSIC.

The law of England is the greatest grievance of the nation, very expensive and dilatory.

Bishop Burnet's "History of his own Times" (1724).

The glorious uncertainty of the law.

First found in Macklin's Love à la Mode (1759). Afterwards used as a toast at legal dinners.—See Macklin, p. 207b.

Corporations have no souls.

Lord Chancellor Thurlow said that the corporations have neither bodies to be punished nor souls to be damned; they therefore do as they like.—Poynder's "Literary Extracts."

"They [corporations] feel neither shame, remorse, gratitude, nor goodwill."—Hazlitt: Table Talk, Essay 27 (1817).

When he [a judge] put on his robes, he put off his relation to any; and like Melchisedech, becomes without pedigree.

Fuller's "Holy State" (1642).

As guardian of His Majesty's conscience.

Lord Chancellor Thurlow's speech in his defence in the House of Lords, c. 1780 ("Butler's Reminiscences," p. 199).

Eight points of the law.

1. A good cause; 2. A good purse; 3. An honest and skilful attorney; 4. Good evidence; 5. Able counsel; 6. An upright judge; 7. An intelligent jury; 8. Good luck.

Old saying, attributed to Mr. Selwyn, a former candidate for the Chamberlaincy of the City of London.

No one could be so wise as Thurlow looked. Attributed by Lord Campbell to Fox.—See "Lives of the Lord Chancellors," Vol. 5, 661.

A silly old man who did not understand even his silly old trade.

Attributed to Lord Westbury in reference to a witness from Herald's College.

Also attributed to Lord Chesterfield, and referred to by G. B. Shaw as a saying by Whately.

13. FOLK-LORE AND WEATHER RHYMES.

Weather Proverbs are included under the general heading of Proverbs, but will be found indexed, in the General Index, under the heading "Weather Proverbs."

The red is wise,
The brown trusty;
The pale peevish,
The black lusty.

Old Rhyme.

With a red man rede thy rede;
With a brown man break thy bread;
At a pale man draw thy knife;
From a black man keep thy wife.

Guillaume de Machault (1295?-1377) in a poem
Le Remède de Fortune, states that blue means loyalty; red, ardent love; black, grief; white, joy; green, fickleness; yellow, falsehood.

The rose is red, the violet's blue,
Pinks are sweet, and so are you.

*A rhyme for St. Valentine's Day.—
Halliwell.*

The rose is red, the violet's blue,
The gilly-flower sweet, and so are you.

Said to be an Easter-day rhyme in Oxfordshire.—Halliwell.

To break a pasture will make a man,
To make a pasture will break a man.

Old Suffolk saying.

The rainbow in the morning

Is the shepherd's warning

To carry his coat on his back.

The rainbow at night

Is the shepherd's delight,

For then no coat will he lack.

See Proverbs: "The rainbow in the morning."

When the wind is in the east,
Then the fishes do bite the least;
When the wind is in the west,
Then the fishes bite the best;
When the wind is in the north,
Then the fishes do come forth;
When the wind is in the south,
It blows the bait in the fish's mouth.

*J. O. Halliwell's "Popular Rhymes."
Stated to be obtained from Oxfordshire, but to be found in a variety of versions throughout Great Britain.*

The South wind brings wet weather,
The North wind wet and cold together;
The West wind always brings us rain.
The East wind blows it back again.
If the sun in red doth set
The next day surely will be wet;
If the sun doth set in grey,
The next will be a rainy day.

*Lines by a Pessimist. Daily News,
Dec. 3, 1919.*

March winds and April showers
Bring forth May flowers. Proverbial saying.

Friday's moon,
Come when it will, it comes too soon.

*Prevalent in the North of England.—
Halliwell.*

Friday's moon,
Once in seven year comes too soon. Ib.

Saturday's new, and Sunday's full,
Was never fine and never wool. Ib.

WAIFS & STRAYS—FOLK-LORE & WEATHER RHYMES

463a

When the cuckoo comes to the bare thorn,
Sell your cow and buy your corn ;
But when she comes to the full bit,
Sell your corn and your sheep. Ib.

The robin red-breast and the wren
Are God Almighty's cock and hen.
Common throughout England. The wren was anciently called "Our Lady's Hen." See Colgrave in v. "Berchot."

A Sussex version :
Robins and wrens
Are God Almighty's friends ;
Martins and swallows
Are God Almighty's scholars.
A. S. Cooke's "Off the Beaten Track in Sussex" (1912).

Twixt Martinmas and Yule
Water's wine in every pool.
(Sc.) (Rain being then regarded as of extreme value.)

Barnaby bright, Barnaby bright,
The longest day and the shortest night ;
Lucy light, Lucy light,
The shortest day and the longest night.
Referring to St. Barnabas' Day, June 11, before the change of style, the summer solstice ; and St. Lucy's Day, Dec. 13, the winter solstice, O.S.

This was superseded after the change of style by :
St. Thomas grey, St. Thomas grey,
The longest night and the shortest day.

If it freezes on St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21) the price of corn will fall ; if it be mild, the price will rise. Old saying.

Look at the weathercock at midday on St. Thomas's Day ; the wind will remain the same for three months. Old saying.

One's unlucky, two's lucky ;
Three's health, four's wealth ;
Five is sickness, and six is death.
Rhyme as to birds (generally magpies or crows).

If the cock moult before the hen,
We shall have weather thick and thin ;
But if the hen moult before the cock,
We shall have weather hard as a block.
North of England.

When Easter falls in our Lady's lap, [March 25]
Then let England beware a rap.
See Aubrey's Miscellanies (1696).

Friday night's dream, on the Saturday told,
Is sure to come true, be it never so old.
East and West England.

Sow in the sop,
'Twill be heavy a-top. Ib.

Born of a Monday, fair in face,
Born of a Tuesday, full of God's grace,
Born of a Wednesday, merry and glad,
Born of a Thursday, sour and sad,
Born of a Friday, Godly given,
Born of a Saturday, work for your living,
Born of a Sunday, ne'er shall we want,
So there ends the week, and there's an end
on't. Brand's Popular Antiquities.

463b

Monday's child is fair in face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child works hard for its living ;
And a child that's born on Christmas Day,
Is fair and wise, and good and gay.

From Halliwell's "Popular Rhymes and Nursery Tales."

Cut them on Monday, cut them for health ;
Cut them on Tuesday, cut them for wealth ;
Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for news ;
Cut them on Thursday, a pair of new shoes ;
Cut them on Friday, cut them for sorrow ;
Cut them on Saturday, see your true love
to-morrow ;
Cut them on Sunday, your safety seek,
The devil will have you the rest of the week.
Lines on Cutting Finger-nails.—Traditional.
Friday's hair and Sunday's horn,
Goes to the D'ule on Monday morn.
—Ray's Proverbial Rhymes.

Lancashire law ;
No stakes, no draw.
This saying implies that a wager does not hold good unless stakes are deposited.

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John,
Bless the bed that I lay on ;
Four corners to my bed,
Four angels round my head,
One to watch and one to pray,
And two to bear my soul away.

J. O. Halliwell states that the first two lines were used in the time of Queen Mary, according to Ady, "Candle in the Dark," 1655.

Walk fast in snow,
In frost walk slow,
And still as you go,
Tread on your toe.
When frost and snow are both together,
Sit by the fire and spare shoe-leather.
Quoted by Swift as "a good Devonshire proverb."

In April come he will,
In May he sings all day,
In June he changes his tune,
In July he prepares to fly,
In August go he must.
Rhyme of the Cuckoo (E. of England).

In April cuckoos come,
In May he play his drum,
In June he change his tune
In July away he fly.
Midland Counties' version.

In April he show his bill,
In May he sings happy day,
In June his song he prune,
In July away he fly.
Another Midland Counties' version.

Heard in September,
A thing to remember ;
Heard in October,
You're not sober.

16. BOOK INSCRIPTIONS.

Steal not this book, for fear of shame,
For in it is the owner's name;
And when you're dead, the Lord will say,
"Where is that book you stole away?"

There are many variants of this inscription.
The last two lines sometimes read:—

And if I catch you by the tail,
You must prepare for Newgate jail.

Sometimes there are two additional lines:

And if you say you do not know,
Down to the flames you'll have to go.

Small is the wren,
Black is the rook;
Blacker the sinner
That steals this book. Traditional rhyme.

This boke is one thing,
The halter is another;
He that stealeth the one
Must be sure of the other.
Found in a copy of Aristotle, dated 1578.

He who doth this book borrowe,
And doth not bring it back,
Certes shall he have sorrowe,
And comforte he shall lack.
Probably modern.

If you this precious volume bone,
Jack Ketch will claim you as his own.
Traditional.

Steal not this book, mine honest friend,
For fear the gallows be thine end. Ib.

Hic liber ad me pertinet,
Si quis furetur,
Per collum suspendetur,
In hoc modo.
[A sketch of a gibbet follows.]

If to your hand I chance to come,
Do not forget to send me home.
Finder, whoe'er thou art,
I speak to thee unknown,

Think always, in thy heart,
All men would have their own.
In a Quakeress's Book, dated "the 26 of the 4 month, 1709."

If I him lose, and thee him find,
Pray return him unto me;
I will content thee, to thy mind,
For thy good will and courtesy;
And if my name you chance to miss,
Look underneath and there it is.
Signed MARY PLAYER (1709).

Hic liber est meus;
Testis est Deus.
Quis me queret,
Hic nomen erit.—JOHN ATKINSON (1693).

This booke is one thing,
And hemp is another;
Steale not the one,
For feare of the other;
For if you steale this booke,
It is very true
A harder thing heare after
Will ensue [to you]. MS. (about 1693).

This booke is mine, Eleanour Worcester:
An I yt loos and yow it find,
I pray yow hartely to be so kynd,
That yow will take a letel payne
To se my boke brothe [brought] home agayne.
Inscription in 15th Century Primer (Book of Devotion) at Brit. Museum. (The four lines of verse are found in many volumes of 15th century.)

This book, a child of Adam's race,
Amongst my human friends I place,
Whereof this label on his face
The symbol and the pledge is;
And all who offer him disgrace
I count as barbarous and base;
Have pity then upon his case,
And reverence his edges.
Anon. (19th Century.)

17. BELL INSCRIPTIONS.

"The Six Uses."

Men's death I tell by doleful knell ;
Lightning and thunder I break asunder ;
On Sabbath all to church I call ;
The sleepy head I raise from bed ;
The winds so fierce I doe disperse ;
Men's cruel rage I doe assuage.

Fuller's tr. of the Latin lines :

Funera plango, fulmina frango, Sabbata pango,
Excito lentos, dissipo ventos, paco cruentos.

I mean to make it understood,
That though I'm little I am good.

Great Baddow, 1781.

Ye people all, that hear me ring,
Be faithful to your God and King.

Hornchurch, 1779.

All you of Bath that hear me sound,
Thank Lady Hopton's hundred pound.

Tenor Bell, Bath Abbey.

King Edward made mee thirtie thousand weight and three.

Take mee down and wey mee and more you shall find mee.

Bell at Westminster. Gift of Edward III.

The concord of men's minds producèd me,
Like to itselfe, perfect in harmony.

Dunmow (Essex) 1671.

Placed here on high, we serve the town,
Beneath the Crown, beneath the Sky.
Differing in size, in note, and weight,
Yet, small or great, we harmonize.
With measured speech, well timed and true,
Our message due we tell to each.
Brief, clear, and bold, we say our say,
And then straightway our peace we hold.
O Mortal Race, our lesson learn ;
Each has his turn and time and place.

Colchester Town Hall (Five Bells), 1901.

When I ring, God's prayes sing :
When I toule, pray heart and soule.

17th Century.

You ringers all that prize
Your health and happiness,
Be sober, merry, wise,
And you'll the same possess.

18th Century (c. 1770).

Arma, viri, ferte arma; vocat lux ultima victos;
Reddite me Danaïs, sinite instaurata revisam Prælia; nunquam omnes hodie moriemur inulti.

—Arms, O men, bring arms; their last day calls the vanquished; let me return to the Greeks, let me see again my battles renewed; we shall never all die unavenged this day. Virgil. Æneid, 2, 668.

Arma virumque cano.—Arms and the man I sing. Virgil. Æneid, Book 1, 1.

Armīs vicit, vitiis victus est.—He [Alexander] vanquished by arms; he was vanquished by vices. Seneca.

Arrectis auribus astant.—They wait with ears pricked up. Virgil. Æneid, 1, 152.

Ars artium omnium conservatrix.—The art which is the conservator of all arts (i.e. printing).

Ars est captandi, quod nolis velle videri.—The art of obtaining is to seem to want what you do not want. Martial. Book 11, 56, 3.

*Ars est celare artem.—Art consists in concealing art. Pr.

Ars est sine arte, cujus principium est mentiri, medium laborare, et finis mendicare.—It is an art without art, the beginning of which is lying, the middle labour, the end beggary. (Applied to Alchemy.)

Ars inveniendi adolescit cum inventis.—The art of invention grows young with the things invented.

Quoted by Bacon as a Maxim.

Ars longa, vita brevis.†—Art is long, life is short. Hippocrates. Aph. 1 (translated).

Ars varia vulpis, ast una echino maxima.—The fox is versatile in its resources, but the hedgehog has one, and that the chief of all. Pr.

Arte magistra.—With art as directress. Virgil. Æneid, 8, 442; and 12, 427.

Arte mea capta est: arte tenenda mea est.—She has been obtained by my skill; by my skill she must be retained.

Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 2, 12.

Artem quævis alit terra.—Every land fosters some kind of art. (See Τὸ τέχνηον, p. 479b). Pr.

Asinus ad lyram.—An ass at the lyre. Pr. (from the Greek, p. 476a.)

Asinus asino, et sus sui pulcher.—An ass is beautiful to an ass and a pig to a pig. Pr.

* Compare Ovid's line (Ep. ex Ponto, Book 2, 10, 15): "Naso parum prudens, Artem dum tradit amandi." (Naso is scarcely judicious, when he betrays the art of loving.)

† Seneca: De Brevitate Vitæ, has this: "Illa maximi medicorum exclamatio est, Vitam brevem esse, longam artem."—That is the utterance of the greatest of physicians, that life is short and art long. Hippocrates, the famous physician of Cos, is said to have died B.C. 361, aged 99. For the Greek original, see "Ο Βίος" (p. 475a).

Asinus inter simias.—An ass among apes (an ass among fools who ridicule him). Pr.

Asperis facietis inlusus; quæ ubi multum ex vero traxere, acrem sui memoriam relinquunt.—Amused with rough jests, which, where they have much truth in them, leave behind a bitter remembrance.

Tacitus. Annals, 15, 68.

Asperitas agrestis, et inconcinna gravisque.—A rustic roughness, awkward and loutish.

Horace. Ep., Book 1, 18, 6.

Asperius nihil est humili cum surgit in altum.—Nothing is rougher than a low-bred man when he has risen to a height.

Claudian.

Aspicere oportet quidquid possis perdere.—It is well to look at whatever you may lose.

Publilius Syrus.

Assiduo labuntur tempora motu, Non secus ad flumen. Neque enim consistere flumen.

Nec levis hora potest.

—Time glides by with constant movement, not unlike a stream. For neither can a stream stay its course, nor can the fleeting hour.

Ovid. Metam., 15, 180.

Assumpsit.—He assumed or took upon himself personal responsibility.

Law.

Astra regunt homines, sed regit astra Deus.—The stars govern men, but God governs the stars.

Astræa redux.—Astræa (goddess of justice) restored as our guide.

Title of Poem by Dryden (1660.)

At hæc etiam servis semper libera fuerunt, timerent, gauderent, dolerent, suo potius quam alterius arbitrio.—But these things were ever free to slaves, that they should fear, rejoice or lament, by their own choice rather than that of any one else.

Cicero. Ep.

At ingenium ingens

Inculto latet sub hoc corpore.

—Yet a mighty genius lies hid under this rough exterior.

Horace. Sat., Book 1, 3, 33.

At jam non domus accipiet te læta, neque uxor

Optima, nec dulces occurrent oscula nati

Præripere, et tacita pectus dulcedine tangent.

—But now your home will never again receive you with joy, nor your best of wives, nor will your sweet children hasten to snatch your kisses, and thrill your heart with speechless pleasure.

Lucretius. De Natura Rerum, 3, 907.

At pulchrum est digito monstrari, et dici, Hic est!—But it is a fine thing to be pointed out by the finger, and to be spoken of, "That is he!"

Persius. Sat. 1, 28.

At vindicta bonum vita jucundius ipsa.

Nempe hoc inducti.

—Ah, but revenge is a blessing sweeter than life itself—so think the uninstructed.

Juvenal. Sat. 13, 180.

Atavis edite regibus.—O [Mæcenas], sprung from ancient kings.

Horace. Odes, Book 1, 1.

Atque utinam his potius nugis tota illa dedisset Tempora sævitiae.

—And would that he [Domitian] had rather devoted to such trifles as these, all those days of cruelty.

Juvenal. Sat. 4, 150.

Atqui vultus erat multa et præclara minantis.—Truly you had the appearance of one threatening many and excellent things.

Horace. Sat., Book 2, 3, 9.

Atria regum hominibus plena sunt, amicis vacua.—The halls of kings are full of men, but void of friends.

Seneca.

Atrocitatis mansuetudo est remedium.—Clemency is the remedy of cruelty.

Phædrus.

Auctor pretiosa facit.—The author makes [the gift or work] precious.

Ovid (adapted).*

Audacem fecerat ipse timor.—Fear itself made her daring.

Ovid. Fast., 3, 644.

Audacia pro muro habetur.—Daring serves as a wall.

Sallust. Catalina, 58. (Part of Cataline's oration to his soldiers.)

Audacter calumniare, semper aliquid hæret.—Calumniate daringly; something always sticks.

Maxim.

Audacter te vendita, semper aliquid hæret.—Praise yourself up daringly, something always sticks.

Bacon's variant of the foregoing quotation.

Audax est ad omnia, quæ amat vel odit, femina.—A woman dares all things when she either loves or hates.
